TRIBES AND CASTES

OF THE

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDIL

DY

W. CROOKE, B.A.,

IN FOUR VOLUMES.

Vol. IV.

CALCUTIA:

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDERT OF GOVERNMENT PRINTING, INDIA. 1896.

THE

TRIBES AND CASTES

OF THE

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDH.

BY

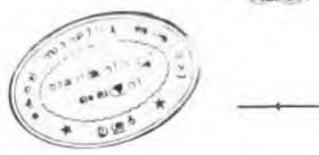

W. OROOKE, B.A.,

REMULE CIVIL SERVICE.

3040135

IN FOUR FOLUMES.

VOL. IV.

CALCUTTA:

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF GOVERNMENT PRINTING, INDIA. 1896. CALGOTTA: GOVERNMENT OF INDIA CUPTUAL PRIFITS GEFFOR, 8, TANTINGS STREET.

RAMA VARMA RESEARCH MISTITUTE. TRICHUR, COCHIN STATE-

THE

TRIBES AND CASTES

OF THE

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDH.

VOLUME IV.

M

Monas, Maunas .- A cept of Rajputs found almost exclusively in the Benares Division. According to their own account they take their name from their eponymous ancestor Maunas or Monas Rishi, Their original home is said to have been Amber or Jaypur, and the legend goes that a party of them, coming to bathe at Benares, envied the fertile plain, which is now the Ehadohi Pargana of the Mirrapur District, and conquered it from the Bhars, from whom it took its name. Their immigration from their home in Rajputana is fixed by the tribal legend at some six or seven hundred years ago. The enquiries, however, of Mr. Duthoit go to show that the Bhar rule in Bhadohi survived the Muhammadan conquest of Kanauj by some two centuries, during which it was in dependence on the Kantit Gaharwars, and the rise of the Mannas power in Bhadohi cannot be fixed with certainty before the time of Sagar Rae, whose descendant Jodh Rae, in the third generation, obtained a grant of the pargana from the Emperor Shihjahan. At one time they enjoyed considerable property, and used, it is said, to give their daughters in marriage to the ruling families of Manda and Kantit; but in the general anarchy which ensued on the downfall of the Mughal Empire, they suffered from the aggressions of more powerful neighbours, in particular the famous Balwant Sinh of Benares. The Maunas say that their Raja, Sin Bakhsh Sinh, was froudulently induced to give up to Balwant Sinh the royal grant (Shāhi farmān) by which he held the pargana from the Mughal Government. At any rate, whether this be true or not, the greater part of the Maunas territory was absorbed into the Benares Raj, and forms a considerable portion of the domains of His Highness the Maharaja of Benares. Naturally in the Mutiny the sept gave much trouble. They are now, as a rule, Vot. IV.

in great poverty, and till as tenants the lands their forefathers used to own. They are held in little estimation, and now-a-days give and take girls from the septs of the Gaharwar, Bais, and Bisen of Mirzapur and Benares. In Jaunpur they are reported to take brides from the Bisen, Raghuhansi, and Chaupat Khamb septs, and to give brides to the Raghuhansi, RajKumar, Durghansi, and Bais.

2. In Bhadohi of Mirzapur, which is one of the chief scats of the sept, the Maunas say that their original seat was Amber in Rajputâna, and some fifty generations ago some of them started on a pilgrimage to Gaya. Bhadohi was then ruled by the Bhars, and one of their Rajas ordered a Brahman, named Siva Man, to give his daughter in marriage to the son of the Raja. The Brahman appealed to many of the neighbouring Rajas for protection : but they failed him, until the party of Maunas Rajputs took up his cause and finally captured Chauthur, which was the chief stronghold of the Bhars. Thus they gained the country. Their last Rāja was Takht Sinh, who was overcome by the first Rāja of Benares. Their gotra is Maun. They take brides from the Bisen, Bais, Bachgoti, BhatKariya, Bhanwag, Rikhbansi, Raghubansi, Saunakh, and Tisshiya septs; and give girls to the Gaharwar of Manda and Bijaypur, Bachgoti, and Sombansi. The Maunas of Bhadehi do not intermarry with Baghels, as some of their brethren There are two grades in the sept-one the real Maunas, and beneath them others, who were introduced by being allowed to eat with the genuine Maunas. The latter marry in inferior septs and families.

Distribution of the Mannas Raj puts by Census, 1891.

Dis	TRICI	18.		Number.	Diei	(4)	Drs.		Number,
Agra .	•	4		10	Ballin .				287
Bånda .				2	Garakhpur				24
Allahabad				1,938	Azungsch		.6	į.	401
Вепатов				582	Faizābād	÷			1
Mirzapur			9	9,144	Sultanpur				1
Jaunpur				1,731	Barabanki				52
Ghasipur		•	4	00			TOTAL		14,939

Mongil. -A sept of Rajputs in Oudh. They are said to have preceded the Bhars. One family of them is found in Sujanpur Ta'aluqa Adharganj.

Mughul, Mughal.—One of the four great Muhammadan subdivisions known in Europe under the form Mongal. Mr. Ibbetson, writing of the Panjâb, does not attempt to touch upon "the much debated question of the distinction between the Turks and Mughuls.
In the Delhi territory, indeed, the villagers accustomed to describe the Mughuls of the Empire as Turks, used the word as synonymous with 'official,' and I have heard my Hindu clerks of Kâyasth class described as Turks, merely because they were in Government employ.
On the Biloch frontier the word Turk is commonly used as synonymous with Mughul. The Mughuls proper probably either entered the Panjâb with Bâbar, or were attracted thither under the dynasty of his successors; and I believe that the great majority of those who have returned themselves as Mughuls in the Eastern Panjâb really belong to that race." In these Provinces they say that they take their name from their ancestor Mughul Khân.

2. In the last Census they are classed under three sub-divisions : Chaghtai, Qazalbāsh, and Turkmān, Writing of Afghānistān Dr. Bellow 1 says :- "What the origin of these new claus was, whether they were conquered and converted Pathans, who became absorbed into the dominant tribe, and thus, by the mere force of numbers and other favouring circumstances of the period, gave them both their language and social code of laws; or whether they were kindred tribes of Turks imported by Sabaktakin (that is, 'the one called Sabak;' as Alaptakin, 'the one called Alap,' tabfu being the distinctive affix of the names of Turk slaves), the founder of the Turk Tatar (as distinguished from the Mongal or Mughul Tatar) dynasty at Ghazni, is not clearly ascertained. Without excluding the possibility of their increase by the occasional immigration of other kindred Turk clans from across the Oxus, it may be considered more probable that the increase in the clans of the Ghilji took place mostly by the absorption and adoption of subjugated native tribes; for we find several instances of Chaghatai Tark class living in close proximity to the Ghilji, yet quite distinct from them, and entirely ignor-Partibgark Settlement Report, 1888.

² Panid b Ethnography, paran. 506, 507.

A The Rases of Afghanistate, 101, ant of any kindred connection with them. Such Turk clans are the Bayât about Ghazni and Herât, the Cârlûgh, Chûng, and Mughai Turk (Yaka, Chirikcha, etc.) of Balkh, etc. Such also are the Mongol and Chaghatai Turk clans of Mangal, Jâji, Jadrân, Khitâi, etc., who are settled about the Pewâr and the head-waters of the Kurram river, and who were brought to these situations on the invasions of Changhis and Tymfir—the Tâtar scourges of the world during the thirteenth and fifteenth centuries. These clans, with the exception of the Jadrân, though they have almost entirely lost the typical physiognomy of their race, their mother tongue, and, indeed, everything else, but their names, which would connect them with their original stock, hold themselves entirely distinct, political relations always excepted, from the Ghiiji, who are their neighbours."

8. Other class in these Provinces are the Qazalbash or Qizil-bash, "red heads," Uzbak, Turk, Kai, Chak, Tājīk. In the Panjāb the main tribes are the Chaghtai and Barla. Some of these, especially the Chaghtai, are claimed by the Bhatti Jādons to have descended from them when they were rulers of Ghazni and Zabalistan. The last Imperial family was drawn from the Chaghtai. The Jhojha also call themselves Mughul, but they are supposed to be slaves of Mughul or low caste Hindus converted to Islām by some Mughul nobleman. They are not suffered to intermarry with the Rājput Musulmāns, or with any of the pure Muhammadan tribes."

Distribution of the Mughula according to the Census of 1891.

Dura	1074		Chaghtai.	Qaralbish.	Turkendo.	Others.	Toyal.
Dehra Dûn			108	101		93	201
Saharanpur			477	1	80	1,916	2,424
Musaffarnagar			305	16	832	578	1,731
Moerut .		+	880	5	40	1,181	2,106
Bulandshahr			780	17	9	1,657	2,463
Aligarh .			16		101	786	902
Mathura .			112	50	1.5	215	398

t Williams, Gudh Omsus Report, 76; Raja Lashbman Sinh, Bulandshahr Memo., 101, 29.

Distribution of the Maghale according to the Census of 1891-contd.

	Dist	SICT			Chaghtal	Qesnibtah,	Turkmin.	Others	TOTAL
Agra					520	26	76	1,400	3,093
Porrukhi	144			3	375	he.	27	873	1,075
Mainpur	1				100		in	117	217
Ethwah					162		9	460	631
Rtah					264	9	1.5	415	696
Barcilly					1,168		1	2,040	8,208
Bijuor					1,341	7		489	1,897
Badåun					809	26	3	418	1,456
Moradah	hd	2.			713	77	2,015	9,629	18,434
Shabjaba	npur			0	721	2	89	861	1,323
Pilibhit	÷		18	4	338	160	100	406	744
Fatehpur			1	3.1	708			594	1,302
Bånda					103	2	10	209	414
Hamîrpu	T							488	468
AllahAbá	d			7	- 62			487	529
Jhånei					65			213	278
Jalann			+		193	100	218	317	667
Lalitpor			ě.		10	110	1	63	64
Benares		4		4	123			997	1,120
Mirzapu					65		-11	265	320
Jaunpur						ies.	in	548	549
Ghazipu					227		18	319	564
Ballia					17			193	210
Geralchp	at				332	3	11	943	1,259
Basti		4			81			1,696	1,777
Ammga	rh				139		256	1,632	2,027
Kumaun					66	*14		10	10

Distribution of the Mughule according to the Census of 1891-concid.

	Dist	RIOTS.			Chaghtai.	Quanlibleb.	Turkmán.	Others.	TOTAL.
Garhwal					-			40	40
Tarki	٠				1	344	ter	143	144
Lucknow					1,370	673	37	11,143	18,923
UnAo					249	6	6	646	907
Råå Barel	i				211	27		362	600
Sltapur	+				1,084	69	60	1,225	2,428
Hardoi	٠					1	See.	427	725
Kheri	4		-		864	201	100	520	1,384
Faizābād					1,102	190		1,378	2,670
Gonda				3	780	12/	88	697	1,393
Bahraich		4	15		419	15	20	883	1,347
Sultanpur					118	300		784	902
Partá bgar	h				38		5	348	391
Bårabank					721		22.	466	1.187
		To	TAL		19,038	1,237	3,982	52,416	76,683

Mukeri.—A Muhammadan tribe, which was separately enumerated at the last Census, but which is usually treated as a sub-caste of the Banjāra, under which head some account of them will be found.

Distribution of the Mukeri according to the Census of 1891.

Distr	iore.	Number.	Diag	PRICE	To.	Numbar.
Mathura		 1	Banda			18
Farrukbābād		 79	Hamirpur		*	75
Shâhjabânpur	-	 201	Allabábád			140
Pilibhit .		18	Jhanni '			38
Cawapur .		14	Jálaun			74

Distribution of the Mukeri according to the Course of 1891 -concld.

Die	TRICE	ta.		Number.	Dist	raid	NR.		Number.
Ghāzipur			,	140	Shapur				41
Ballia .				69	Kheri .				6
Gorakhpur			-	361	Faizābād				9
Restl .		4		888	Pahraich				535
Ammgarh				1,834	SultAnper	,	+	- 2	1,032
Lucknow				273	Partabgach				150
Unito ,				13	Bărabanki				174
Rae Bareli				80		To	L		6,243

Murão 1 (Sanskrit méla, "a root," Hindi méli, "a radish").—
A tribe of cultivators and gardeners. They are really the same as the Koeri and Káchhi, with whom they agree in manners and customs.

2. At the last Census they were recorded in nine sub-castes :-Bhadauriya, who take their name from the Internal atructure. Pargana of Bhadawar, South of Agra, which also gives its name to a well-known Rajput sept; Bhagta from Bhagat, a vegetarian; Hardiya or growers of turmeric (Autdi); Káchhi, the name of a distinct tribe; Kachhwâha, which is also the title of a famous Rajput sept; Kansujiya from Kansuj; Saksenn from the old town of Sankisa in the Farrukhabad District; Sakta or worshippers of the female energies of nature (sákti); and Thâkuriya or the Thâkur sub-caste. In Psizâbid we find the Hardiya or Hardiha, who are again sub-divided into the Bhaktiya or Bhaktiha and the Saktiya or Saktiha; Kananjiya and the Tanraha. In Farrukhabad they divide themselves into the Saksens, Haldiya, and Bâghwân, or keepers of gardens (bagk). The Murao sub-divisions, according to the Census returns, are 232 in number. Those most important locally are the Bakandar and Mitha of Bareilly; the Bhukarwal of Moridabad;

Partly based on notes by M. Rim Saran Das, Fainhlad, and the Deputy Inspector of Schools, Farnikhabid.

the Purabiya of Shahjabanpur and Pilibhît; the Bâhmau of Basti; the Dhakuliya of Lucknow, who take their name from the waterlift (dkenkli) which they use; the Mewar of Sîtapur, Hardoi, and Kheri; the Pachhwahan of Kheri; the Malikpuri of Gonda; and the Kalaphartor of Bârabanki.

3. The Murãos are orthodox Hindus. In Faizābād the Bhaktibas put a necklace (kanthi) on every Religiou, enstoms, and occupation, child immediately after birth; this is done by the Saktihas immediately after initiation. Their chief deities in Faizābād are Mahābîr, Pārvati, Mahādeva, Sîtala, and Phûlmati. The Saktihas worship Kali, and two tribal godlings, Karai and Gorai. There the Saktihas and Taurahas eat goats, sheep, and pork, which the Bhaktihas, Hardihas, and Kanaujiyas refuse. Their occupation throughout the Province is gardening, cultivation, and, in particular, the growing of the more valuable crops, such as opium, tobacco, sugarcane, vegetables, etc. They are a most industrious, hardworking, quiet people, and about the most thriving class of agriculturists in the Province.

Distribution of Murdos according to the Census of 1891.

Dis	Diseriors.	ż			.erinusbadi	Ebagta.	Hazdlya	Klobbl.	Kochbwiba.	Remodize.	високия.	Sekte.	,egiroziadT	Others.	,JATOT
Dehra Důn .				17	1	1	260	100	E	36	1	1		529	706
Sahāraupur .						1	1	+	(4)	10	1	i	1	29	40
Muzaflarnagar		•		*	:		1		1	60		1	I	9	0
	ż				1	1	1	1		ŧ	i	i	1	13	13
Belandshafe .			•		i	40	1	1	城县		1	1	1	614	614
				•		1	36	1	17 (E)			:	1	1,326	1,361
	٠	*			:	:	1	-	4		E	:	ŧ	9	13
				7.	184	-	10,823	1,412	1,234	1	54,634	ī	:	2,838	71,725
				*	1	1		1	1	:	:	:	Ŧ	30	8
		•	٠	*		:	6,839	8,843	776	3	74,463	1	į	573	88,454
		*		•	ŧ	;	1,739	1,234	46	11	893	;	1	9,974	13,850
Shahjahanpur				•	1,429		4,347	1	7,672	251	13,491	į	I	1,160	28,350

Distribution of Murdos according to the Cenear of 1891-concid.

Toral.	26,134	250	17,702	2,143	86	13,235	14	57 50	652	32,948	2,720	16,396	4,534
Others.	4,343	26	2,150	455	16	748	14	82	143	1,860	40	186	274
agitededT	1		1	$2	1	1	1	-	:	1	1	10,044	356
Sthia.	1	i		67	4	1,438	1	1	:	1	1	ŧ	;
Soksons.	11,270	3	$;	i	1	;	1	1	1	2,183	ŧ	1
Renadiya	00	215	11,255	106	-	10,028	1	1	346	1,960	1	4,460	8,843
Касиридра	3,385	G	1	22	100	1	9	1	1	1	1	25	I
Kachhi.	2,191	1	4	ı	- 1	-	1	1		i	10	109	1
Hardiya.	3,066	O)	4,280	669	-	73	-1	1	200	24,478	541	189	09
Bhagta.	i	:	1	0	ŧ	695	:	1	105	4,650	ī	1	1
Bhadautiya.	1,570	1	i	:	i	1	1	1	:	;	:	:	i
			٠					•	•		•	•	•
	4											٠
				,					è				•
10#8.
Diersicss.						٠			•	+
	Pilibask	Сажирах	Fatebour	Skinds .	Bamirpor	Allahabbad	Jihrei .	Jampur	Gorakhpur	Basti .	Tarfii .	Lucimow	Unito .

664,916	67,693	33,971	6,501	168,708	119,594	13,077	12,000	230,558	28,134	980'9		TOTAL	F
22,933	900	673	1	-	16,230	1	1	6,540		i				٠	BåraBanki
26,833	1,533	1	3,180	1	12,589	10	622	3,818	651	1	٠				Partibgarh
43,478	2,016		1,274		2,799	03 03 03	242	35,354	1,759	ŧ	*				Salitapar
25,935	525	335	1		8,384	P	23	16,644	1		4	٠			Babraich
46,760	1,192	1		1,818	11,479	1	1	82,278	1	3.	•				Genda .
_	361	ŧ	570	•	4,410	3	ī.	25,664	4,713	1	+				Pairshad
35,863	16,227	600'9	1	1	11,842	187	25	1,307		63			*		Khuri .
15,901	999	1	1	1	74	1	:	:	15,233	1					Hardoi
88,811	15,656	16,582	1	E	6,717	ŧ	644	818	1	1	•	٠			Shapur
50,591	1,076	1	1	1	8,964	1	134	40,373	44	1				•	Rad Bareli

Muriya, Muriyari.—An endogamous sub-caste of Mallah. Dr. Buchanan calls them Muriyari Malas, and says they came from the upper banks of the Ganges. Their only tradition is that their progenitor was a certain Kaklas, who came from the South country. Their social position is much the same as that of Kurmis and Koeris, and Brahmans will take water and certain kinds of sweetments from their hands. Those in Bhagalpur, who have taken to cultivation, call themselves Maghaiya or men of Magadha, and profess to look down on the boating and fishing members of the caste, whom they represent as having come from the North-West Provinces.

Musahar. - A Dravidian jungle tribe found in the Eastern districts of the Province,1 Mr. Nesfield, in his elaborate monograph on the tribe contained in Volume LXXXVI of the Calcutta Heview, prefers to call them Mushers, and remarks that the ordinary derivation of the word, as meaning "rat-catcher," is probably incorrect, as "rat-catching" or "rat-cating" is by no means the peculiar, or even a permanent, characteristic of the tribe; and the name in Upper India at least is pronounced by the natives of the country as Mushera and not as Musahar (" rat-taker") or Musaha ("rat-killer"). "In an old folk tale, which has recently come to my knowledge, the name is made to signify 'flesh-secker' or 'hunter' (being derived from water, 'flesh,' and hers, 'seeker'), and a legend is told as to the event which led to the tribs being driven to maintain itself by hunting wild animals. Probably, however, both derivations are funciful Hindi versions of a name which is not of Hindi origin. " Mr. Nesfield's account of the Musehars, however interesting and complete, must be accepted so far with caution, as he seems to have included among them the aggregate of the Dravidian tribes who inhabit the Vindhya-Kaimur plateau and the valley of the Son with the hill country to the South of that river. Mr. Risley 5 rightly prefers to call them Musahar, The Mirzapur tribe have the following legend to explain their origin: When [|] Eastern India, I, 172.

[:] Rialay, Tribes and Castes II, 109, sq.

³ These, or some of the kindred Dravidian races of the Vindhya razgo, are probably those referred to in the Ain i Akberi (Jarrett's Translation, II, 189) as people in the vicinity of Chunar "who go maked, living in the wilds, and subsist by their hows and arrows and the game they kill."

Calculto Review, LXXXVI, 2. Tribes and Castes, II, 113.

Paramesar created the first man of each caste, he gave each a horse to ride on, and a tool to work with. The others took each his tool and mounted his horse; but the Musahar began to dig a pair of holes in the belly of his horse in which he might fix his feet as he rode. Paramesar saw his folly and ordered that his descendants should live on rats, which they should dig out of the earth. When Paramesar had finished eating, the Musahar began to lick his leaf platter (patari). Seeing this, Paramesar said: "These are low people. They shall always lick the platter;" and so they have been degraded ever since. In connection with this Mr. Nesfield notes that the horse is a taboord animal to the genuine Musahar, as the ass is to the Dom, the dog to the Bāwariya, the sheep to the Kharriyas of Manbhām, and the pig to the Musalmān."

2. Mr. Nesfield quotes several interesting legends to explain the origin of the tribe. They are called Traditions of origin. Banmanush or "man of the forest;" Decsiya, from their great sneester Deosi; Banraj or "king of the forest;" Maskhan or "eater of meat." Sometimes a Musahar will say that his is a sub-division of the Ahly tribe, but, in point of fact, they are the hereditary enemies of Ahirs, as all their legends testify, and many are the petty raids they have made against them for the possession of cattle and forest.2 One legend traces their origin to the Chero tribe: "At the foot of the Pipri wood lived a Chero warrior and king named Makara Durga Rac. He levied tribute from the pessantry on the Ganges plain near Chuniz. At a distance of twenty or thirty miles on the North bank of the river lived, in the fort of Gaura, an Ahir, named Lorik, who possessed large herds of cattle. Between the two princes there had been a longstanding friendship : the bond of union was a man named Sanwar, who, with his twin-brother Subchan, had been deserted by his mother immediately after their birth. Sanwar was reared by Lorik's mother as her own child; and Subchan, the other orphan, was similarly adopted by Birmi, the wife of Makara, the Chero king. But the friendship was broken when Lorik in search of adventures left Gaura and went on a distant expedition to Hardi, a city much further East, with his mistress whose husband was still alive. Meanwhile, Sanwar remained in charge of the cattle at a pasturage called Boha.

¹ Lac sit., 26.

² Nosfiold, loc. cit., 3.

¹ For the regular Lorik legend, see under Aher.

- 8. "When Lorik had been absent for twelve years, the mother of the woman who had eloped with him presented herself before Makara, and, throwing a basketful of gold before his feet, implored him to avenge the insult. She showed him how easy it would be to make a sudden descent on Boha and catch Sanwar unawaree, and how he could then cut off the head of Sanwar as a substitute for that of Lorik, and capture the deserted wife of Lorik in revenge for the capture of her own daughter. The Chero king hesitated to incur the resentment of Lorik, but yielding to the solicitations of his wife Birmi, and after sacrificing five boys to his guardian goddess, he set out against Sånwar, taking with him Deosi, the bravest and most warlike of his seven sons. But Sanwar, as it happened, had left Boha for Gaura immediately before Makara arrived there with his forces. So the watchmen and keepers of the cows were left defenceless, and were without a leader when Makara commenced his attack. These were soon defeated, and the cows were about to be seized and driven to Pipri as booty, when the balls turned round and, making a joint attack against the enemy, drove him back to his own side of the river,
 - 4. " After sacrificing seven more boys, and thus making sure of the help of his goddess, Makara made a second attack on Boha, and, after killing Sanwar in single combat, carried off his head as a trophy. The cattle and Gaura, the stronghold of Lorik, fell into the hands of Makara. On learning this news, Lorik determined to revenge himself on the Chem king, and attacked Pipri, which he was unable to capture until one of his men entered the fort in disguise and drugged the liquor of the Cheros at the Holi festival, on which Lorik entered the place and massacred Makara and all his subjects. At the time of this disaster, Deosi, son of Makara, happened to be absent, and being taunted by his elder brother, Shyamjit, with deserting his father in his extremity, he was expelled by his family and driven to become a flesh seeker or hunter in the jungle, and was known as Musahar. Hence his descendants are called Decsiya, and, to the end of his life, he continued to attack the Ahirs : hence the traditional enmity between the castes; and the proverb Jab tak jiwé Dessiya, Ahir na chajé gáé: 'As long an a Dessiya is alive, the Ahir will get no good out of his cows.'

¹ Hardi also appears in the Bengal legend, and the woman is called Chankyin,— Cunningham, Archaelogical Reports, XVI, 28.

- 5. "Then he invented the digging instrument (gahdāla, gadhals), characteristic of the tribe, and with this he one day slew Lorik. but was himself killed by Shyamjit, son of Sanwar. Near the ruins of Pipri, at the confluence of two rivers, and in the very middle of the stream, there is an image carved out of a natural monolith of the goddess Behiya, to whom Makara sacrificed-first five and afterwards seven boys, -and who was once the guardian goddess of Pipri. In her right hand she holds a dagger, sword, and in her left the half of a human skull for holding charcoal, All this is carved out of stone; a long red tongue projects from her mouth, smeared with the blood of human victims. According to the Musahar legend, she was originally the guardian goddess of Sanwar, the elder brother of Lorik; but when Makara, the Chero, had won her over to his own side by the sacrifice of so many boys. and when Sanwar had been slain, she left Gaura, the house and stronghold of the Ahles, and took up her residence in Pipri under the patronage of the Cheros." I
- 6. The legend further relates "that when Pipri, in its turn, was captured by Lorik and ploughed up with asses, she fled out of the fort to escape the threatened indignity, and posted herself in midstream in the confluence of the two rivers, where she still remains, nursing her wounded pride. The natives round Pipri now call her by the name of Nikundi, and she is doubtless one of the numerous forms of the death goddess Kali. Pipri is now uninhabited, and has been so ever since it was ploughed up with asses by Lorik, the Ahir. No Ahir, or other Hindu, will live in it. But to Musahars it is sacred, as Gaya to a Buddhist, or Mount Athos to a Greek. Every Musahar (unless long separation by time and place has made him forget the place in which his ancestors were born, and from which they were banished) would see Pipri if he could before he dies, and would like to have his corpse thrown into the river by which the fort is surrounded. Meetings of the tribe are stealthily held here at midnight, and the imagination is left to guess at the orgies calebrated at such gatherings. Musahars attempt even to live there. But the Ahirs of the neighbourhood combine together to expel them, and thus the old traditions are kept alive." 2 [!] Nonfield, loc. cit., 12, ay.

Newfiold, Inc. cit., 7 a q.

7. By another legend, "Musahars are a rejected offshoot from Chhatris, as, by the previous one, they are a rejected offshoot from Ahirs. Between Chandels (as the story runs, and so far the story is correct) there was deadly and unceasing warfars. At last all the Chandels were slain except a single woman, who escaped and fled into the forest. Her son became the founder of the tribe called after him Banmanush or Musahar. But, as he could not prove his origin from the Chandel Chhatri, neither he nor his descendants have been admitted into the Chhatri fraternity."

S. Another legend again is told by the Brahmans: "Arjuna, one of the five heroes of the Mahabharata, had retired temperarily into the forest to meditate on the 108 names of Siva. In order to test the steadfastness of his devotion and tempt him to break the current of his thoughts, the god caused a wild boar to run in front But Arjuna, notwithstanding his passion for hunting of him. wild game, was proof against the temptation, and completed his devotions before he got up to seize his how and arrow. The boar, on being chased by Arjuna, led him on through the bushes till he reached a hermit's hut, where Siva and his wife Parvati had already seated themselves in bodily form, in the disguise of a Savar and Savari : he holding a galidata (the Musahar implement) and she supporting a basket on her head. Arjuna and the Savar both commenced pursuing the boar, and when the animal had been hunted down and killed, a contention arose as to who had the right claim to it. It was agreed that the matter should be decided next day by a wrestling match, Arjuna wrestled with the disguised god all the day till sundown, when he pleaded that he must go and repeat his evening devotions : to which his antagonist consented. Through the intensity of these devotions it dawned on him that he had been wrestling, not with a Savar, but with the divine being himself disguised as a Savar, on which he was now meditating. Returning to the hermit's hut, where the disguised Siva still was, he threw himself at the feet of his divine antagonist, received a blessing, and returned to his four brethren. Now, in the bermi-

Whom Mr. Nonfield would identify with the Chero.

Nessald, loc. cit., 14.
These westling matches with divine beings are common in felklore; 4.9.,
Jacob.—See Conway, Demonstropy, I, 280; II, 184.

tage where these events took place, there was a maiden of unknown parentage, who used to wait on the hermit and prepare his food; and whom the hermit loved and cherished as a daughter. maiden had just completed her period, and had gone, as the custom is, to bathe and purify herself in the waters of the adjoining river. On her return to the hermitage she found Siva seated there in the disguise of a Savar, with Parvati by his side in the disguise of a Savari. The eye of the god fell on her. From the glance of that eye she became pregnant, and gave birth in due course to twins, one a male and the other a female, who here an exact resemblance to the Savar and Savari whom she had seen in the hermitage. The hermit, judging from the uncouth features and dark complexion of the babes that she had been guilty of unchastity with some wild man of the woods, sent her out of his hermitage, From the two children whom she had borne, one a male and the other a female, sprang the Musahar tribe, the men of which are still noted for using the gabdala and the women for carrying baskets."1

9. These legends are interesting as illustrating the connection between the Musahar, Chero, and Savar or Scori tribes. It is also curious to mark the survival of the custom of human sacrifice to the aboriginal gods; and the traditional descent of the casts from a female ancestress, with which Mr. Nesfield compares the descent of the Kanjar tribe from Nathaiya, the husbandless mother of their deilied hero Mana, and of the Aryas themselves from Aditi, the great mother of gods and men.* We may also note the tolerance of intercourse between brother and sister which marks a very carly social stage,

10. Mr. Nestield divides the tribe into three sub-tribes, which do not intermarry or eat with each other, Tribal organization. These are the Jangali or Pahari, "men of the forests and mountains," who have maintained the largest share of their primitive speech and customs and who stand entirely alcof from their descendants in the open plain, whom they regard as degenerate; the Dehâti or Dehi, who have become partially Hinduised and live within reach of settled and semi-civilized communities; the Dolkarha, who have a peculiar occupation, for which they are disowned and condemned by their brethren, viz., that of carrying palanquins (doli) for hire, whence they obtain their name, present the tribe is clearly in a state of flux, and the more Hinduised branch of the tribe in Mirzapur have now the following occupational exogamous septs-the Khadiha, who work at carrying manure (khad); the Bhenriha, who say they take their name from living together in the jungles like sheep (bkenr) in their pen; the Kharwara, who say they are so called because they collect grass (thar) and make platters (danna, patars) of leaves; the Kuchbandhua, who make the brush (kuncha, Sanskrit kuncha) used by weavers in cleaning thread; and the Rakhiha, who are said to derive their name because they cower in the ashes (rakk) during cold weather. Again, among the Musahars who live near towns, we find in Mirzapur two endogamous sub-divisions : Dhuriya, "men of the dust;" and Jaiswar, a name common to many low oastes, and said to be a local term derived from their supposed connection with the town of Jais in the Rae Bareli District of Oudh,

¹ Nonfield, los. oit., 15, 39.

^{*} Labbook, Origin of Civilization, 146, sq.

* Sec Instances collected in Westermarck, Wistory of Hussan Merriage, 290, sqn. VOL. IV.

11. As regards the division of the tribe into palanquinbearers and men of the jungle, Mr. Nesfield quotes a legend that a Musahar, named Anseri, who lived on the Kantit estates in Mirzapur, used to work as a field watchman, but he and his sons, in the absence of the regular bearers (Kahdr), were once forced to carry a litter in a marriage procession, and were expelled by his brethren. Ansari, the reputed founder of this sub-caste, is now beginning to supersede Decsiya, the eponymous leader, and this branch is beginning to take to fishing. Mr. Nesfield assumes that Ansiri means the divider (ansa meaning "half"), and hence he was the man who broke up the tribe into two halves-the Dolkarha, on one side, and the Bindrabani or Banmanush, on the other. In Bengal, the organization of sub-castes and sections is much more elaborate, but there appear to be only two real sub-castes which are of local origin: the Tirhutiya and Maghaiya, who take their name from Tirhût and Magadha. According to Mr. Nesfield, the Dolkarha eat the flesh or carrion of horses and rear fowl, whereas the Bindrahanis whether of the hills or plains, do not touch either. The complete

Loc. cit., 230, 29.

Census returns show 137 sub-divisions. Many are borrowed from Råjput and other tribes, such as Ahîr, Bachgoti, Baghel, Bais, Chandel, Chauhân, Dabgar, Donwâr, Dor, Gabarwâr, Gusâin, Gwâl, Gwâlbans, Kewatiya, Kharbind, Kharwâr, Khatri, Lodh, Palwâr, Raghubansi, Râwat. With these are other local groups, such as Bijaypuriya, Bindrabâsi, Bishnpuriya, Ghâzipuriya, Jaiswâr, Kanaujiya, Purabiya, Sarwariya. Those of most local importance are the Bankhadwa, Chauhân, Jangali, Jaiswâr, and Mughra of Jannpur, and the Baghochhiya of Gorakhpur.

12. In Mirzapur, though the internal organization of the tribe seems to be very unsettled, it appears that the Khadiha, Kharwara, and Kuch Bandhua are exogamous and intermary on equal terms. Similarly, the Bhenriba and Rakhiha intermary. This rule of exogamy is reinforced by the prohibition against marrying the daughter of the maternal unole, sister, or father's sister.

Mr. Nesfield 1 states the rule of exogamy as follows :- "On the mother's side, a girl cannot be given in marriage to the son of her mother's sister, or of her mother's brother. On the father's side, she cannot be given to the son of her father's sister or of her father's brother, or to the son or grandson of any of her father's aunts or uncles. Thus, on the mother's side, the prohibition goes back to only one generation, and on the father's to two." On the other hand, among the more Hindwised codogamous sub-castes, the Dhuriya and Jaiswar in Mirzapur, the rule appears to be that the descendants of the maternal grandfather (adne) and that of the father's sister's bushand (phapha) are barred. At the same time they say that they intermarry with agnates or cognates after five or six generations, or when all remembrance of relationship has been lost. They have a tribal council (panchayat), presided over by a hereditary president (chaudhari). The offences enquired into are charges of adultery and fornication. Inter-tribal infidelity is punished by both parties being fined. The fine is heavy-liquor, pork, rice, and pulse to the value of $80; eight annas worth of tobacco; and one rupce's worth of hemp (gdwia). Connection with a man or woman outside the tribe involves excommunication, and such persons are called "those outside the tribal mat" (43) bakar).

Lee. vil., 232.

18. Among some of the Mirzapur Musahars, the rule appears to be that, if husband or wife indulge in Widow marriage and divorce. habitual adultery, either can divorce the other with permission of the council. According to Mr. Nesfield, "Divorce, except for the one offence of infidelity, is not practised or tolerated. Such an offence very rarely occurs; and the habitual chastity of one partner ensures that of the other. If, however, a wife is accused of unchastity by her husband, and has been declared guilty by the assembly, her position is one of great difficulty. No married man can take her in addition to his own wife, for bigamy is disallowed. No unmarried man, or widower, can take her of his own free will, without incurring the penalty of excommunication. A man cobabiting with such a woman could, of course, retire with her and live in a state of isolation in the corner of some jungle, as some couples do from choice; but if he sought to ally himself to one or two other households for mutual aid and protection, he would for some time be rejected altogether, and could only obtain admission at last by incurring what is to him the heavy penalty of banqueting the other households for several days in succession. The separation of man and wife is so much disliked and discouraged by tribal opinion that a wife cannot be divorced, except on the most direct proof of guilt, or by a successful appeal to some ordeal, if the accuser is rash enough to expose himself to such an uncertain test. Frivolous charges, or improbable suspicions, if the husband is so imprudent as to bring them before an assembly, are dismissed with contempt, and the accuser is booted for his pains. Supposing, however, that unchastity is proved, and a sentence of divorce is pronounced by the assembly, the ceremony by which divorce is effected is as follows: An earthen pot is p'aced between the husband and wife, and an assembly is called to witness it. After it has been lying there for some time, the man gets up and breaks it with the tribal tool, indicating thereby that the union between them is broken beyond repair. This ceremony is called khapparkuchi or breaking the pot."1 There appears to be a difference of practice as regards the levirate. Among some of the Mirzapur Musahars the younger brother of the deceased husband can claim the widow. If he abandons his claim and she marries an outsider, the late husband's brother has the right to the custody of the male children while the female children go with the mother. According to Mr. Nesfield, however, the widow, while she is still young enough to re-marry, has no claim upon the younger brother of the deceased husband, nor has he upon her. If she comes to terms with some widower who desires to re-marry, the union is sealed by them by simply cating and drinking together in the presence of witnesses who are invited to share in the repast.

Loc. cil., 236, 17.

14. Among some of the Mirzapur Musabars, the marriage is arranged by the brother-in-law of the Custome of matriage. boy. The father of the bride then comes to the bridegroom's house with three or four relatives with a rupee and a quarter and a dish to perform the betrothal (burrekki kurna), a square (chask) is made in front of the hut, and five platters (danna) are filled with liquor and placed in the square. The two fathers sit in the square opposite each other. The fathers change platters five times and drink the contents. The clansmen are then treated to liquor, and get a feast of pork and rice. Some of the more Hinduised Musahars pay a Pandit four annas for fixing a lucky day before the wedding. Five days before the wedding day, they have the ceremony of the lucky earth (malmangara).2 On the same day the marriage shed (maare) is put up. It consists of a bamboo at each of the four corners, and in the middle a bamboo near which is placed a representation of some parrots (mga) sitting on a branch. Near this is fixed, on a platform made of the lucky earth, the sacred jar (kalsa), which is decorated with mange leaves, and over it is placed a saucerful of pulse (urad) and a lighted lamp. The bride is bathed in a mixture of cards and water in which the bridegroom has been first bathed. At the bride's door, her father werships the feet of the bridegroom (pair psja). Some curds and treacle are sent from the bride's house for the bridegroom, but he only touches it with his tongue. The bridegroom at the actual service marks the ploughshare fixed in the middle of the marriage shed with red lead, and then applies it to the parting of the bride's hair. They, then, with their garments tied, walk five times round the ploughshare, while the bride's brother pours a little panched rice into a winnowing fan which the bridegroom holds.

¹ Loc. cit., 237.

² For this ceremony, see Bhusso, para 14.

15. Next morning his father shakes the pole of the marriage shed, and the bride's father has to give him a present (mduro hildi). One special portion of the ceremony is that the bride's mother takes the pair away into a field at some distance, and warns the husband to treat his wife for the future with consideration. During this exhortation, the bride is supposed to weep violently. and the shaking of the pole of the pavilion are probably survivals of marriage by capture. When the bride comes home, her sutrance is blocked by her husband's sister, and then she has to cook for all the relatives. Next day, as is usual with these tribes, the marriage jar (kalsa) and festoons (bandaswar) are thrown into a neighbouring stream. The jar is taken out, refilled with water, and brought home. With this water the bride makes some mud plaster and constructs a little shrine, at which she offers a small sacrifice to the evil spirits which live in the old trees about the village. ordinary coremony thus described is called charhanna. Besides this are the dola, which is done by poor people, where there is no ceremony at the bride's house and the girl is merely brought home and the clausmen fed, and gurdwat, when two people exchange sistors.

16. The ceremony which Mr. Nesfield I describes is a rude form of the dola marriage above described : "The girl sets out to the house of the affianced bridegroom, accompanied by her parents, or by any other male or female relatives who may be invited to go Previous to their arrival at the bridegroom's hut, a fowl's egg is placed at the entrance. The youth to whom she is to be married then comes out to receive her. The girl is presented to him by her mother. Taking her by the hand, and holding her hand firmly in his own, he leads her up to the mouth of the hut, and breaks the egg with his foot. On his completing this act (which he can only perform when holding her hand, so that it may be considered a joint action), the company present raise a simultaneous shout of ku / which means 'hurrah!' By holding her hand firmly in his own, he signifies that he has accepted her. The Hindu ceremony of pani grahana, usully regarded as a purely Aryan rite, may perhaps after all be of non-Aryan origin. breaking the fowl's egg with his foot while he is in the act of holding her hand, he signifies that he has renounced all desire for any other woman; and she, by allowing him to hold her hand while he performs this act, signifies to him and to the company that she, on her part, has renounced all desire for any other man; for the fowl, it will be remembered, is an animal which Musahars do not rear, and which they avoid almost as scrupulously as the horse. The girl is then made to enter the hut, the youth directing her to the door. On entering the but she takes hold of the feet of the youth's mother and touches them with her forehead, signifying by this that she intends to do honour to her son as his wedded wife. The mother-in-law thou gives her blessing in the following words (some of which are of Hindu and others of the Musahar language): Bld magui makarin kito sokāgin ramali kanto rasa kio : 'Remaining in the blissful state of marriage, do thou give delight to thy husband." The youth then leaves the hut, the bride remaining with her newly made mother-in-law. This closes the first part of the ceremony.

Lou, cit., 226.

17. "The next part begins with the cooking of a kind of rice (which, in the Musahar language, is called kuth) into a paste or gruel thin enough to be drunk. This decection is poured into cups made of the leaves of the Makal tree, one cap being provided for each adult present, including the bride and bridegroom. Here it should be understood that rice is the sacred grain among several of the Kol tribes, a sanctity which it shares with barley in Hindu or Brahmanical marriages." When the rice paste or gruel is ready, and each Makal cup has been filled, the company are made to sit round in a ring, and the bride is brought out of the but and made to take her seat in the middle with the bridegroom. The bridegroom then kisses her on the mouth in token that he is to be her husband: and she in turn kisses his feet, and strokes his back up and down with her hand, in token that she is to be his and will tend him as a dutiful wife. This ceremony is called makhra chumba

Euthi is really a willat (panicum millare).

^{5&}quot; No sanctity attaches to wheat in Hindu marriague : but rice and burley are indispensable in such expensiones, and little branches of mango. Wheat is nowhere, nor are any other grains, but rice and burley, recognized at such times. Barley is frequently siluded to in the Vedas as the fool of the Aryas. Rice and imago are indigenous to India. The most natural inference to be drawn from this is thus wheat found its way into India at a later date, but was anable to deprive the older grain (rice) of its already acquired sanctiby." On the sacrificial use of barley, see Schrader, Prehistoric Anti milion, 292.

('kissing the mouth'), or much dekhua ('seeing the face'), or tar pherua ('moving the hand up and down'). When the pair have given this public token that each has accepted and appropriated the other, the cups are distributed, one to each person, and every person present, including the bride and bridegroom, swallows the contents of his own cup. Immediately after this, the following couplet is repeated in unison by all the company, excepting only the bride and bridegroom themselves, to whom the words are addressed: Kutki ki pick bandi, makul kā danna, Bodi beda byāh bāyau lena na dena: 'The rice paste has been prepared in the Makul cup; the maid and the youth are married—no giving or taking.' Then there is a general shout of kul or 'hurrah!' which means that the ceremony is completed.

18. "It seems most probable that each of the two rites described above was originally a complete marriage ceremony by itself, but they have now been so long associated in practice that neither could be safely omitted. The blessing pronounced by the bridegroom's mother on the bride at the close of the first rite implies that she (the bride) is now fully married. 'Do thou give delight to thy husband.' Similarly the words spoken by the witnesses at the close of the second ceremony imply that there is nothing left to complete the validity of the marriage. 'The rice paste has been eaten; the youth and girl are married; hurrah! ' What gives the binding force in the first ceremony is the joining of hands, while the groom breaking the eggs, and the formal reception inside the bridegroom's house or but, the deductio in downm, as the Romans would have called it, form a parallel ceremony of their own. What gives the binding force in the second ceremony is the fact of the bride and bridegroom eating together some rice paste or gruel cooked in the bridegroom's own fire; and this the Romans would have identified with a marriage rite of their own, known as conforreatio." The prominent part taken by the mother on both sides is taken by Mr. Nesfield to be a survival of the matriarchy.1 At marriages, Musahars pay worship to Decei, the male ancestor and founder of the tribe, and sometimes a piece of cloth with some sweetmeats is set aside in honour of Savari, their more remote female ancestor, or to Mother Bansapti, their great goddess and protector. In the worship of Devi it is, again, the mother of the bridegroom who acts as priestess and sacrificer; and, again, it is rice which is used as the sacred grain. The first act in this worship is to take some unhusked rice, remove the husk with her own hand, grind the grain, mix it with water, knead it, and cook it into a pancake. All this and whatever follows must be done with the right hand only. The paneake so cooked is then besmeared with honey, the wild honey which Musahars are so clever in collecting from the woods, and which is, therefore, a fit offering to the deified ancestor from whom they learnt the art. Taking this pancake with her, together with some rice beer, a piece of yellow cloth, some more honey, some wild fruits and flowers, some date grass, and a live kid or lamb, she proceeds to the clay figure or mound intended to repre-Then, after sprinkling some river water in front of sent Deosi. the figure or mound in order to purify the spot (for Musahars, like Hindus, are worshippers of rivers, and believe in the purifying influence of their water), she deposits all her offerings, except the kid or ram, on a plate or plates made of Makul leaves. then strikes pure and now fire by the sacred process of rubbing one stick on another, and with this fire she cooks the offerings. object in thus cooking the offerings is to enable the deified Deosi to inhale the scented smoke, a vaporous invisible being like Deosi, being not fit to inhale any but vaporous substances.* She then decapitates the goat with a single blow of the axe, and places the bleeding, uncooked head as an offering of blood and life before the image. Then, touching the earth with the forehead, she repeats or sings the following four lines (every word of which, except the second, is in the Musahar language) :-

¹ He quotes similar customs among the Kura of Sarguja from Dalton, Ethnology, 284.

Deosi baba kit timro magnu makarin Indra kadariya potis ri. Boglo pokpa dudkati chimla niberi kit timri boglo pokpari, Popaki imiriya chimla chimli thammo ri,

Kemali Indea hadariya hutmu chimlo teplia kero ri:

• Come into the world, O Father Deosi! from the palace of Indra-Eat food cooked by the mother of the bridegroom; come and cat the food.

Having eaten these offerings, bestow thy blessing on the bride and bridegroom;

For this, see Korsa, para. 19.

² This is exactly the idea of the Homeric sacrifices—Hind, I, 317: "High rose to hance the savoury steam and the carls of wreathed smoke."—Blackie's tunelation.

Then return to the palace of Indra! O ancestor! and behold again the dances of the dancing-girls.'

"The singing or intenation of these words completes the ceremony. The carcase of the victim is then carried back to the hut, where it is cooked in the evening for the marriage feast, with which the day is brought to a close. The bride and bridegroom are the most honoured guests in this banquet, and the festivities of the day generally close with some singing and music after Musahar fashion.
Next morning the newly-wedded pair quit the paternal hut or cave and go out into the forest to seek their fortunes together and found an independent home."

20. Unlike many of the kindred tribes, the Musahars have protecttive ceremonies during pregnancy. When the Birth coremonies. pregnancy is announced, a sacrifice of pork and liquor is offered to Mahabali, a sort of ill-defined tribal god, who may perhaps be identical with Deosi. A cook and spirits are offered to Pahlwan, "the wrestler," who is considered an evil spirit (bbil), some betel and sweetmeats to the goddess Philman, and a young ram to the Baghaut, or shrine of a person killed by a tiger. The customs, as in the case of marriage, differ in the two divisions of the tribe. Among the Musahars of the plains the mother, during delivery, sits on two bricks or stones, and it is immaterial what direction she faces. The cord is cut by the Chamarin midwife and buried on the spot where the child was born, a fire being lighted over it. the sixth and twelfth day occumonies (chhathi, barahi) performed in the usual way. Among the more primitive branch of the tribe, as described by Mr. Nesfield," "As soon as labour commences, a fire is lighted near the woman and kept burning till the labour is over. Into this fire, rice, grain, and rice straw are immodiately thrown; and as soon as the child is born, its body is gently rubbed over with the ashes by the woman who acts as midwife the child's paternal nunt. The cord, as soon as it is cut, is put with the after-birth into another fire kept burning at the door of the hut or cave : a curious analogy to which is furnished in certain Irish folk-sayings current at the present day, in one of which it is said that 'an after-birth must be burned to preserve the child from the fairies, ' the fairies being, in this instance, evil-hearted goblins whose propensities are the same as those of the Indian bhills. The hair of a bear and a slip of wood torn from an dean or deodds tree are kept inside the hut, so long as the woman and child remain there. For one whole day and night at least a peacock's feather is dropped occasionally into the fire, which is still kept burning at the mouth of the hut. From the second to the tenth day, if the child is a male, or to the fifteenth, if it is a female, some powder of the burnt chisaunji nut is rubbed occasionally on its body: the longer period being deemed necessary for the female on account of its power of resistance to malignant spirits being considered loss. When all these ceremonies are completed, the mother and child have a final purifying bath in water mixed with the ashes of rice straw."

¹ Neaffeld, loc. cit., 229.

³ Loc. cll., 240.

21. According to Mr. Nesfield, the plain Musahars place much reliance on the protective power of peacock feathers. They do not keep a bear's bone in the hut, and sometimes wash the bodies of the mother and child with liquor. It may be noted that the parturition impurity extends to all the women of the house; for the men, during eleven days after the birth, cook for themselves outside the house, and keep apart from the women. The husband does not cohabit with his wife for three months after her confinement. Mr. Nesfield 1 desoribes the sustom at naming a child: " On the day fixed for the naming, a sacrifice is offered to Barkû Bâba, the 'grandfather,' vis. Decsi, the founder of the tribe. Two names are given-one being the name of some Davi, or rather a name selected from among the numerous titles by which the Devi or indigenous goddess is known, such as Bangari, Nikundi, Bahiya, Britiya, Mohani, Rankini, etc. The other name is taken from the tree near or under which the child was born, or from some hill near which or on which the family reside. Thus if a male child is born under a Jigan tree, it is called Jignu. Possibly in this custom we may see the germ of totemism on the male side, which, though undeveloped among Musahars, so far as I can discover, is found among certain other Kol tribes in Chutia Nagpur. The name given to a daughter is fixed by the mother according to her own fancy. There is no ceremony of any kind attending the giving of the name, and no rule regulating the selection. The following are among the names commonly given to females: Birmi, Mughni, Ghanni, Kumani, Jajiya, but I am unable to trace their meaning." The plain Musahars have the usual custom of boring children's ears, which is done at the age of five or six by a Sunnar. This is called among them "the distribution of betel" (pdn bakheri), and is accompanied by a tribal feast of pork, rice, and liquor, and songs to the music of their drum (huruka). After this the child must conform to caste regulations in the matter of food.

Loc. cit., 243, 2 Loc. cit., 248, 49.

22. The plain division of the tribe burn their dead in the usual way on the edge of a stream, into which Death peremonies. the ashes are thrown. When they return home they chew a leaf of the bitter non, as a mark of mourning, and the chief mourner throws a piece of lighted charcoal behind him to bar the ghost. Like the kindred tribes, they fix up a banch of reed grass (jurai) near the water's edge, which the chief mourner waters every morning as an abiding place for the spirit. On the tenth day, the clansmen shave their heads, and the brother-in-law (baknoi) of the dead man, who officiates as priest, offers a lump of flour to the dead man's spirit. When he comes home, he takes an earthen-potful of food and lays it out in the jungle for the use of the dead. Then a hog is sacrificed, and, being cooked with rice, is eaten by the clausmen. The death impurity lasts ten days. According to Mr. Nesfield,1 the tribe in Singrauli, south of the Son, simply leave the corpse in the place where the man or woman died. If he or she died in the jungle, or in the open air, they cover the body with leaves and bushes and go away. If he died inside the cave or hut, no other covering is considered necessary. The place is thenceforth abandoned by the survivors, who take no relic of the dead with them when they migrate to another part of their hill or jungle. There is safety, as they believe, in this precaution. For if they took with them a limb or bone from the dead man's body, the ghost would probably follow, and they cannot be sure that its company would be more to their benefit than to their injury. Their safest course is, then, to leave the corpse intact on the spot where the departed breathed his last, trusting that the ghost will not forsake the vicinity of the body in which it lately resided: tumnlum circumvolat umbra. Musahars of the Son valley have a ceremony almost as rude. They simply throw the corpse into the river or its nearest tributary. The body floats in the water and is carried out of sight, until at last, perhaps, it may reach the Ganges: which river is regarded by many of the Kol tribes with a respect equal to that paid to the Son. The custom of river burial is exemplified in what Dr. Oldham has recorded of a Savari woman whom he acaidentally met with in the Ghâzipur District. Her husband had died on the march and she had carried his hones in a sack for over a hundred miles in order to throw them into the Ganges. Water burial must be a very ancient custom in the Musahar tribe; for this, according to the legend, was the way in which the corpse of Decsi himself, the reputed founder of the tribe, was disposed of.

¹ Lec. ett., 237.

There are, apparently, no people in Singrauli who called themselves Musahars, and Mr. Nesčeki is, probably, referring to tribes like the Korwae and Parahlyns, who practise these customs, but are very unwilling to give any information on the subject.

23. "Other Musahars have retained the water ceremony, but have made some approach towards cremation also. They carry the body to the river bank, and, having washed it in river water, tie a cloth made of cotton or of deodar bank fibre round the loins. The corpse is then laid on the ground, with its face upwards, and the head towards the north, the region of Indra, to which it is hoped the soul will take its flight. The spot on which the head and feet were laid is marked off for the purpose of paying future obscquies. The son of the deceased, or, if there is no son, his brother or brother's son or other male relative next of kin, takes a handful of straw, (rice straw, if possible), and, placing it on the face of the dead body, sets fire to it. The face is merely singed : but it has had the contact of fire, the great purifying element, so much used in all parts of the world in lustral ceremonies. The chief mourner then takes the body by the feet, and, using all his strength, throws it into the river. In this simple rite we see the germ of the Hindu ceremony of cremation followed by that of immersion-a rite in which the Vedic custom of oremation and the indigenous custom of water burial appear to have met each other from opposite directions, thus giving rise to the composite ceremony which Hindus now practise. Among Musahars, as among Hindus, the contact of fire is interdicted to persons who have died of small-pox; for small-pox is believed to be of the same substance with Sitala, the goddese who presides over the draded malady, and it is thought that by burning such a corpse, they will be burning or otherwise offending the goldess herself. The same interdict applies to persons who have died of cholera and for similar Other Musahars practise a rite in which earth sepulture is the leading characteristic, but qualified by some show of water burial and cremation, and this composite rite appears to be of frequent practice among Dehâti or village Musabars wherever they may be found. The body, as above mentioned, is washed in river water, and the loins are bound round with a cloth of cotton or deader fibre, and fire fed with rice straw is put on the face. The corpse, however, instead of being thrown into the water, as in the preceding rite, is deposited by the chief mourner in a tomb about two yards long and one broad, the earth having been excavated for this purpose with the tribal tool, the gahdāla. The face, as above, is placed towards the North. If the deceased was a man, the body is placed on the right side of the tomb; if a woman, on the left.

¹ Memoir of the Ghdaipur Dieleist, 50.

24. The explanation given of this is that man and woman were originally a single body, just as now man and wife are one flesh, and that the right or stronger half belonged to the male and the left or inferior to the female. It was further explained that when the two halves split asunder, each half became a whole and perfect body, one a complete man and the other a complete woman, and that the primeval pair thus formed were the first ancestors of mankind." 1 Some of the village Musahars leave the corpse in the ground for six months after sepulture, committing it to the care of their guardian goddess, Bansapti : at the close of the six months the remains are taken out of the earth and burnt, and the ashes are thrown into the river. The cremation ceremony that is now performed is called lakhari. Some of the lowest caste of Hindus, those that are halting between the custom of earth sepulture, handed down from their ancestors, and the rite of cremation as taught and practised by Brahmans, adopt a similar compromise, burying the corpse in the earth for the first six months, and then disinterring and burning what remains of it. Those tribes, or families, who practise this ambiguous rite, commit the body during the six months of sepulture to the care of the earth goddess, Bhuiyan (so commonly worshipped by the lower castes) ; just as Musahars commit it to the forest goddess, Bansapti, Bansatti. Bansuri, or Bandevi.1

These aboriginal burial grounds are scattered over all the hill country of Mirrapur. From some expavations made, it appears as if the body was partially cremated and then buried. These graves have the sides and tops covered with degistenes. On this, see Lubbook, Prohistoric Times, 106. Mr. Nestedd compares this with the Eve lagend.—Loc. cit., 289.

3 Nesfield, loc, cit., 240.

25. The method in which the dead are propitiated varies accord-The propitistion of the ing to the manner the corpse is disposed of. Some avoid the ghost by leaving the place and conveying no relic away with them. Those who dispose of the dead by simply throwing them into a river, make an offering of food and water every day for some nine days in succession at the foot of a deodder tree, the nearest one they can find to the spot from which the body was thrown. The soul of the dead is believed to reside in this tree as long as the obsequies are continued ; and from this tree the ghost descends to receive the offerings.1 The offerings are usually made at midday, and are presented by the chief mourner, that is, by the man who threw the corpse into the river. They consist generally of cooked rice mixed with honey, the flesh and eggs of the tortoise, the flesh of the hzard (gok), the porcupine (saki) the boar, the crab (kekra)-all kinds of flesh in fact which the man or weman while living considered a luxury. Different offerings are presented on different days, not all at once. Those who before throwing the corpse into the river lay it decently out, place the head towards the North, and put fire on the face, perform the same kind of obsequies as the preceding, but with more system and formality. Instead of presenting the offerings at the foot of a deader tree, they present them at the spot were the body was laid out before it was thrown into the river. For the first four days the offerings are laid at the South end of the spot-that at which the feet of the deceased were laid-and the offerings during those days consist of rice beer, rice paneakes mixed with honey, the flesh and eggs of the tortoise. the time of presenting the offerings, the mourner repeats the following words (all in the Musahar language) :-

Timro Antmu, Indra, hadaria potis!

Beglo magno pokka bakra bal:

"Come, O dead one, from the palace of Indra!

Come and eat the food of the world.

Take it and return to thy palace!"

26. The offerings remain for some time at the spot where they were laid: after which the mourner removes them to his own cave or resting place (in which he is forced to live apart during the continuance of these rites, cooks the flesh and rice, throws one mouthful on the fire for the dead, addressing him again in the same words, and then takes his own meal of what remains. From the fifth to the eighth day the same process is repeated; but the offerings during these days are placed on the West side of the spot, the diet remaining the same as during the four days preceding. On the ninth day, the offerings are placed on the North side, that is, the part where the head of the deceased was laid, and the flesh diet is now changed from tortoise to crab. This is continued till the twelfth day. On the thirteenth day, the offerings are placed on the East side and the flesh diet is changed from crab to porcupine. This is continued for one day more. On the fifteenth, the mourner goes no more to the spot, but, after being shaved, re-visits his family, who then, with the Patari or tribal priest, solemnize a feast of the dead, consisting chiefly of rice beer and hog's flesh.1 Then follows the shaving of the head and face of the chief mourner, which is done not by the mourner himself, but by the brother of his mother or by some son of that brother, or by the husband of his mother's sister or by some son of his mother's sister. When the shaving has been completed, the shaved man and his shaver boil some strips of bark torn from an dean or deolds tree, and, after straining off the fibre, wash their face and body in the sacred water. He is then at last fit to enter the family cave or hut." I Last comes the general tribal feast of the dead. For a woman the offerings are made for nine instead of fourteen days, as in the case of a man.

¹ On these tree spirits, see Tylor, Primitive Culture, II, 215, and II, 16.

27. The explanation given is that the woman carries the child for nine months before it is born, whereas the father keeps his son with him for fourteen or fifteen years, that is, till he is old enough to marry and go out and maintain himself independently in the forest. In some parts, the period of mourning is extended for a married woman from nine days to twelve, and the explanation, then, is that three more days are added in recognition of three days of weakness and suffering attending child-birth. Thus, in the case of the married woman, the final feast of the dead, which closes the days of mourning, takes place either on the tenth or the thir-

² Hure, again, Mr. Nesheld must be innorrect. According to Watt, Distinary of Economic Products S. V. coleus, the decide, is purely a Himsleyen tree. Ther is plenty of the dean (terminalic glabra) in the jungles of South Mirsaper.

¹ Here Mr. Nesfield is mistaken. The Pathari or Patari is certainly the tribal priest only of the Majhwars or Manjha, who are quite distinct from Musahars. In tact, Mr. Nesfield seems, in regard to the latter, to have combined information, some of desistful accuracy, regarding the mass of more primitive aberiginal population along the valley of the Son.

Again, there is a distinction as to the amount of hair to be shorn off before the mourner can be considered pure enough to be readmitted into his family. If the deceased was a man, it is necessary that he should be relieved of his beard and whiskers as well as of the hair of his head. If the deceased was a woman, it is enough that he should part company with the hair of his head only: for, as a woman has no beard or whiskers, there is no need (they think) to have such appendages shorn off on her account."

28. The ordinary Musahars, in Mirzapur, do not worship any Hindu gods. They worship, with prayers Rolligion. and sacrifices, one Sadalu Lal, about whom it is not known exactly whether he was one of their ancestors or not. He is worshipped in Sawan with the sacrifice of a hog and the oblation of liquor. In connection with him, ancestors generally are worshipped. They also worship the village deities (dik) with a hog, liquor, flowers, and a piece of cloth. Disease and death are attributed to evil spirits (bket), to whom hogs and liquor are offered under a banyan or pipal tree, in which they are believed to reside. They recognise five different kinds of ghosts: Nat and Pahlwan, who are supposed to belong to the Nat tribe; Daitya, the spirit of a Brahman or Chhatri ; Ahîr of an Ahîr ; and Teliya Masan of a Teli. In Barabanki, according to Mr. Nesfield, they worship one Maganpal under the title of Banraj or "forest king." As before described, they worship the tribal ancestors, Decei and Ansåri, the latter "under the name of Důla Deo," which is now understood to signify the "dooly god." The offerings paid to this divinity consist of the head of a ram or goat, the eggs of the lizard (goh), and a piece of yellow cloth. These are presented to him on a large plate made of diak leaves. Treacle and butter are offered to him through fire. The month in which these offerings are chiefly made is Baisakh (April), the commencement of the marriage season amongst Hindus, when litters are in much request, and when the god is, therefore, especially propitious." I like all jungle tribes, they worship Baghaut (whom Mr. Nesfield's informants converted into Bhāgwat Deo), the ghost of a person killed by a tiger. They also have in their villages images of Mahābir or Hanumān, the god-monkey in his phallic form. "The great active power in the universe, according to Musahar belief, is Bansapati, Bansatti, or Bānsuri, the goddess who (as her name implies) personifies and presides over forests. By her command the trees bear fruit, the bulbs grow in the earth, the bees make honey, the tussar worm fattens on the dsan leaf, and lizards, wolves, and jackals (useful for food to man) multiply their kind. She is the goddess of child-birth. To her the childless wife makes prayers for the grant of offspring. In her name and by her aid, the medicine man or sorcerer expels devils from the bodies of the possessed. In her name and to her honour, the village man kindles a new fire for lighting a brick kiln. Woe to the man who takes a false oath in the name of Bansatti."

¹ Nonfield, loc. cit., 244, sq.

I Lee, cit., 258.
I The conversion of Dulha Dec, the Good god of marriages (Central Province Gazetter, 190, 275) into Dulha Dec, the god of the litter, is correct. For Dulha Dec, see Introduction to Popular Religion and Folklore, 75.

29. "Bansapti is worshipped by Musahars in their own houses or huts. They make a platform (chauri) in the corner of the hut, about one inch in height, above the level of the floor, and nine inches in breadth and length. This little square is made of elay, and the sacrifice is smeared with river water or cowdung. This is the altar on which the offerings to her are placed-an altar without an idol; for there is no mound, idel, or other visible symbol under which Bansatti is worshipped. On ordinary occasions, the offerings consist of flowers, fruits, grasses, roots, &c., brought fresh from the jungles : and the days on which the offerings are made are Monday and Friday. If the worshipper has any special favour to ask, he cuts the ball of his finger with some blades of the sacred kura grass, and lets four or five drops of blood fall on the altar, a survival, as we may readily infer, from the now obsolete custom of human sacrifice," Her special festival is in the second half of the month of Baisakh. On that day it is supposed that Bansapti is married to Gansam (whom Mr. Nesfield takes to be derived from Ghanasyâma one of the titles of Krishna), whom Musahars call Dâu

¹ Nesfield, loc. cit., 204.

¹ Nexteld, loc. cit., 265, sq.

⁸ This, however, is more than doubtful, and it looks much more as if Garman, the local god of the Hols, was introduced into the Hindu pantheon as Ghanasyams, "the thick, dark rain cloud," a title of Krishua.

Gansâm, or "uncle Gansâm," or Bansgopâl. To him, in his phallic manifestation, a conc-shaped pillar of mud is erected.

30. Among the village Musahars the phallic deity Gansam is replaced by Bhairon, whose vehicle is a dog. A little mud pillar, in the shape of a lingam, is erected in his honour, and among the plains men of the Gangetic valley he has become a sort of village guardian deity. He is probably of aboriginal origin, and has been introduced into the Hindu pantheon in the form of Bhairava, "the terrible one," who, like his Dravidian prototype, in this form, rides on a dog, and is called Swaswa, "whose horse is a dog." Some of the village Musabars, in Mirzapur, consult for their marriage coremonies Upådhya Bråhmans, who are held in contempt by their brethren. Four festivals are observed by the tribe in addition to the special tribal festival in Baisakh: the Phagua or Holi; the Khichari or Khicharwar, in the end of Magh (January-February); the Pancheinyan, generally taken as equivalent to the Nagpanchami, or snake feast, on the 5th of the light half of Sawan; and the Kajari or women's festival in the rains.

31. Their ideas, as regards omens, do not differ from those of the kindred tribes. Friday and the number General superstitions. five are lucky. To meet a fex on the road is lucky, and a jackal the reverse. They swear on Bansapti and the tiger, and on liquor poured on the ground in honour of Parihar, who is really a member of the Panchoupir or Ghazi Miyan cycle. but who, according to Mr. Nesfield, bas become a god of wine in the hill tracts, and is represented in the plains by Madain, the deity of liquor (mada). They have a water ordeal, in which the two disputants dive, and the man who comes up first is considered to have been discarded by the pure element, and loses his case. They have the common cath by swearing on the head of a son, When the oldest woman in a Hindu bousehold drives out poverty (Daridr khedna) on 15th Karttik by beating a sieve in the house, and then throwing it away, Musahars, who wish to obtain the powers of a sorcerer (ojka), lurk about, and, when the woman comes out, rush at her with loud cries and snatch her sieve from her. She is supposed to be a witch (tona), and the man who can first seize her fan inherits the powers. The man thus affected has to rush off and propitiate the offended deity by a sacrifice to Sadalu.

VOL. IV.

To cure a person affected with witcheraft, the ojka makes three marks on the ground with a piece of iron, which he then waves five times round the head of the patient with a prayer to Sadalu to make the exorcism effective. Witches generally attack young children, and the result is that they are seized with vomiting.

32. Women are tattooed on the wrists, cheeks, and nose. They believe that Paramesar will brand a weman Social costoma, in heaven who desires to enter without these protective marks. Men wear earrings (pagara), bracelets (dharkana), and arm ornaments (bijayath). The women wear two kinds of nose rings-the nathing, in the side of the nose, and the bulaq, in the septum. They have ear ornaments (taranphill), bead necklaces, and glass bangles (chilei). The village Musahars have now begun to abstain from beef, and will not touch a Dom or Dhobi, or cat with Chamars, Doms, or Dharkars. They will not touch the wife of the younger brother, the wife of the elder brother-in-law, or the mother of the son's wife. The hill Musahar eats the flesh of the cow and buffalo, and was, as the legends show, until lately, a professional cow-lifter. Their clothes are of the coarsest and scantiest description. The use of the bark fibre, as described by Mr. Nesfield,1 seems now totally abandoned, and careful enquiry in the Mirzapur hill tracts has failed to verify the assertion that any one of them now lives the life of the cave troglodyte. houses are generally low huts or booths of branches. According to Mr. Nesfield, they have a prejudice against living under a thatch, but this hardly prevails now among the tribe in Mirzapur. They generally live in small scattered communities like other savages.1

33. Mr. Nesfield has prepared an elaborate account of their industries. These he classifies into the collection and sale of medicinal roots and herbs, wild honey, manufacture and sale of leaf plates, sale of wood for fuel, collection and sale of gum, the sale of the live lizard (yoh) used by burglars in fixing their rope on the roofs of houses, the lighting of brick kilns, the watching of fields

¹ Loc. Mi., 38.

² Loc. eit., 31.

² Sponeur, Principles of Sociology, I, 452.

¹ Los. ett., 40, egg.

^{*} It is said that the limit is thrown up, attached to the reps, and, clinging to the roof enables the burglar to climb up.-Nesfield, loc. cit., 48.

and crops by night, field labour, making of catechu, rearing the tussar silk worm. Now-a-days, in Mirzapur, their chief occupation is that of carrying palanquins. They are short, stout, hardy, little fellows, and make excellent bearers.

Distribution of the Musahars according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	BICTS	i.		Banna- nush.	Khard- bind.	Klasrwär.	Other sub- castes.	TOTAL.
Allahábád .					361	in	1,142	1,503
Benares .			10		irr	2,560	322	2,882
Mirrapur .			. 1		100	4,506	891	5,897
Jaunpur .				1,010	253	1,660	1,989	4,912
Ghasipur .						1,635	723	2,258
Ballia .				- A II	3000	8	192	200
Gorakhpur			S	3.0	14201	Dow	14,993	14,993
Boati .				297	112			227
Azamgurh		1	7.				1.877	1,877
Raa Bareli .				412			181	412
Falzābid .			-	2,140		9	76	2,216
Gonda .			,	12		999		12
Sultanpur .			i,	2,011			394	2,405
Partabgweb.				242			978	1,220
Bambanki .			,	68	946_		80	148
	To	TAT		6.192	614	10,269	23,657	40,663

N

Någbansi. - A sept of Råjputs in Gorakhpur, of whom Dr. Buchanan 1 writes :- "There are in this District a good many Nagbansis, some of whom call themselves merely by that name, while others call themselves Vayasas, a name which in the account of Shâhâbâd has been written Vais. The Vayasas or Vais, however, universally admit that they are Nagbansis, and that they assumed the name of Vayasa from Vayaswara, a town between Lucknow and the Ganges, where they were long settled, and from whence they came to this District, some generations ago, in consequence of a famine. Some of these, with whom I conversed, agreed with the account which I received at Shāhābād, and looked upon themselves as descended of the great dragon (udg), and, as such, claimed a superiority over all other Rajputs, the great dragon being a personage of a good deal more consequence than the Rishis, from whom the others claim a descent. They said, and perhaps believed, that should a serpent from ignorance or mistake bite one of them, the poison would do them no injury. But I had no opportunity of putting their faith to the trial, that was proposed by the chief of Nagpur. Other Vayasas, however, altogether disclaimed this extraction and gave one as fully difficult of belief. There was, they say, a certain very holy personage named Vasishtha, well known to all Hindu scholars, who had a cow known to all, and named Kâmdhenu. This was a very precious animal, which was coveted by Viswamitra, king of Gadhipur, who threatened to take her by force. Vasishtha was much afflicted at this, and Kamdhenu seeing his grief, asked him if he meant to part with her. To this he replied that he had no wish of this kind, but had no power to resist the king; on which a number of warriors sprung from the cow, overthrew Viswamitra and, having killed most of his armies and children, reduced him to become a Brühman, in which character he became an eminent saint. On this occasion the Singhar Rajputs sprang from the horns of the cow, the Haras from her bones, the Kachhoyas from her thighs, the Chandels from between her horns, and the Tilokehandras from the root of her nose. The great king Sålivåhana was of this tribe, and having had three hundred and sixty wives, was ancestor of many Rajputs, among whom are the Eastern India, II, 161.

Vayasas who derive their name from Vayaswara, as already mentioned. Those who claim descent from the cow, account in this way for their being called Nagbansi; they say that a child of a Tilokehandra was in habit of feeding daily with milk a serpent which he found in a wood. After some time the serpent was highly pleased and told the child to call his descendants Nagbansi; and that he would make him a great Raja, which accordingly happened. Bhima was one day poisoned by his cousin Duryodhana and the body thrown into the river. It so happened that in that vicinity the daughter of a dragon had long been in the habit of praying to Siva, and was a great favourite; but on that day she had offered flowers which were rather decayed, on which the irascible god cursed her, and declared that she should have a corpse for a husband, The afflicted damsel (for the dragons of the lower world, both male and female, have human shape whenever they please) went to Siva's spouse and told her the hard sentence. On this the goddess uphraided her husband for bestowing so severe a punishment for so trifling an offence. It was, therefore, agreed that Bhima should be restored to life after the fair, dragon had married his body and he had by her a numerous offspring. The Nagbansi Kajputs in the female line are thus descended of the devil, and if Bhima's mother had been what she ought, might by the father's side be descended of the Moon; but the good man Panda had nothing to do in the matter, and the lady, his wife, had Bhima to the god of wind. This, I am told, is the story which the Nagpur Raja wishes to be believed, and he probably thinks that the bar of bastardy so long ago and in such circumstances is no great blot on his scatcheou, In this District the tribe is very numerous, but have chiefly come lately from the West, and possess no considerable estates, so that no family can be traced to the time when the Cheros, their real ancestors, held the country,"

 This local account of the connection between the Nagbansi Rajputs and the Tilekebandi Bais of Oudh is interesting. The Oudh legends will be found under the head Bais.

Nai, Nao, Nau.—(Sanskrit wapite, according to some a corruption of suapitei, "one who bathes") the Hindu barber casts. In ¹ Based on enquiries at Mirsapur and notes: by Paneit Baldan Prosid, Deputy Collector, Cawapur; Mr. W. Cockburn, Jáhan; M. Chhoté Lál, Arelessalogical Survey, Lucknow; Mr. W. H. O. N. Seagrave, District Superintendent of Police, Busti, and the Deputy Inspector of Schools, Barellly and Agra.

Bundelkhand he is also known as Khawas which was a title for the attendant on a grandee; and Birtiya or "he that gets his maintenance (vritts) from his constituents." When he is a Muhammadan he usualiy calls himself Hajjām, which means in Arabic "a scarifier." It is curious that the Nai, who is the great goesipmonger of the country side, has so little in the way of traditions about his own caste. According to one account they are descended from a Kshatriya father and a Sûdra mother; according to Parasara from a Kuveri father and a Pattikira mother. Another tradition is that Siva created them to cut the nails of Parvati. The tribal saint of barbers is Sen or Sain Bhagat, whose name according to Muhammadan tradition was really Husain. He is said to have been a resident of Partabpura, a village in the Phillaur Tahail of According to Prof. Wilson, whose authority Jalandhar District. was the Bhaktimala, he was a devout worshipper of Vishna and his descendants were for some time the family Gurus of the Rajas of Bandhugarh. One day he was so entranced in his devotion that he forgot to attend the Raja to shave him; when he came later on in the day to apologise he found to his amazement that the Raja had been shaved as usual. It then became clear that the deity had really come in person and officiated for his absent votery. His votaries are mostly barbers and are found in the Western Panjih.

2. At the last Consus the barbers were commerced in a Hindu and Muhammadan branch. Of the Hindus Internal structure. the following sub-castes were recorded: Banbhern, which is said to mean "quarrelsome;" Bari, which is the name of a caste who have been separately described; Golé, which is also a sub-caste of Kumhars; Kansujiya and Mathuriya, "residents of Kanauj and Mathura" respectively; Sainblagat, who take their name from the tribal saint; Sribastab from the city of Sravasti, and Ummara, which is the name of one of the Banya tribes. besides these there are many others. Thus to the east of the Province we find the Sribastab, Kananjiya, Bhojpuriya, or "residents of Western Bengal; "Audhiya or Awadhiya from Ajudhya; Magahiya from Magadha or Bihar; Byahta who pride themselves on prohibiting widow-marriage and taking only virgin brides (lyahta), and Musalmani which is another term for the Hajjam. In Lucknow we have the Sribastab ; Chamarmunda or "those who shave Chamars ;" the Kumhra who do the same service for Kumhars, and the Usarha. In Jalaun are the Sribastab; Ummare; Husrente; Bawar, and Bhe-niva. In Bijnor are the Golé, Pachhâhi or "Western" and the Purbiya or "Eastern;" and the Bhimbru who are apparently the same as the Banbheru. In Basti are found the Sarwariya, which is the name of a well-known Bråhman tribe and means "a resident of Sarjupår or the land beyond the river Sarju : " the Kananjiya and the Turkiya or Turkish Muhammadan branch. Lastly, in Cawnpur we find the Sribastab; Ummar and Rathaur, the name of a famous Rajput sept. Here the barbers refer their origin to Srinagar or Kashmir. Hills again they are reported to have regular gotras like the higher classes, such as Chanwal, Kasyapa and Bhâradwâjâ. The complete returns of the last Census show 888 sub-divisions of the Hindu and 197 of the Musalman branch of the tribe. Those of most local importance are the Bahlimi, Deswala and Gaur of Saharanpur, the Bulehra and Deswâla of Muzaffarnagar; the Turkiya of Bareilly and Gorakhpur; the Golé of Bijnor; the Bais, Sulaimani and Turkiya of Basti; the Purabiya and Turkiya of Kheri, and the Pirzāda of Gonda.

3. The Nais generally observe the usual rule of exogamy which hars marriages in their own family, and those Marriago rules. of the maternal uncle and father's sister as long as relationship is remembered. To the East of the province the marriage age is ten or eleven, and a man may marry as many wives as he can afford to keep. They have the usual triple form of marriage-Charhana, dola, and sagai; the last for widows. In the first two the binding part of the ceremony is the worshipping of the feet of the bridegroom (panopuja, pair puja) by the futher of the bride and the Sendurdan or marking of the forehead of the bride by the bridegroom with red lead. The dola form is adopted only by poor people. Widows are re-married by all the sub-castes except the Byahta. The ceremony merely consists in dressing the woman in a suit of new clothes provided by her lover who also gives her ar set of jewelry. From Jalaun it is reported that Nais will not marry in their own village because they consider residents of the same village brothers and sisters. One origin of this feeling may be the desire so strongly felt by barbers to keep the constituents or persons they serve (jajman) in the same family; but at the same time it illustrates an important principle which is at the bottom of one plausible theory of the origin of exogamy. Thus Dr. Westermarck 1 maintains "that there is an innate aversion to sexual intercourse between people living very closely together from early youth, and that, as such people are in most cases related, this feeling displays itself chiefly as a horror of intercourse between near kin."

¹ History of Human Marriage, 320.

4. Nåis belong to all the recognised Hindu sects-some being Vaishnavas, some Saivas and some Saktas. Rolligion. As we have seen, to the West of the province their tribal saint is Sain Bhagat. To the East their clan deities are Phûlmati, a form of Devi, Bhairon Bâbe, who is a genuine village godling and has been adopted, as has been shown elsewhere, into the Brahmanical pantheon as Bhairava, one of the most terrible forms of Siva, and Birtiya or Birtiha. These deities are worshipped on any lucky day in the month of Chait:-Phulmati with the sacrifice of a ram or chicken and the offering of a piece of cloth dyed with turmeric; Bhairon Baba with only a ram; Birtiha, who is a low class godling, with a young pig and an oblation of spirits. Their marriage and other domestic ceremonies are regulated by Brahmans, who to the West are drawn from the Kanaujiya or Sanadh tribes and to the East from the Sarwariya. In Basti they worship Mababir and Bhagawati and to the West Sain Bhagat and some Muhammadan saints like the Miyan of Amroha or Jalesar and Zahirpir. They cremate their married dead and dispose of the ashes in the Ganges or one of its tributaries. The unmarried dead are either boried or thrown into a river after a sort of perfunctory cremation (jal pravdk). They perform the usual sraddha, but in a less complete way than as is usual among the higher and more orthodox castes.

- 5. The barber's trade is undoubtedly of great antiquity. In the Occupation and social Veda "we read—"Sbarpen us like the razor in the hands of the barber;" and again,

 "Driven by the wind, Agni shaves the hair of the earth like a barber shaving a beard." In early times they must have enjoyed considerable dignity; Updi the barber was the first propounder of the law of the Buddhist Church."
- 6. A village song from Bundelkhand gives a very graphic description of his functions. Sabsé Nãi bara khildri; Lekar ail nakarni, chhura kari tayyár churánni; Choti pakar arbon kománda, baghal, muchh aur dárhi; Gola phirce sir men rakhkur kalam nukili karki; Mund mund kar pet chaldvai, theti karê na bari ; Peti bagkal dabakar lota bath liyê rujgari.

Introduction to Popular Religion and Polklore, 67.

³ Wilson, Rig Fada, IV, 238; X, 142-1; Rajendra Lála Mitza, Indo dryans, 1, 219.

Oldenberg, Life of Buddha, 159. Spence Hardy, Eastern Monarchism, 238.

"Of all men the barber is the greatest trickster. With his whetstone, nail parer and razor he gots ready his tool wallet. He catches people by the topknot and clean shaves them, armpit, moustache and heard. Leaving a round tonsure on the head, he points off the side-locks. By clean shaving he fills his belly-Neither field nor garden has he. With his wallet under his arm and his brass water pot in his hand, he makes his living." This, however, describes only one and perhaps not the most important function of the barber. Besides shaving and shampooing his constituents, he acts as a village menial; prepares the tobacco at the changal or village rest-house and waits on strangers and guests. As we have seen in dealing with various castes, his duties in connection with marriages and other similar functions are numerous and important. He sots as the general village matchmaker, a duty which his wandering habits of life and his admittance into respectable households admirably fit him to discharge. He is always on the look-out for a suitable match for the children of his employers, and his powers of lying and exaggerating the beauty of a girl and the qualities of a marriageable youth are highly developed. He also acts as confidential envoy and carries announcements of marriages, invitations and congratulations at pregnancy and child-birth. In the absence of a Brahman he takes up the duties of a hedge priest and can bring a wedding or a funeral to a successful issue. But he will not bear news which is inauspicious, such as that of a death. This is carried by the Bhangi, Chamar, Balahar, Dusadh or other village drudge. Besides this he is the rural leach, hone setter, tooth drawer and performer of petty operations, such as laneing hoils and the like. For this business be takes the name of Jarrah who is usually a Nai. If a Muhammadan he usually performs circumcision; but some Hindu Nais perform this operation for their Musalman mighbours. Akin to him are the Jonkara or leach applier, which is the name of one of the Kori sub-castes, the Kanmailiya or ear eleaner and the Mahawat who is a Nat and does cupping with a cow's horn and carries some rude lancets and a bamboo pipe with which he sucks the matter out of abscesses and som ears. The functions of these craftsmen all more or less closely trench upon those of the Nai,

7. It is rather surprising then, that with all these important and confidential duties intrusted to him, his social position is not higher than it is. We have seen that menial tribes have their own Nais and most of the barbers who serve Europeans are Muhammadans, because this employment would offend his high caste Hindu clients. The Nai is not much higher in the social scale than one of the minor grades of handicraftsmen. The reason of this is that his duty of surgery brings him in contact with blood, and he has not only to cut the first hair of the child and thus contracts some of the parturition impurity, but he also has to shave and cut the nails of the corpse before cremation. He also shaves the heads of the mourners, and his wife, as we have seen in dealing with the birth customs of various castes, succeeds the Chambrin midwife and acts as a sort of monthly nurse. She also beings out the bride at the marriage ceremony where she is very much in evidence. All this tends to procure for her a somewhat doubtful reputation.

- 8. Nais drink spirits and eat the flesh of goats, sheep and dear. They eat the leavings of Brahmans, Kshatriyas, Vaisyas and Kayasths. All Hindus will drink water at their hands, and part of their trade is to attend feasts, wash the feet of the guests, hand round the dishes and remove the leavings. Chamars and other outcaste tribes will eat kackchi cooked by them and many high castes will eat pakki prepared by them.
- 9. The barber is one of the most important members of the village community. His wandering habits and his right of entry into households give him great facilities for the collection of gossip, and the place where he carries on his business, usually in the open air, becomes, like the Roman tonstring of the Florentine barber's shop immortalised in " Romola," the centre of village talk and intrigue, He is a prosperous craftsman, receiving not only annual dues from his constituents, but special fees for marriages, confinements, circumcisions, and so on. The wit and wisdom of the country side is much devoted to the Nai. "These four are always foul-the barber, the mid wife, the leech and the butcher" (Noi, das, baid, quasedi, in ka sutak kadhi na jdo). "In a barber's wedding every one is a Thakur." (Nan ká bárát men Thakuré Thákur). Hence he gets the mock honorific title of Thakurji. "The barber washes others' feet but is ashamed to wash his own" (An ha gorva dhod naunya, ann dhovat lojde), and lastly, " Every one must bow his head to the barber " (Hajjam ke agé sab kā sir jhukta has).

Distribution of the Nais according to the Census of 1891.

"JevoT	1,263	19,145	14,920	29,997	18,659	21,853	14,295	21,882	16,401	15,160	15,411	13,952
-fesulf (Mussl- fasulf,	975	11,088	5,567	8,710	8,570	858	288	281	919	22	94	818
Образа	681	3,577	619	1,400	6,563	13,529	5,517	3,948	879	3,561	2,137	2,082
Umb.	į	i	1	ı		I	I	1	:	1	48	-
.datuhdista	77	88	90	00	1	286	43	879	14,648	7,146	12,696	1,411
:togahlain8	ı	201	1	TU IOI	ly l	Vq	09	1	I	1	1	1
Mathuripa	ī	- :	-		1	585	800'8	16,193	930	4,294	467	9,463
Mansuilys.	I	1			-1	5	7	1	90	į	1	1
MioD.	36	83	8,089	12,990	6,654	099'9	6,360	113	E	83	1	203
Bert.	839	303	579		1	:	*	:	:	:	1	-
Bembheru.	204	-			_	_	_	_		-	1	-
	•					•	٠	٠		•		-
								•		٠
DISTRICTS.
Dist	Dehra Dün	Sahāranpur	Mazaffarnagae	Meerut .	Belandshihr	Aligach	Mathura .	Agm .	Parrakhabad	Mainpari	Etdwab .	Etsh .

Bareilly .		*			2000	:	13		10,261		1,638	4,026	18,470
Bijnor .	•		8,501	1	127	1	1	I	54	1	100	10,585	19,322
Budaun .			:	I	4,447	:	5,059	Gi	2,880	1	159	3,196	16,350
Moradabad		•	8,183	9	6,739	:	7	1	31	1	1,090	12,789	88,779
Shihjahanpur			:		1	:	198	ŧ	18,478	1	1,217	2,883	17,777
Pilishit .		•	16		11	1	8	E	806'9	:	1,459	1,411	8,841
Cawnpur .			9		90	48	11	1	22,469	:	1,151	328	24,048
Patchpur			:	-	ı	-	1		13,727	1,923	27.0	1,754	17,676
Bånda		•	i	;		59	i	1	9,867	1	808	183	10,261
Hamirpur			:		:		93	1/3	916	2,267	1,338	108	4,632
Alfahibad			;	1		88	1	486	15,384	8,769	2,551	8,793	31,070
Jhansi .		•	i	ı	1		1	384	5,433	i	2,094	58	7,836
Jalann .			ı		1		250	i	2,005		864	16	7,956
Lalitpur .			1	:	1	į	1	:	83	1,881	6,651	1	8,001
Benares .			i	1	1	2,906	1	45	6,126	69	1,824	3,513	14,417
Mirapur		•	1		1	4,043	:	1	11,900	1	5000	2,397	18,936
Jauppar .			:	ı	1	1	i	8558	18,747	1	513	6,403	21,614

Distribution of the Nais according to the Census of 1891 -contd.

													-	-{12
DIS	Districts.	ź		Banbbara.	1796	MeB	Annuajiya.	Methaniya	Jageddaia8	Subtetub.	ArmU	1	Others	others.
Chleripur.		٠		:	1	ŧ	8,348	1	25	200	1		548
Ballia .	•			1	i	ŧ	11,843	.1	1	7	ì		277	1,871
Gorakhpur	*			1	1	*	30,506	- 1	683	194			696,01	_
Borti .				1	1	:	9.559	-1	III.	7,028			12,613
Assungarli	*			1	1		8,357		10	1962	1		1,145
Kamana .			•	1		1	1	4	1	*	1		1117
Garfredi .		•	*		:	:	:	1	1	;	ī		18
Tarii .			*	619	:	454	i	9	i	390			8
Lusknow			•	-	ŧ	1	176	4		10,149	;		1,084
Unio .				300		1	14	ŧ	::	19,167	:		3,390	3,290 685
Rib Bareli			•	ı		1	147	105	14	17,033	1		1,877
Sftapur .			•	:	1	;	1	1	1	11,901	1		762	762 11,280

18,738	17,269	20,589	28,636	21,4290	20,825	16,413	24,440	862,024
1,419	6.998	4,777	10,953	109'6	4,626	2,478	10,711	198,937
245	999	1,114	8,330	6,347	3,395	1,976	758	101,811
	-	i	į	:	:	102	*	14,434
16,945	100'6	13,196	14,353	5,467	10,630	11,450	12,966	341,062
1	1	1,405	1	1	2,945	464	•	6,956	9
129	121	ŧ	i		1	NG.	1	40,231	1
1		1	E	102	200	58	1	68,930	ß
1	1	1	ŧ	:	10	1	Ī	48,609
1	1	1	ŧ		1	i	i	930
-	1	I	1	1	1	1	:	29,846
-		-	•	•	•	٠	٠
							٠	4
						4		Tor
						#	im	GRAND TOTAL
Hardoi	A Kheri	Fairahad	Gonda	Babraich	Salthapur	Partablyar	Barabanki	6

MUHAMMADANS

Naithana.—A class of Hill Brahmans who belong to the middle class and Bharadwaja sotrs. "They ascribe their origin to Jwalapur near Hardwar in the Saharanpur District, whence they came some thirty generations ago and took service with Raja Sona Pala. They belong to the Gaur Division and owe their name to the village of Naithana. They are distinct from both Sarola and Gangari, but the better class of Naithana Brahmans intermarry with the former and the poorer with the latter. They affect service especially."

Nakhi.—A Saiva order, so called because they allow their nails (nakh) to grow long. This appears to be the only difference between them and Atits or Sannyasis. Most of them live by begging, but some have a private income from trade. They are very vain of their austerity (tapasya).

Na'lband .- (Na'l"a horse shoe," band, "fastening") the farrier and horse shoer. They are Muhammadans, some calling themselves Shaikh and others Pathan. These divisions are endogamous. They observe the usual Muhammadan customs. Those who are well-to-do marry their daughters as infants; some defer marriage till 15 or 18. Widows re-marry by the Nikah form which is equivalent to the Hindu sagdi. Among lower class Muhammadans the term Nikah, which properly means the arthodox ceremony of marriage,2 has been appropriated in this degraded sense. Widow-marriage does not appear to be common, but a widow may marry the younger brother of her late husband or a stranger to the family. Infidelity in the wife warrants divorce, but the fact must be proved to the satisfaction of the tribal council. They belong to the Sunni sect, and specially revere, like many of the inferior Muhammadan tribes, the Panchonpir and Shaikh Saddu, the latter of whom is propitiated by the offering of a ho-goat and sweet cakes fried in butter (gulgula) with garlands of flowers. They also burn incense (lobds) in his honour. They so far follow Hindu usage as to offer sweetmeats (Aslwa) and calces to the sainted dead at the Shabibarit and on Friday when there is sickness in the family.

2. Their occupation is farriery and treatment of horses and is thus equivalent to the Hindu Salotari (Sanskrit, 8d/ikelsa 1 " one who receives oblations of rice or corn," and hence a horse).

Atkinson, Bionalogus Gazetteer, III, 269.

Son Hughes Dictionary of Islam, 318

On this soo Max Müller, Lectures on the Science of Language, 1, 167, notes.

Nânakpanthi, Nânakshâhi,-A general term which seems to be used in rather an uncertain way to denote various kinds of Sikh Faqirs. They all take their name and derive their doctrine from Nanak, a Khatri of Talwandi, in the Lahore District, who was born in 1489 A.D. and died in 1538-9 A.D. "Nanak combined the excellencies of preceding reformers and he avoided the more grave errors into which they had fallen. Instead of the circumscribed divinity, the anthropomorphous god of Ramanand and Kabir, he loftily invoked the Lord as the one, the sole, the timeless Being ; the Creator, the Self-existent, the Incomprehensible, and the Everlasting. He likens the Deity to Truth, which was before the world began, which is and shall endure for ever, as the ultimate cause and idea of all we know or behold. He addresses equally the Mula and the Pandit, the Darvesh and the Sannyasi, and tells them to remember that Lord of Lords who had seen come and go numerous Muhammads, Vishnus, and Sivas. He tells them that virtues and charities, heroic acts and gathered wisdom are nought of themselves; that the only knowledge that availeth is the knowledge of God, and then as if to rebuke those vain men who saw eternal life in their own act of faith, he declares that they can only find the Lord on whom the Lord looks with favour. Yet the extension of grace is linked with the exercise of our will, and the beneficent use of our faculties. God, said Nanak, places salvation in good works and uprightness of conduct; the Lord will require of man what he has done, and the teacher further required timely repentance of men, saying " If not until the day of judgment the sinner abaseth himself, a punishment shall overtake him." 1

2. And yet Mr. Maclagan says: "There is nothing in his doctrine to distinguish it in any marked way from that of the other saints who taught the higher form of Hinduism in Northern India. The unity of God, the absence of any real distinction between Hindus and Musalmans, the usclessness of ceremonial, the vanity of human wishes, even the equality of castes are topics common to Nanak and the Bhagats; and the Adi-granth or sacred book, compiled by Nanak, is full of quotations from elder or contemporary teachers, who taught essentially the same doctrines as

Vot. IV.

¹ Conningham, History of Sikhs, 44.

3 Panjib Consus Report, 148.

Nanak himself. Nor in spite of the legends relating to him, does he appear to have had any very remarkable following during his lifetime. And yet the persons now returning themselves as his special adherents very largely outnumber the followers of any of the Bhagats or reformers of the same period. The particular success of Nanak's teaching, as compared with that of the other reforming teachers, had its foundation in a variety of circumstances, of which not the least important were the character of his successors and the nature of the people who listened to him. Most of the other Bhagats were men of the south-east, teachers from Benarcs, Rajputana and Delhi. Nanak alone had his origin in the Panjab proper, removed equally from the centre of the Empire and of Hinduism, and found his following among castes who possessed such sterling qualities as the Panjab Khatris and Jats. if Nanak had no successors, or successors of no moment, his following would doubtless have remained a trifling one; and it must not be supposed that the large number of Nanakpanthis shown in our tables would have been so returned if Sikhism had not had subsequently a political history."

3. "The Nanakpauthis of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries were a sect much as the Kablepenthis and Dadupanthis are sects,-a sect with certain wide opinions differing from the ordinary Hindu orthodoxy and distinguished from other seets more by the character of its Gurus and the organisation of their adherents than by any remarkable differences of doctrine. The Nanakpanthis of to-day are known roughly as Sikhs who are Sinhs, followers of the earlier Gurus, who do not think it necessary to follow the ceremonial and social observances inculcated by Guru Govind Sinh. characteristics are, therefore, mainly negative; they do not forbid smoking; they do not insist on long hair, or the other four kakkas; they are not baptized with the pakal; they do not look on the Brahman as superfluity, and so forth. The chief external difference between the Nanakpanthi Sikh and the followers of Guru Govind Sinh is the disposal of the hair; the former, like the Hindu, shaves all but the scalp lock (bodi, choti) and hence is often known as a Muna or Munda ("shaven") or Bodiwâla Sikh, while the Sikh proper wears long hair. They are also known as Sajhdâri. The only form of baptism known among the Nânakpanthis is the ordinary Hindu practice of drinking the footnectar of the Guru and this is not very common. It is known as Charanka pahul or "foot baptism" as opposed to Khaudé ká páhul or "sword baptism" of the Govindi Sikhs. It will thus be seen that from one point of view there is very little difference between a Nanakpanthi and an ordinary lax Hindu."

- 4. In these Provinces also the term Nanakshahi seems to be a The Nanakpanthis of the general term applied to all followers of North-Western Provinces Nanak, and includes six sections: Udasion Nirmala, Kükapanthi, Akali, Sutharashahi and Ragreti. Some are said to be initiated by shaving the hair and washing the body with curds and water; others do not shave the hair and let it grow all their lives. Their body is bathed in Ganges water which the initiate has to drink, and he also washes the feet of the Guru and drinks the water (charavamista). After this the mastra or formula satya sama is whispered into his car, and when he reaches a higher stage he receives the mastra-tatum mosi maka vakya. Any of the four great divisions (varna) may join the order and there is no condition of age. The habits and guise of the various sections differ,
 - (1) Among Udåsis some have the hair shaved, some let it 'grow long. They wear a narrow waisteloth (kopiu) dyed with red ochre (gera) and an aschala or cloth round the waist. They carry a water vessel (kamandal) like Sannyäsis. Those who are heads (makaut) of a monastery wear a head dress (safa) dyed with vermilion.
 - (2) The Nirmalas dress like the Udâsis, but keep their hair long and sometimes wear white clothes.
 - (3) The Kükapanthis wear the hair uncut and wear a turban and ordinary clothes. They live a family life (grifacth) and carry a white reserv.
 - (4) The Akâlis wear the hair long and wear a waist hand (jdn-ghiya) and a black, and sometimes a white, turban. They are sometimes family men and sometimes wandering assetics. They wear an iron ring (chahra) in the turban and an iron rosary. To the Brâhmanical thread (janen) they tie a small knife and wear an iron ring (kara) on the waist.
 - (5) The Suthrashâhis are both house-keepers and mendicants. They beat two sticks together and sing the praises of Guru Nânak or some other worthy of the sect. They wear a white dress with a strip of black cloth round the neck and a turban of the same colour. This cloth is usually of wool.

- (6) The Ragretis are said to be the lowest of all and to be like Chamars. They are followers of Garu Govind Sinh. They are apparently the same as the Rangretas of the Panjab where they are classed as a sub-division of the Chulma sweepers.
- 5. Udåsis and Nirmalas live on cooked food which they beg both at houses and at regular alms-houses Occupation. (kshebra). Many of them have an income of their own or are maintained by rich disciples. They ask for alms with the cry Nardyan ! They will eat kachchi prepared by a Brahman, Kshatriya or Vaisya and will take pakki from a They will drink water from the hands of any of the four Sûdra. classes. The ascetic class do not marry ; those who adopt a family life marry in their own sect. Some keep concubines and those who are of Südra origin allow widow marriage, Ascetics eat only once a day ; the others twice. The use of tobacco, spirits and mest is prohibited. But some of the Udasis smoke and use snull. Those who have adopted a family life eat and drink seconding to the custom of the caste from which they originally sprang. They have cooking vessels like ordinary Hindus. They do not officiate as priests in Hindu temples. Their own temple is known as tangat, and the granth or sacred book of Nanak is worshipped there. Their chief place of pilgrimage is Amritsar, but they also go to Jaggannithe Badrikasrama, Setbandh Rameswar and Dwarika, where they worship the idols of the shrine. They salute each other with the phrase " Jay Gwru ki fatch ! " " Victory to the Teacher." Udasis in saluting each other use the word Dandwat " obeisance." The Gribusthas and Mathdharis, the family men and abbots are cremated; the bodies of the ascetic class are thrown into a river. Besides the Granth they revere the five deities (Pauchdeva), Brahma, Vishnu, Siva and the Sakti. The duties of those who act as Gurus are to read the Scriptures, to ponder over the Vedanta philosophy, to give religious instruction according to the Upanishads, to give advice to their disciples. Whatever their disciples offer the Gurus take and in all religious matters they are consulted.

Nânbâi, Nânbâ, Nânpaz.—(Persian Nãu "bread") the baker enste. In the cities they call themselves Rotiwâla or Biskutwâla "biscuit maker." He either purchases flour himself, and sells English bread (dabbal roti) or he cooks dishes prepared by his customers. All these recorded at the last census were Muhammadans. The 55 caste is, of course, entirely occupational and they intermarry freely with other Muhammadans.

Distribution of Nanbais according to the Ceneus of 1891.

Diera	OTS.	-		Numbers.	Diag	LICTS.		Numbers.
Meant .				89	Ghäsipur		,	64
Mathura				3	Gorakhpur	i.		743
Agm .				120	Azamgarh			58
Farrukhābād.			,	185	Lucknow			243
Mainpuri				19	Unto .			48
Etawah .			į,	71	Ráč Bareli			12
Etab .				10	Sitspor .			33
Budgun .				21	Hardei .			58
Morádábád		. 1		55	Kheri .			19
ShahjabAspur	. 1			290	Bahraich			32
Cawnpur		2	l,	26	Sultanpur			22
Fatehpur	. \	42	į,	9	Partibgach	1		11
Lalitpur				1	100	To	ZAZ	2,177

Nandwâni. —A sept of Oudh Râjputs, who were, in Sîtapur, the predecessors of the Gaur Râjputs.

Naqshbandi, Naqshbandiya.—An order of Muhammadan Faqirs which was founded by Khwaja Pir Muhammad Naqshband, whose tomb is in the Kasar-i-Urfan at Bukhara. "This man and his father were both manufacturers of brocade, hence the name Naqshband or the 'pattern maker.' The sect was introduced into India by Shaikh Ahmad Sirbandi, whose priestly genealogy is traced back to Abu-Bakr, the first Khalifa. The Naqshbandis worship entirely by the zikr-i-khoft or the 'silent process,' sitting perfectly calm and quiet, and repeating the Kalima under their breath. They often sit immersed in meditation (maraqabah), quite motionless, with the head bent, and the eye closed or fixed on the ground. All singing and music they utterly repudiate, and are extremely strict adherents of the institutes and traditions of orthodox Muhammadanism. The spiritual guides of the order do not sit apart from their disciples, but, ranging them in a circle, seat themselves by their sides, with a view of communicating their own mystic virtues to the minds of their followers by some sort of hidden magnetism.¹" They have a practice of going about begging with a lamp in their hands, whence the proverb Chirdgh ranshan murdd hāsil, "The lamp is lighted and the wishes fulfilled."

¹ Stiaper Selllement Report, 39.

Distribution of the Nagshbandis according to the Census of 1891.

Dieze	Districts.			Numbers.	Dist	niors			Numbera
Sabaranpur				7	Gorakhpur				8
Muzaffarnagar				1	Azamgarh			Ų	491
Malupuri .				93	Lucknow				5
Etiwah .	,		3	13	Paizābād	60			27
Pilibhit .				1	1381	SHA			-
Allahahad			١,	15	1	Ton	AL		658

Narauliya.—An influential Râjput sept in Ghâzipur, who claim to be a branch of the Parihâr, and to take their name from Narwar in Gwâlior. They are among the earlier settlers and say that their ancestors killed the Chero Râja, while he was in a state of intoxication, and occupied his dominions. They are inordinately proud, passionate, and extravagant, and have lost a large part of their ancestral property. They claim to belong to the Kasyapa gotra.

Nat a (Sanskrit nata, " a dancer,") a tribe of so-called gypsy dancers, aerobate, and prostitutes who are found scattered all over the Province. The problem of the origin and ethnological affinities of the Nats is perhaps the most perplexing within the whole range of the ethnography of Northern India, and the enquiries, of which

¹ Panjab Census Report, 196.

² Oldham, Ghaeipur Memo., I, 61.

Seased on information collected at Mirrapur and notes by Bábu Badri-náth, Deputy Collector, Khari; M. Niyáz Ahmad, Fatehpur; A. B. Bruce, Esq., C. S., Gházipur; Bábu Sánwal Dás, Deputy Collector, Hardei; M. Gopál Prasád, Naib Taheildar, Etáwah; the Deputy Inspectors of Schools, Sháhjabánpur, Budáan, Bijnor.

the result is given here, leave its solution almost as uncertain as ever. The real fact seems to be that the name Nat is an occupational term which includes a number of different clans who have been grouped together merely on account of their common occupation of dancing, prostitution, and performance of various primitive industries.

- 2. The same people are found also beyond the boundaries of these Provinces. Thus they appear to be identical, at least in occupation, with the Kolhâtis of Bombay, who are also known as Dombari, and are "rope dancers and tumblers, as well as makers of the small buffalo horn pulleys which are used with east ropes in fasten-They also make hide combs and gunpowder flasks. When a girl comes of age, she is called to choose between marriage and prostitution. If, with her parents' consent, she wishes to lead a married life, she is well taken care of and carefully watched. If she chooses to be a tumbler and a prostitute, she is taken before the easte council, a feast is given, and with the consent of the council she is declared a prostitute. The prostitutes are not allowed to cat with other Kolhatis, except with their own children. Still, when they grow old, their caste-fellows support them. They worship Amba Bhawani, Hanuman, Khandoba, and the cholera goddess Marisi; but their favourits and, as they say, their only living gods are the bread-winners or hunger-scarers, the drum, the rope, and the balancing pole."1
- 3. Of the same people in the Dakkhin, Major Gunthorpe surites:—"The Kolhātis belong to the great Sānsya family of robbers and claim their descent from Mallanûr, the brother of Sānsmal. There are two tribes, Dukar Kolhātis and Kam or Pāl Kolhātis. The former are a non-wandering criminal tribe, whereas the latter are a non-wandering criminal class. Depraved in morals, the males of both tribes subsist to a great extent by the prostitution of some of their females, though let it be said to the credit of the former that they are not so bad as the latter. They labour for themselves by cultivating land, by taking service as village watchmen, or by hiring themselves to villages to destroy that pest of Indian farmers, the wild hog, and above all they are professional robbers.

Bombay Gazetter, XX, 186, ag.
 Notes on Oriminal Tribes, 46, agg. The Kelhètis take their name from Kelhét, the bamboo on which they perform.—Bombay Gazetter, XII, 123, sq.

Kam Kolhâtis, on the other hand, are a lazy, good-for-nothing class of men who, beyond making a few combs and shuttles of bone, will set their hands to no class of labour, but subsist mainly by the immoral pursuits of their women. At every large fair may be seen some of the portable huts of this tribe, made of grass, the women decked in jewels and gaudy attire sitting at each door, whilst the men are lounging lazily at the back. The males of the Dukar Kolhâti tribe are a fine munly set of fellows, and obtain the distinction of Dukar, 'hog' from the fact of their hunting the wild, and breeding the domesticated pig."

- 4. Again we have in Bengal a people known as Nar, Nat, Nartak or Nâtak, who form the dancing and musician class of Eastern Bengal; on the other hand many of the people whom in these Provinces we class as Nats, such as the Bâzigar, Sapera, and Kabûtri, are classed in Western Bengal with the Bediya, who in Northern India are undoubted kinsfelk of the Sânsya, Hâbûra, and similar vagrant races.
- 5. Lastly, of the same people in the Panjab, Mr. Ibbetson writes :- "The Nat, with whom I include the Bazigar, form a gypsy tribe of vagrant habits, who wander about with their families, settling for a few days or weeks at a time in the vicinity of large villages or towns, and constructing temporary shelters of grass. In addition to practising acrobatic feats and conjuring of a low class, they make articles of grass, straw, and reeds for sale; and in the centre of the Panjab are said to act as Mirasis, though this is perhaps doubtful. They often practise surgery and physic in a small way, and are not free from suspicion of sorcery. They are said to be divided into two main classes, those whose males only perform as acrobats and those whose women, called Kabûtri, perform and prostitute themselves. About three-quarters of their number returned themselves as Hindus, and most of the rest as Musalmans. They mostly marry by circumambulation (pkera) and burn their dead; but they are really outcastes, keeping many dogs, with which they hunt and ent the vermin of the jungles. They are said especially to reverence the goddess Devi, Guru Tegh Bahådur, the Guru of the Sikh scavengers, and Hanumao, or the monkey god, the last because of the acrobatic powers of monkeys. They very generally trace their origin to Mårwår; and they are found all over the Province, except on the frontier, where they are almost unknown."

Risley, Tribes and Caster, II 129.
S Panjab Bihnography, section 588.

- 6. There seems, then, very little doubt that under the general name Nat are included various tribes; some of whom are closely allied to the vagrant, criminal races, like the Sânsyas, Beriyas, and Hâbûras; and as we shall find a well pronounced totemistic section system among some of the so-called sub-castes, it seems possible that they have decided Dravidian relationship.
- 7. As has been already stated, the tribal organization of the Nats is most complex. Everywhere Tribal organisation. they merge with the regular vagrant tribes, and where to draw the line is practically impossible. In the last Census, about two-thirds of the Nats in these Provinces declared themselves as Hindus and one-third as Muhammadans, Of the Hindus we find ten main sub-castes :- The Brijbâsi, who take their name from their supposed country of origin, Braj or Mathum, and its neighbourhood. Next come the Gual or "cowherds," some of whom claim a Jat and others an Ahir origin. The Jogila seem to be connected in name with the vagrant, criminal Jogis. The Kabûtara, who take their name from the pigeon (kabdlar), are prostitutes so-called from characteristic wooing of the bird. The Kalabiz is literally "a tumbler or juggler." The Karnitak is supposed to come from the Karnita country, the modern Karnstie in Madras, The Mahawat is so called from the Sanskrit Maldmötra, "a great officer of state" or an "elephant driver," an occupation to which the word is now generally applied. The Mirdaha is literally "a village ruler" (Persian, mirdah), and now-a-days the word is usually applied to a man who carries a chain for a surveyor. The Rathaur is the name of a famous Råjput sept; and Sapera (Sanskrit, sarpakāraka) is literally "a snake catcher."
- 8. But this is far from exhausting the tribal organization of the Nats. Thus Mr. Carnegy 1 divides the Oudh Nats into eight sub-castes:—First, the Gwâliyâri Nats or those of Gwâliar, with three sections, Kapûri, Bhâtu and Sarwâni. Of these the Kapûri appear to take their name from the Sanskrit karpara, "camphor;" the Bhâtu are seemingly the same as the Bhâtu or Bhântu, a sub-easte of the Sansyas. The men of this sub-caste buy cattle for butchers, while the women are cuppers, dentists, and aurists. They are Hindus, bury their dead, and drink inordinately. Secondly, the Sanwat, who are Muhammadans. They also supply butchers, and sing the praises of Alha and Udal, the heroic Banapher warriors, who were afterwards subject to the Rathaurs, from whom this sub-caste claims descent, Thirdly, Brijbasi, who are Hindus. The men walk on high stilts and the women show their confidence by dancing and singing under them. They eat pork, drink spirits and bury their dead. They say that they came to Braj or Mathura after the capture of Chithor, which is the starting point of the traditions of so many other eastes. Fourthly, the Bachgoti, who are Hindus and connected by Mr. Carnegy with the Rajput sept of the same name. The men wrestle and play single stick; the women are deprayed. They bury their dead. Fifthly, the Bijaniya or Bajaniya, who seem to take their name from the music (bdja) accompanying their performances. They are Hindus and dance on the tight rope. They are addicted to drinking; they bury their dead in an upright position. Sixthly, the Bariya, who are Hindus. They do not perform, but attend feasts and eat scraps. The women are depraved and all are addicted to drinking. They bury their dead. Seventily, the Mahawat, who are Musalmans by religion. They are said to be expert in treating rheumatism and deal in cattle. Drinking is confined to the seniors on the occasion of deaths. Lastly come the Bazigar, or common conjurers, who are given to drinking. They bury their dead.

9. In addition to this enumeration the present survey has produced a long set of diverse lists from different districts. The confusion, as already indicated, seems to have sprung from the practical impossibility of distinguishing the Nat from his allies, the Sansyas and similar tribes. Thus, in Mirzapur we find the Bajaniya, Byādha, Karnātak, Kashmîri, Kalabâz, Mahāwat, Bādi and Malār. From Shāhjahānpur comes a list of Hindu sub-castes, including the Bhāntu, who are Sānsyas, with the Guāl, Ghara, Kalabâz, Kabūtariya, and Lakarbāz, or performers on stilts. From Kheri we find the Bhatiya, who are perhaps the Bhātu of Shāhjahānpur; the Kingariya, who are discussed in a separate article; the Kanjar, who, of course, forms a tribe of his own; the Gulahla, Kalabāz, Rājnat, and Dhārhi, who again are usually classed as a quite different group. The list from Budāon gives Guâl and Brajbāsi, with, as sections, the Kakhera or Kanghigar, "comb makers," and the Banjāra, where we meet a distinct group. In Hardoi we find the Kalabāz, Karnātak, Brijbāsi, and Bāgula; in Bijnor, the Bādi, Guâl, and Keutār, the last of whom are possibly connected with the Kewats. The sub-castes of the Muhammadan Nats are much less well established. In Ghāzipur we find the Panjābi, Goriya, and Hagiya; in Fatehpur, the Meghiya, Dariya, Chhijariya, and Krîm or Karim.

10. The complete Census returns show 386 sections of the Hindu and 205 of the Musalman Nats. They have, as might have been expected, largely adopted the names belonging to other castes and septs, such as Bhântu, Chamargautam, Chamarmangta, Chamarnat, Chamar Sangla, Chamarwa, Chandel, Chaulian, Chhatri, Dhimar, Dhobi, Dom, Ghosi, Gond, Güjar, Guâl, Guâlhans, Jâdon, Kabuli, Kanchan, Kayasth, Khatri, Kori, Korwa, Kormangta, Mainpuri Chauhan, Panwar, Paturiya, Rajput, Rathaur, Sakarwar, Teli. With these are the usual local groups: Brijbasi, Chithauriya, Daryabadi, Gangapari, Indanriya, Jaiswar, Jaypuriya, Kananjiya, Kāshipuri, Lahauri, Mathuriya, Panjabi, Rampuriya, Sribāstam. The Musalman branch show an equally curious mixture of names. We have many distinctively Hindu titles as Bâhman, Bais, Bhadauriya, Chanhan, Gaur, Gujar, Rathaur, and Tomar; regular Musalman names like Chisti, Ghori, Khwaja Mansuri, Khwaja Miyfin, Lodi, Mughal, Nawib, Naumushin, Pathan, Sadiqi, Shaikh, Turkiya, and Yflsufzai; occupational terms and those connecting them with other gypsy tribes, such as Bázigar, Beriya, Büchar, (" Butcher"), Dom, Filwin ("elephant driver"), Kanchan, Mangta (" beggar "), Pahlwan (" wrestler "), Randi (" prostitute "), Sanpwala and Sapera (" snake men "), and Tawlif.

11. The information at present available is much more complete for the Eastern Nats, and it may be well to describe some of their sub-castes with more or less detail.

12. The Bajaniya Nate of Mirzapur have seven sections, which are obviously of totemistic origin. These are The Pajaniya Nate. Makriyana which take their name from makri, "a spider," which no member of the section will kill; Gauharna, which are called from gok the Gangetic alligator or lizard known as the gok samp, which none of them will harm; Declinaik or "leader given by God," the members of this section are generally headmen (chandhari) of the tribe; Bahunaina or "the fly," which takes its name from having many eyes; this insect none of them will injure; Gagoliya of which they are unable to give any explanation; Sânpaneriya, none of whom will kill the snake (sdap); and Sûgunâik, none of whom will injure the parrot (suga). These sections are exogamous, but there is no other prohibition against intermarriage, and it is notorious that Nats marry very close blood relations. They say that they were originally residents of Mārwār, and passed into Mirzapur through Bundelkhand. The migration is said to have occurred about a century ago. They have no other tribal tradition, except that they were created by Parameswar, whose pleasure it was that they should be acrobate and ropedancers.

- 13. They have their own council known as Panth, presided over by a head man (mutdus), who is assisted by a messenger (harkdrs), whose business is to collect the elders for meetings. No woman can be divorced for simple adultery. Her paramour is merely fined five rupees, which is spent on drinking. They cannot marry again while the first wife is alive. They purchase brides, the price according to tribal custom being twenty-five rupees in cash, four rupees worth of sugar, one rupee worth of pulse (ddl), one rupee worth of ghi, two rupees worth of wheat, some turmeric and cakes.
- 14. Concubinage is not allowed. Widows can marry by the ordinary form, which they call glughuma. When the connection is sanctioned by the headman, the future husband goes to the house of the widow, puts hangles and a noso-ring of silver on the woman. Her friends then take the pair into a closed room, where they are left some time to themselves, and in the meantime wine is served round to the brethren. Next morning the husband takes his wife home, and the business is over. The levirate is allowed on the usual conditions; if she marry a stranger, she loses all right to the goods of her first husband.
- 15. A Chamarin midwife attends the mother only for one day. The mother is kept sceluded for six days with a fire and a box of iron for holding lamp-black (kajrasta) near her. The ceremony on the sixth day is known as knabar. The mother bathes and then goes to the nearest well with the bosom of her sheet full of parched grain, with four pice, some powdered sugar and ginger, and two roots of turmeric. When she comes to the well, she lights a lamp, and collecting the lamp-black in her iron box, marks several lines with it and some vermilion on an earthen pot, and puts red lead on the parting of the hair of the women who go with her. She bows in obcisance to the well and returns home, where the parched grain is distributed among her women friends. At the same time the father serves round wine to his male friends, and after that the mother is considered pure.

16. The betrothal is settled by the father of the boy paying five rupees to the girl's father, which is spent on wine for the brethren. A feast is given and the father of the bride sends a bead needlace and a handkerchief for his future son-in-law.

17. When the wedding day is fixed, the bride-price is sent in advance. This is usually five days before the wedding, and during that time the pair are kept at their own houses in a thatched shed in the courtyard. This shed, contrary to the usual Hindu custom, is surrounded with screens. We have here probably a survival of the custom of seclusion at puberty. Every day the pair are anointed with turmeric and oil. A friend takes the bridegroom on his shoulder to the house of the bride, and when they reach her door her relatives make a square, in each corner of which a brass lots is placed. A pice is put into each lots, and the four vessels are joined with a string. Into this enclosure the pair are led, and inside it they make five circuits. This is the binding part of the ceremony. The bride returns to the house and the bridegroom to his friends. That night is spent in eating and drinking, and next morning the bride puts on a dress purchased out of the bride price. The pair stand at the door, and the bride's mother waves a plough yoke (jaa) over their heads for good luck. Then the bride and bridegroom are taken home on the shoulders of two male friends. At the door the boy's mother again waves a plough yoke over them, and the boy, seizing the yoke, runs and demolishes with it the nuntial shed (mdnro) in the courtyard. This concludes the marriage.

18. They bury their dead in their own cemetery. When a person dies they put a copper coin in his mouth as a viaticum. The corpse is taken on a bier and buried with the head to the north and the fest to the south. When the grave is filled, they pour some wine on the ground, and they do the same at the house of the deceased, where wine is served round when they return after the burial. The ceremonies for the repose of the soul arc done some months later, when they can afford to do so. They go to the river side and cook cakes, rice, and pulse. Then they spread a cloth on the ground, on which the ghost is supposed to sit, and the nearest relative taking an earthen cup (purus) and a knife in his hand plunges into the water. He puts the knife on the cup and sits down till the cup, which is placed on his head, gets full of water. This cup full of water he brings cut and places under the cloth on which the ghost is supposed to be sitting. Again he places four cups of water, one at each corner of the cloth, and connects them with a thread so as to form a square. In the enclosure thus formed they place a little of each kind of food for the refreshment of the ghost, and pray to it to partake of the food. They then wait for a few minutes while it is supposed to be eating, and then they address it: "Go and join those who have departed before you." Until this ceremony is performed, the ghost will not pass quietly to the world of the dead. They have no idea of ceremonial impurity, resulting from death.

- 19. Their tribal deities are Hulki Måi, the goddess of cholera, the Vindhyabåsini Devi, Durga-Kåli, and Parameswar. They worship these collectively every year when they return from their annual wanderings. This worship is done in the family kitchen and the only sacrifice is a he-goat with sweet bread and wine. This is their chief festival, and is done either on the tenth (dasmis) of Kārttik or at the Holi. Whonever, during the year, any trouble comes upon them, they make a special offering of sweet bread and wine to the deified ancestors, all of which, after presentation, they consume themselves.
- 20. They regard the Dom and the Heln with special dislike. They do not cat beef or vermin, such as rats; but they cat fewls, fish of every kind, erocodiles, tortoises, and the milgae deer. They drink spirits and use ganja, bhang, and palm wine (tari), but not opium. No respectable Hindu will take food or drink from their hands. They will cat food prepared by any one except a Dhohi, Phsi, Dharker, Dom, or Chamer. The men wear short drawers (jangkiya) turban (pagri), a necklace of white beads (gariya), and carrings (bdls). The women wear a potticent (lakaga), boddies (chols), a black and white bead necklace and car-rings.
- 21. The men are rope-dancers and acrobats. The women beg and prostitute themselves. They usually live in out-of-the-way hamlets away from the village, and during the cold and hot weather they wander about from fair to fair and to the houses of rich people, usually sleeping under trees in the course of their journeys.

take their name from the Sanskrit Fyādhu.

The Byādha Nata.

"a hunter." They are a short, black race, with very large dark eyes, very black hair, which they keep long and unkempt, short beard, whiskers and mustache, and a short, rather broad, nose. Those of Mirzapur are unable to name any of their exogamous sections, and their rules of intermarriage are very vague. They do not even maintain the ordinary formula that the line of the paternal uncle (chacha), maternal uncle (udam), paternal aunt (phdphu), and maternal aunt (udosi) are to be avoided. In short, they have practically no prohibited degrees. Thus a man will marry his son to his own sister's daughter, to his maternal aunt's daughter, and so on.

23. The marriage negotiations are carried on by the maternal uncle (mass;) of the hoy, a custom which may be a survival of the matriarchate. Sometimes one of the meaner Brahmans goes with the envoy. When the match is settled the boy's maternal uncle, brother-in-law, and some of his female relations go to the house of the bride and pay the bride price, which consists of twenty rupees in each, a set of glass bangles (chari), a cocoanut, a betelnut, and a suit of clothes. Those things are given to the mother of the bride. They return after fixing the marriage day. A pavilion (mauro) is erected at the boy's house, and next day he starts for the bride's house. They have no regular Purchit or family priest, but the lucky dates for these events are ascertained from some village Brâhman. All the relations, including the women, which is absolutely opposed to all Hindu usage, accompany the procession. On that day the bride's father entertains the whole party with goat's flesh and rice.

24. When the time comes for the marriage, the bridegreem takes his seat in the pavilien with the bride scated beside him, her mother shading her face with the end of her sheet. Then the bride's female relations rub the pair vigorously with a mixture of oil and turmeric. This is done three times while the ceremony goes on. The binding part of the rite is the rubbing of the parting of the bride's hair with red lead, which is done by the brotherius-law of the bridegroom, the husband of his sister. This is, of course, contrary to all Hindu usage; the boy usually does this rite himself. During the marriage the girl's father performs no rite, which again is very unorthodox. They have no retaring-room

(kokabar) ceremony as among low Hindu castes. When the marriage is over, her father dresses the bride in new clothes, gives her a lota, and sends her off at once with her husband. The age for marriage is fifteen for boys and ten or twelve for girls: as a rule it takes place immediately when the pair have attained puberty.

- 25. Widows are married by the sagái form and the levirate prevails under the usual condition that she marry the younger, not the elder, brother of her late husband. If the younger brother do not claim her, she may marry an outsider with leave of the tribal council. Nothing is paid to the parents of the widow. Her lover is expected to give a goat to the council. When this is done, he puts some oil on the widow's head, while her sister's husband (bahnoi) rubs red lead on the parting of her hair. He then takes her off to his house.
- 26. At child-birth the mother is isolated and attended by the Chamarin midwife. After the fifth day is the chiathi or sixth-day rite when the brethren (dima), men and women, are fed. The Chamarin, who is known as soin, bathes the mother and baby, and gives their clothes and those of the other members of the household to a Dhobi. All the men have their hair shaved. The birth pollution ceases on the twelfth day (baraki), when the mother and child are bathed again. The husband keeps away from his wife for twenty days after her confinement. The Chamarin among these people plasters the delivery-room,—a duty which, among other Hindus, is usually done by the husband's sister (saned). The menstrual pollution lasts for five days, during which the woman is isolated, and her husband cooks for her.
- 27. These Nats say that they came originally from Ratanpur and Biláspur in the Central Provinces. They bury their dead, not in a regular cemetery, but in any convenient place north of the village. The grave lies North and South, and they profess not to care in which direction the corpse is laid. A woman is buried face upwards and a man face downwards. After the burial, they all bathe and return to the house of the deceased, where they sit for a while in the courtyard, wash their hands, and then go home. No food is cooked in the house that day; the family are fed by a neighbour. On the tenth day the brethren assemble at some tank or stream and have their heads shaved. No sacred balls (pivda) are offered. They return to the house of mourning and there they are feasted. If the son of the deceased can afford it, he gives a cup and plate (lota, thali) and a female call to a Brahman. This concludes the death rite.

28. All who can afford it have an annual propitiation of the dead (barse). They do not on this occasion feed the brethren, but give a Brähman some brass vessels. Then he stands up and raising his hands says:—" Children of the dead man! Live in happiness!" They have no regular fortnight of the dead (pitrapaksha), and no srāddha.

29. In the month of Sawan, they worship Hariyali Devi, "the goddess of greenery," who watches the crops. To her a fire offering (hom) is made in the field with sugar and ghi. In Phalgun they burn the old year (sambal jaldna) when they drink and est good food. They observe no other Hindu festival except the Phagua or Holi. On some day in the light fortnight of Asirh, they worship their deceased ancestors (nurakh log). They make a fire offering with sugar and ghi, and sprinkle a little spirits on the ground. This worship is done by the head of the family at home. Their tribal doity is Bhawshii Devi, who is worshipped every third year in the light fortnight of Phalgun. To her is offered a black goat, which is fed on rice before being sagrificed. The worshipper does the sacrifice himself. When sickness or other trouble comes upon them they sometimes get the Baiga to sacrifice a goat to the vill age gods (deokar). Men and women both cat the flesh of the victims to Bhawani. She has no temple, but most people make a stone or mud platform near their houses, where she is supposed to dwell. When they cat, they throw a little food and water on the ground for the ancestral ghosts, and say-" If any of you are hungry, come and eat."

80. The women of this tribe do not tattoo; this is done by the Badi Nats. The women get themselves tattooed with little spets on both wrists: but the custom is not well defined. If an unmarried woman is caught in an intriguo with a member of the caste, the council order him to pay twenty rupees to her father, and she is then made over to him by a sort of informal marriage. In the same way, if a married woman is caught with a man her paramour pays the husband twenty rupees and takes over the lady. If her lover be of another caste she is permanently expelled. They profess to have stringent rules to enforce chastity among their women, but they are not free from the suspicion of occasionally prostituting their girls. They have no occupation but begging, and do not dance, play, sing, or perform acrobatic feats. Their women wear glass bangles (charle), bead necklaces (gariya) of all colours, anklets (pairi) and arm ornaments (charle). They do not wear nose-rings. They will eat all ordinary meat except beef, monkeys, horses, tame pigs, and snakes They swear by the words: "If I lie, may I eat beef," or on their sons' heads; or they fill a lote of water and swear by Kansasur Deota, "the godling of brass." Until a child is five or six years old they do not care what he cats; but when he arrives at that age he is obliged to conform to caste custom, and to commemorate this event, if they can afford it, they put a silver bangle on his wrist.

63

31. This sub-caste of Nats is quite distinct from the Bajaniya, but they have the same sections, Gohna or The Karnhtak Nats. Gouharna, Makriyana, Suganaik, Deedinsik, Gagoliya, Sânpaneriya and Waniawaraba. There are exogamous ; but like all Nats they are very careless about prohibited degrees, and first cousins are allowed to marry. The highest section is the Deodináik, and then follow the Suganáik, Gohna, Gagoliya and Sånpaneriya. Some of them are Hindus and some Muhammadans. Those who are Hindus worship the Vindhyahasini Devi of Bindhachal or Durga. They will eat the leavings of all high castes and are hence known as Khushhaliya or "those in prosperous circumstances," They dance on ropes and with cow horns tied to their feet; their women do not tattee other women. Some of the better looking girls are reserved for prostitution, and these are never married in the tribe. One condition of marriage among them is that both parties should be of the same age. The Muhammadan branch in Etawah allow the levirate, and a widow can marry either the elder or younger brother of her late husband. There, it is said, they will admit any one into the tribe except a Bhangi, Dhanuk, Chamar, Teli, Dhobi or Bâri. When the initiate is not a Muhammadan they send for the Qazi, who recites the Kalima over him. A girl who is seduced, whether her paramour be a tribesman or not, can be restored to caste rights on payment of a fine; but if her lover be a low caste man, like a Dom or Dharkar, she is permanently expelled. If her lover be a Brühman or Rajput, she is admitted back, and can be married in the caste,

82. These people have no occupation except loafing, begging,

Reshmiri Nats.

of the women are married in the tribe, and even the married women are sometimes prostituted. Most of their real wives are girls of other castes, who are bought by them or kidnapped. This is a costly and dangerous business; hence the number of old bachelors among them is very large. When they do marry in the tribe they observe no prohibited degrees and marry cousins. No regard is paid to the paternity of their children. Some of them are Hindus and some Muhammadans. The Hindus employ low Brahmans as their priests, and burn their dead. The Muharnmadans bury. Hindus worship their ancestors in the month of Kuar, and to the east of the Province their favourite deities are the Vindhyabásini Devi of Bindháchal and Garbara Devi. These are worshipped in the month of Aghan with the sacrifice of a gost and an offering of cakes and sweetments. The Hindu branch do not eat boof and pork. They est mutton, goat's flesh, venison, and the like. They will not eat the flesh of the horse, camel, jackal or rats. The Muhammadans do not eat pork, but use beef and drink spirits. They eat the camel and fowls and the other animals which the Hindu branch of the tribe eat.

33. This branch of the Nats has exagamons sections, but few of them are able to give a list of them. In The Kalalaks or Gara Note. Hardoi their sections are Savai, Ghughasiya. Panchhiya, Jimishhiya. Their tradition is that they were once Kshatriyas, and were forced to deny their caste when Ala-ad-din conquered Chithor in 1808 A.D. Another account of them is that their first ancestor was a Dhinwar, and that they were begotten by him from a Teli woman. They wander about the country in rude huts (sirki) made of reeds. To the east of the Province they appear to conduct their marriages in one of these huts with a rude form of the circumambulation (bhanwari) ceremony. They have a strange legend that Parameswar was once incarnated as a Nat at Sambhal in the Moradabad District, and became such an accomplighed acrobat that in one bound he fixed a cart and in a second some mill stones in a tree which no Kalabêz has been since able to take down. Their occupation is rope-dancing and other acrobatic feats. They are fairly strict Hindus, and are said not to prostitute their women In Outh their favourite deity seems to be Hardeo or Hardang Lala, the godling of sholers. From Rtah it is reported that a distinction is drawn between the Baghaliya Nats, who dance on ropes, and the Kalabáz, who do somersaults and other athletic feats. They are very fond of singing the Alba song to the accompaniment of the drum. During the rains these people move about from vilNAT. 70 lage to village. It is understood that only one party encamps in the village at a time, and no other party is allowed to intrude on them until the performance is over. Wilful intrusion of this kind is severely punished by the tribal council. Even if any other body of Nats perform there, the fees go to the party which is first in possession of the place. The women do not perform or dance, sing or beg. They have regular circles within each of which the bones of the dead of the tribe are buried under a mesonry platform, as is the rule among the Habûras, and to these the tribal worship is performed,

34. The Mahawat Nats take their name from the Sanskrit Mahdmaten " a high officer of state" or " an The Mahilwat Note. elephant driver," They say themselves that keeping elephants was their original occupation, and that from this they derive their name. They are also known as Baid, "physician;" (Sanskrit Faidya) and Lohangi, because they use surgical instruments of iron (loka) in treating their patients. They say that they are divided into four endogamous sub-castes; Turkata Pahlwan, Kapariya, Chamarmangta and Lohangi Nats. Of these the first and fourth are Muhammadans and the second and third Hindus. The Turkata Pahlwans teach wrestling and athletic exercises and their women tattoo. The Kapariyas are dealt with in a separate article. The Chamarmangta are so called because they beg (uduqua) from Chamars. In Mirzapur the true Lohangi Nats marry second cousins. They fix their earliest settlement at Kara Manikpur on the Ganges. They say that they are descended from Hathila who has now been deified as one of the Panchon Pir. They worship him with prayers and the sacrifice of a fowl in the month of Jeth. This worship is done by Dafillis, who, while they make the offering sing songs in honour of Hathila. The proper offering to him is a red cock. This sacrifice is offered only by married men, and they alone are allowed to consume the offering.

35. Their domestic ceremonies are of much the usual Nat type. They pay as a bride-price twenty or some multiple of twenty rupees. Infidelity in women is punished by a compulsory feast, and similarly a man is put out of easte if he cohabit or cat with a Domin or women of the menial tribes. They have a tribal council, the chairman of which is appointed at each sitting. The levirate and widow marriage are allowed under the usual conditions. Even when they profess to be Muhammadaus, it is alleged that they perform no rite of circumcision (musalmdui). They have practically no marriage coremony. The girl's father attires her in a new dress, puts bangles and ear-ornaments (tarki) on her and then she is sent into the hut where her husband receives her. If he can afford it, he feeds the brethren. They bury their dead in any convenient place. When they bury a corpse, they put his tools with him, so that he may be able to support himself in the next world. When any one falls sick, they sacrifice fowls at the graves of their ancestors and make an offering of spirits and tobacco.

71 NAT.

- 36. They are nominally Muhammadans, but carry out hardly any of the rules of the faith. They worship the goddess known as Bhîtari and Sâyari, and their deified ancestor Hathîla. Bhîtari is worshipped on a Monday or Tuesday in the fields with a sacrifice of goats, which only the married males are allowed to eat. She is the protectress of their camp and children. Sayari is the patroness of their trade and is worshipped in the tent or but with an offering of a black cock and some spirits. The Devi of Bindhichal also receives the sacrifice of a goat. The only festival which they observe is the Kajari, when they sing, drink, and practise a good deal of rude licenticusness. They have the usual fear of ghosts and demons. When a child suffers from the Evil Eye, they get a handful of dust from an exorcisor, and wave it over the child's head. They drink spirits, cat beef, goat's flesh, mutton, fowls, camels, venison, etc. They abstain from pork. They will not eat from the hands of a Dom, Dhobi, Musahar, Kol, or similar low castes, and no one will eat their food.
- 87. The Mahawat has all the appearance of a degraded outcaste. He wears dirty clothes and a filthy rag as a turban, keeps his hair long and unkempt, and has round his neck strings of coral beads or ghumri seeds. In his ears he wears iron rings. The women wear a petticont (lakaga), sheet(sdri), with strings of beads round their necks, bracelets, and thick anklets. The men carry in a wallet rade lances (nashtar), a cupping horn (singhi), and some hollow bamboo pipes, with which he extracts by suction the matter out of abscesses and sore ears. It need handly be said that he is quite ignorant of cleanness and antiseptics, and his instruments must be responsible for much horrible infection. He takes the "worm" out of carious teeth, bleeds and lances abscesses, and cleans the wax out of ears, in which department of his business he is known as Kanmailiya (Kdn "ear," mailiya, "filth"), Khutkarha or Khuntkarha, "the man of the spike " (khinta) or Singhiwâla. He wanders about the villages calling out Baid / Baid / "Who wants a doctor?" He is altogether rather a loathsome vagrant. Some of them are skilled fishermen and trap hares.

38. The Badi sub-caste of Nats are said to take their name from the Sanskrit vddys," a musical instrument." They are also known as Paras Badi (paras, "the philosopher's stone ") and Tumriwala Madari (tumri, "a hollow gourd"). In Mirzapur they specially beg among the Manjhis. They profess to have seven exogamous sections. These, when compared with those of the Manjhi-Majhwars, are, in many cases, identical, and they explain that like the Pataris they were priests of the Majhwars. It will be seen that the Pathris also follow the section organization of the Majhwars, and there must apparently have been some ancient connection between the tribes. As might have been expected, the explanation given of these section names is in some respect different from that of either the Manjhis or Pataris, but there seems little doubt that they are in the main of totemistic origin. The names of the sections, as given by the Mirzapur Badis, are Jaghat, which they say is a kind of snake; Ure, which they say means "a pig"; Marai, "a kind of tree; " Neta, which they say means "the mucus of the nose," in which form they came out of the nose of their first ancestor. The Neshtri was one of the Vedic priests, and the name may represent their ancient office, but is more probably some totem which has now been forgotten. The next section is Netam, which is found among the Majhwars. Of its meaning the Badis can give no explanation. Jhinjhariya is said by them to mean "a kind of bamboo." Next comes the Oika section. This is also found among the Majhwars. The Badis have an absurd story that a Badi woman had a son by a Muhammadan, and after they had admitted him to tribal rights, they called him Oika "What? Who?" because they could not admit him to any regular section.

89. Their account of themselves is that they came from Garh Mandla, in the Central Provinces, with the Majhwars, and there is nothing in their appearance and manners which makes it improbable that they may really be of Gond descent, and may have been beggar priests who accompanied the Majhwars when they emigrated along the hills towards the East.

40. The legend of their connection with the Majhwars they tell in this way:—Mahådeva Eåba once created four men. To one he gave the musical instrument known as någåaman or "snake pipe," with which serpents are expelled, and his own drum, the damara, whereby they might earn their living by playing and begging; to the second, he gave the musical instrument known as the kikari, by playing which he might support himself; to the third, he gave a loom, and he became a Panka; to the fourth, he gave the means of smelting iron, and he became an Agariya. This legend thus brings the Bådis into contact with the Agariyas and Pankas who are certainly of Pravidian origin. The first man, according to the story, came to the Majhwârs, who fed him and appointed him to be the receiver of their alms. These sections are divided into three groups, of whom the Jaghat, Marai, and Jinjhariya intermarry; so do the Urê and Neti, and, lastly, the Netām and the Oīka.

73 NAT.

- 41. They have a tribal council under a hereditary chairman (makto), who arranges marriages, sanctions divorces and fines those who offend against casto rules. The fine ranges, according to the means of the offenders, from one and quarter to twenty rupees. If he fail to pay the fine, he is excommunicated for twelve years. The intermarriage of first-cousins is allowed, and they marry by preference their cousins on the mether's side.
- 42. Widow marriage and the levirate are allowed. There is no ceremony in widow marriage, except that the Mahto admonishes them in the presence of the brethren to behave well to each other. In the marriage ceremony there is nothing peculiar, except that the father or mother of the bride washes the feet of the bridegroom, a rite which is known as sad chlorus. When the bridegroom goes to fetch his bride, he carries a how and arrows, and most part of the rite is done at the house of the bridegroom, possibly a survival of marriage by capture.

43. The Bâdis of Mirzapur cremate their dead, unless they are unmarried, in which case they are buried. The ritual is practically the same as that in force among the Majhwârs.

44. The religion of the Bådis is largely made up of ancestor worship. They offer to them, at the Holi, goats, cakes, and sweet-meats, as a propitiation. They say that formerly the Patāris officiated as their priests, but now do so no longer. They accept no services from Bråhmans. Their chief objects of worship, except their deceased ancestors, are Juâlamukhi, Bûrhi Mâta "the old mother" and Masan, the deity of the cremation ground. Juâlamukhi and Bûrhi Mâta are worshipped on the seventh day of Sawan. Juliamukhi receives a she-goat and cakes; Bûrhi Mata, a libation of milk and treacle mixed together. This worship is performed in the court-yard of the house. They worship Masan at any time when trouble overtakes the household. At the last Census 1,929 persons recorded themselves as worshippers of Masan.1 They also regard their snake pipe (udgiamas) as a fetish. A piece of ground is plastered, the instrument laid within it, and a white cook is sacrificed. Some spirits is also poured on the ground. Mari is worshipped when cholera appears in the village. She receives the szorifice of a hog and a libation of spirits. When snakes appear in considerable numbers, they lay milk and parched rice at their holes. They observe only three festivals, the Sawani, when they worship Jufilamukhi and Bûrhi Mata; the ninth (naums) of Chait, when there is a worship of Burhi Mata, and the Holi, when they worship the sainted dead. They particularly respect the cotton tree (semal) which is the abode of Bhûts. They awear on the head of their sons or by holding a pig's tail at the shrine of their delty. They have a special detestation for the Dom. They will not eat beef, but they use all the animals, birds, and fish which are eaten by the Majhwars and similar Dravidian races. They will not eat meat while the funeral rites of a member of the sub-caste are being performed. Wine is the only intoxicant they habitually use. They salute one another by the pallagi form, and seniors give a blessing to their juniors. Only Korwas and Doms will out from their hands. They will cat Kachhi cooked by Ahirs and Majinwirs. The women wear a sheet (sari) nose-rings, ear ornaments (tarki) and arm ornaments, known as laheaniya churla and heavy anklets (pairi.)

NAT. 74

45. The Bâdi is a loafing beggar, who wanders about among the Majhwârs and begs alms, playing on the någdawan pipe, the drum(damaru) and the cymbals (jhānjā). The special business of the women is tattooing girls, and when marching through villages you will often hear a girl shricking, and, on enquiring the cause you will find her tied down on a bed, while her friends sing to encourage her to bear the pain, and a Bâdi woman operates on her arms, breasts or legs, with two or three English needles tied together with thread. The punctures are rubbed with a mixture of lampblack and milk. The best lampblack is produced from the smoke of the wood of the scalai tree.

¹ For Mastin we Introduction to Popular Religion and Polisians, 84.

- 46. This sub-caste is said to take its name from the Sanskrit, mallaka-kdra," the maker of a coccanut-oil vessel." Those in Mirzapur refer their origin to Lohârdaga in Chota Nâgpur, and say that they were originally Sunârs. They even now procure Brâhmans and barbers from that part of the country whence they say they emigrated some two generations ago. They have their own tribal council known as Kutumb bidi or " the family of the brothren," with a president (maklo).

 Offences against caste discipline are punished by fines usually amounting to twelve or thirteen rupees. This is spent in food and drink for members.
- 47. The prohibited degrees are first-cousins on both sides. The usual age for marriage is twelve, or when the pair attain puberty. Marriages are arranged by the friends on both sides, but runaway matches appear not to be uncommon. The price of the bride is fixed by tribal custom at sixteen rupees. Polygamy is allowed, and the only privilege of the senior wife is that she alone is allowed to perform the worship of the family gods. Infidelity in women is forgiven on a fine being paid to the council. The council has the power of ordering divorce and a divorced woman can be remarried in the caste by the sagái form, after the provides a dinner for the brethren. Widow marriage and the levirate are permitted under the usual conditions. Their domestic ceremonies are much the same as those of the Majhwars, among whom they live.
- 48. They are Hindus by religion and their tribal deities are Kali, Burhi Mai and Bhairon. They worship Kali at the Nauratra of Chait in the house chapel (deoghar) with an offering of a goat, and cakes, milk, and wine. Bhairon receives the same offering, but to him a blood offering is very soldem made. The women have no gods peculiar to themselves. They fast on Sundays and offer to the sun godling, Sûraj Nârâyan, rice boiled with milk in a new earthen pot. They bow to him as he rises in the morning. They also bow to the new moon, but have no special form of worship. They ceensionally consult a Sakadwipi Brahman, but the real tribal priest is the Mahto or headman. He acts for them at marriages and deaths. Most houses have a chapel (deog.ker) with a mound of earth, on which are rude representatives of the tribal gods. They swear on the feet of Brahmans, on a leaf of the pipal tree or fulasi leaf, by holding a cow's tail or a piece of copper. They worship Hariyari Devi, "the goddess of greenery," as the protectress of crops.
 - 49. They eat pork, mutton, goat's flesh, venison, fowls, and fish.

Before they eat, they offer a little food to Devi. No one but a Dom will eat food cooked by them, and they will eat and drink from the hands of Kharwars and Majhwars.

- 50. Their chief occupation is making brass or pewter rings, boxes to hold the lime used in chewing betel (chuna ati), and various ornaments used by women.
- 51. From Etah it is reported that among the Guâl Nats, when a child is born, the clansmen are invited to be present at the naming rite. Food is distributed, but the attendance of a Brâhman is unnecessary. Among the Kalabâz Nats, a Brâhman is sent for on the tenth day after birth, and be names the child, receiving in return a ration of uncooked grain (*idåa).
- 52. There is a class of Nats known as Tasmablz, who are so called because they practise one of the Patois of the Nata. numerous games played by thimble-riggers in England, which was taught to them in 1802 by a British soldier,1 The game is played thus :- A strap is doubled and folded up in different shapes. The art is to put the stick in such a place that the strap (tasms), whence they derive their name, when unfolded, comes out double. They have an argot of their own of which the following are examples :- When they are sitting on the road side and see a yokel coming, they say Dhurayi ; Taradé means "to begin to play;" Asrade, "give back the money to this fellow or he will make a row;" Hakeri, "a European;" banriedla "a policeman ;" Hannedle, "a mounted other;" Thoe, "an official;" Beli means "one of the gang informing." In one of the earliest accounts of the Bazigar Nats, Captain Richardson 2 gives some specimens of their patois, most of which consist of more inversions of syllables. Thus, Kdy (49), "fire;" udus (bdus), "bamboo;" kodd (ydd), "remembrance; " komar (umr), "age; " maldas (taldas), "search; " Kindustan (Hindustan), "India ; " nagir (fogle) " beggar ; " and so on. The Bajaniya Nats of Mirzapur call mother jd; son, dikuro; wife, biari ; brother-in-law, bankewi ; father-in-law, haro; motherin-law, han; elder brother's wife, bhadai; father's sister, phai. Their numerals are - one ek, two baidus, three tana, four syarns, five pan, six sad, seven Adt, eight ath, nine nan, ten dahad.

¹ Selection, Records of Government, North-Western Provinces, 1, 812, 29.

Asiatic Researches, VII, 451, aq.

Distribution of Nats according to the Census of 1891.

TOTAL		734			-		_	_		_		_
stabaimanderK	28	468	354	461	708	198	67	198	136	63	198	91
exod3O	1	286	251	1,046	929	244	879	480	210	788	737	264
Sepera	1	Ŧ	1	69	1.5	1	65	99	:	127	211	E
Rethaux.	E	ī	1	i	923	1	Ŧ	349	35	188	134	26
Mabrille.	ě	ŧ	144	1	68	ŧ	NO.	22	201	90	*	i
Mahaman.	1	:	1	I	-	1	1		ŧ	1	:	i
Marnatale.	ŧ	Q.	1	I	f	4	A	88	4	96	145	1-
Ralabás.	ł	ı	1	1	:	ŧ	1	5	200	55	60	112
лерист	1	1	1	i	i	1	1	9	1	65	96	i
Jogila.	1	i	I	ı	ī	I	1	I	:		I	I
Chat.	ŧ	1	1	3	25	1	i	1	202		189	1
Bellbani.	I	1	1	:	1	1	1	16	378	80	16	100 0 į.
					٠
DISTRICTS.										÷
Dist						4		×
	Debra Dûn	Sabaranpur	Muzaffarnagar	Meerut .	Bolandshahr	Aligarh .	Mathurs .	Agm .	Farrukhabid	Mainpari .	Btawnh .	Elah .

Distribution of Nats according to the Census of 1991—continued.

Dispaiors.				Moradabad	Shilt jabingur
3				•				0.		*
Defilies.	1,244	i	11	9	551	803	130	101	i	1	19	1
-Mad	888		816	689	69		1	1	ŧ	i	:	1
Jogiles	9	1	282	1	53	31	:	1	ŧ	:	i	E
-arthdaM	81	306	15	47	1	1	1	1	1	1	i	:
Xalabakx.	9	-	169	90	339	165	ph	,	:	ŧ	E	1
Kernstuk.	141	29	80	30	1	7	9	1	1	1	333	:
Mahdald	1	ł	1		i	i	10	į	1	1	1	1
Michels	1	;	į	:	I	1	1	ŧ	1	1	1	13
Rethaur.	1	1	8	19	68	73	10	1	1	i	20	ī
Sapera.	1	1		18	i	1	ì	:	1	1	:	:
atediO	920	1,210	288	321	1,406	209	757	270	105	83	1,648	23
scobemmaduM.	25	164	388	304	49	903	102	486	195	25.52	636	97
"IATOT	2,533	1,670	2,825	1,518	9,508	1,429	1,092	857	800	485	2,398	334

521	428	675	1,069	1,338	1,719	47.5	8,925	3,710	1,923	324	888	1,708	1,019	2,257	2,356	1,831
818	351	532	323	120	1,100	167	2,826	3,013	1,397	63	324	96	466	461	7	2.0
00	:	102	310	304	2552	810	104	808	201	22	497	627	436	811	714	424
1	1	1	:	;	1	1	;	1		i	1	;	1	:	1	1
-	I	107	I	I	243	i	356	309	176	1	1	1	ŧ	364	ŧ	142
i	1	ì	1	-	ŧ	:	1	1	1	1	1	1	i	:	1	1
1	ŧ	i	ŧ	:	1	I	I	ı	1	1	1	i	i	89	1	118
:	9	1	059	128	E	1	Y	I	1	W.	7	227	1	99	19	1
1	1	1	ŧ	100	1	1	1	ı	22	9	1	154	3.	r	354	1
î	i	:	I	F	4	1	438	1	i	108	33	138	1	281	;	431
;	1	ŧ	ŧ	1	1	I	I	i	3	1	120	1	I	206	289	1
;	1	i	1	1	1	î	1	1	1	22	:	1	:	;	20	:
1	1	긲	1	44	35	00	186	180	143	10	13	195	127	69	586	950
	•	•		7	*	*	*			,	•		٠	•		•
٠		*					•									ě.
						*			*				٠
				*								٠				,
														٠
							30.	4	· ų.			*	Tie.
Jalann .	Lalitpor	Benatus .	Mirrapur	Janubar	Châzipar .	Bollin	Gerakhpur	Basti	Aramgach.	Tarti	Lucknow	Unilo	Rild Bareli	Shapur	Hundoi	Klarel

Distribution of Nats according to the Census of 1891-concluded.

																	·att
	Dist	Districts				Brijbish	.ldaĐ	Jogila	Kabbbita.	Abdalah	Katubbak,	Mahiham.	Mabrille	'Rathaur,	*mades	.sroitt0	obeamsdrM	.iareT
Fairabad						8	i	ŧ	1	I	*		;	16	3	888	567	1.309
Gonda					*	68	:	1	1	1	9	-	1	499	1	622	178	1.896
Bahrainh						459	1	1	1	N.	2	4.75	1	93		696	876	1.696
Sultânpur						;	1	9	S	1	1		3			40	906	400
Partabgarh					-	25		1	1		49	09				1 40	300	402
Barabanki						1	88	1	-	1	24	1	1	27.1	1	620	6229	1,603
			TOTAL	74	,	6,319	2,843	1,533	1,990	1771	1,659	334	149	3,778	452	99 993 600 993	20.702	63.282

Naumuslim (New, "new" Muslim—"Muhammadan").—A term applied to recent converts to Islâm. It is often particularly selected by fresh Râjput converts. These, however, in the lists of the last Census, are given under the head Râjput, such as the Lâlkhâni and similar tribes, who have been separately discussed. Many of them have only imperfectly adopted Islâm, and still retain several of their own tribal customs in connection with birth, death, marriage, inheritance, etc.

Distribution of the Naumuslim according to the Census of 1891.

Disversion Ahir. Baarya. Braithman. Chamsir. 18 1
		the Kori.	MAB.	Others.	Total.
	1			147	147
	0		1	1,886	1,886
	, in	_	794	010'1	1,810
	4	-	4	28,960	28,986
	14	_	4	8231	822
8 1 16 18 1 16 18 19 19 18 19	1	_	;	12,357	12,857
8 : 1 16 : 8 200 : 8 30 : 8	2	_	1	19	8
	9			86	110
) i		-	860	887
7 16 8	1	_	i	101	109
30	30	_	1	105	187
	ĭ	_	1	2,045	2,897
	i	_	1	908	900

1,277	2,995	16,542	916	284	498	96	1,616	16	1,117	31	30	99	88	740	403	184
1,277	2,896	14,645	265	263	969	9	1,576	16	395	28	30	1	:	97	828	184
	11	239	7	1	į	20			292		1	64	8	147	15
	i	:	Si	R-	i	;	i	1	1		1	1	1	1	1
							20	m	17.	07
	e1	223	п	1	01	10	Si g	1	10	*	7	1	1	1	23	- 1	কা	1,323		1	1	23	40	1	1	-	1	1	1	+	:
i	1	1		i		1	1	1	1	1	1		:	:	1
	15	100	336	1	ī	1	1	1	I	п	:		1	990	60
	,	•													*	•
						+					+
								*				÷			٠
												*
	+	p	mit										+
El jaor	d Budhun	F Moradabad	Shalijahanpur	PHIBAIt	Cawepur	Fatchpur	Bdnda	Hamirpur	Allahabad	Jhansi	Jilann	Benaros	Mirzapar	Janapur	Gharipar	to Ballin

Distribution of the Naumuslim according to the Census of 1891 -- overloded.

	Бивенетв.	HETH.			Abir.	Banya.	Britman.	Chamtr.	Kfyssth.	Kort.	MAH	Others.	TOYAL.
Gorakhpur					es	en	$	en	1		8	262	888
Basti .	*				1,766	444		1	1	i	682	19	2,447
Azamgarh .			٠		1	227	1	1		ŧ	11	117	213
Tardi .					I	ı	1	19	1	*	57	28	152
Lacknow .		•		•	-01	1	ı	034		1	157	201	380
Unio .				•	99	1		ıı		91	*	20	88
Båt Bareli .			,	•	1	4	1	-	19	:	i	121	180
Shapar .	•	,	•			4	ı			ī	166	266	425
Hardei .	•	•		•		1	1	1	1	1	1	945	943
Kheri .					i	1	10	1	1	59	1	98	88
Pairabad .				•		:	ŧ	:	1	i	273	55	388
Gonda .		•		•	1,145	1	I	i	1	i	1,374	:	2,519
Babraich .		*		-	94		1	1	-		1,826	4	1,832

2837	840	391	88,444
108	34	262	74,495
119	49	26	6,615
		26	86
-	108	00	1,318
	į	21	988
	-	es:	1,460
:		E	354
i	1	99	8,815
٠			3
٠	٠		Tor
		à
Sultanpur .	Partabgarh.	Bårakanki .

Nikumbh .- A sept of Rajputs chiefly found in the Eastern districts. The word nikumbha in Sanskrit means the plant Croton Polyandrum, and is perhaps connected with kumbha, "a jar." They are, according to General Cunningham,1 of the race of the Kings of Ajudhya "from which sprang Mandhatri, Sagara, Bhagiratha, and Rama. Kuvalayaswa, the great-grandfather of Nikumbha, having conquered the demon Dhundhu, acquired the title of Dhandhumara, "slayer of Dhundhu," and gave his name to the country which is now known as Dhundhar or Jaypur. Here his descendants remained under the name of Nikumbhas, and to them is ascribed the foundation of most of the old forts and cities in Alwar and Northern Jaypur. Under Måndhåtri and Sågara they came in collision with the Haihayas and Talajangas on the Narlada, where a branch of their race still held territory in the tenth century. Two inscriptions have been found in Khandes, -one, dated A.D. 1158; and the other, in 1216 A.D.,-in the latter of which the reigning king is said to have been of the great Solar race from which "the King Nikumbha, best of princes, sprang; in whose line Måndhåta was famous, as well as Sågara, Bhågiratha and others." In the former, the reigning prince is said to be "celebrated in the race—the illustrious Solar race, in which the Nikumbha was born whose descendant was Rama." Of this race, as Colonel Tod s says, "to which celebrity attaches in all the genealogies, we can only discover that they were proprietors of the district of Mandalgarh prior to the Gahlots, that is, they preceded the Sisodiyas in Mewar." But a writer in the Rajputana Gasetteer 3 adds that "had his enquiries extended to Alwar, he would have discovered that local tradition declares the Nikumbhas to have been the earliest possessors of the fort and town of Alwar, and of the surrounding territory." General Cunningham concludes from these data that "it would seem that the Nikumbhas were among the earliest Aryan settlers in Rajputana. During the lapse of many centuries they lost their central provinces, and at the time of the Muhammadan conquest only the two out-lying districts of Khandes on the South and Alwar on the North remained to them. name of Nikumbha has been supplanted in Northern India by that of the Raghuvanea or "descendant of Raghu," one of the ancestors of Dasaratha and Râma. The Nikumbhas, who settled in this region, retained their early tribal name, while their brethren of Ayodhya assumed the name of Raghuvansi."

Archivological Reports, XX, 8, app.

² Annals I, 28,

^{· 111. 172.}

2. In Hardoi 1 the Nikumbhas say that they came from Alwar about 1450 A.D. Another account The Nilrumbhas of the North-Western Provinmakes them out to be a Kachhwsha or dos and Oudh. Sûrajbans clan which left Aral or Arwal in Jaypur and alternately served the Tomar Raja of Delhi and the They derive their name from the good work Råthaur of Kanauj. (nek kilw) they did in the service of these monarchs. Others say that the name means "low caste" or "illegitimate." They were the original Thakur settlers in Farrukhabad in the old Pargana of Pipargáon, now included in Muhammadábád. The Azamgarh 3 branch are said to have come from Jaunpur, sixteen or seventeen generations ago, being called in by a Brâhman to save his daughter from marriage with a Rajbbar. The family became Muhammadan under the Sultans of Jaunpue. Those in Gerakhpur have the title of Sirnet, which they gained in the time of one of the Emperors of Delhi. Then, as now, they only raised the hand to the head, and never bowed, when making obcisance. The Emperor, annoyed at this apparent want of respect, had a sword placed across the doorway, and some of them, maintaining their position, were decapitated.* The Rajas of Basti, Unwai, and Rudrapur, in the Gorakhpur District belong to this sept. Those in Ghazipur trace their descent from Vikrama Deva, brother of Akhraj Deva, Raja of Unwal, in Gorakhpur, who, when he came to bathe at the confluence of the Sarju and the Ganges, founded a colony there. They endeavour to keep up their connection with Gorakhpur, and nearly a bundred years ago their headman, Bâbu Râghunāth Sinh, visited Unwal and planted groves and dug wells at his own expense.

3. In Farrukhābād they claim to belong to the Garga gotes, give girls to the Chandel, Bhadauriya, Kachhwāha, Chauhān, and Pramar septs: and marry brides from the Chamargaur, Rāthaur, Gaharwār, Somhansi, and Ujjaini. In Unāo they say they belong to the Bhāradwāja gotes; take wives from the Gaur, Dhākrē, Bais, and Janwār; and give girls to the Sombansi, Rāthaur and Chauhān.

¹ Settlement Report, 74.

² Seltlement Bepart, 13.

³ Sattlement Report, 63.

^{*} For a similar story see Bernies, Tomole, 151 ...

Distribution of Nikumbh Rajputs according to the Census of 1891.

Dra	TRIC	T.		Number.	Dre	PRIC	T.		Number.
Parrakhābā	đ			898	Mirzapur				53
Mainpuri				67	Jaunpur		4:	٠.	2,279
Etawah				19	Ghasipur.				560
Etah .				32	Ballia .				3,896
Bareilly				35	Gorakhpur	,			50
Budáun			4	44	Bastí .				40
Moralabad	+			6	Azamgath				4,433
Shahjahanpu	ar			755	Lucknow				427
Pilibhit				114	Sitapur	×			158
Banda .				9	Hardei				3,698
Allahåbåd		16		34	Kheri .		Ċ.	+	1,051
Jālaun .				46	Partabgarh			14	3
Benarea		01		216	335	To	PAL		18,904

Nimbarak.—A Vaishnava order who have not been separately recorded at the last Census. The word means "the sun in a nim tree," a curious designation, which is thus explained, "The founder of the sect, an ascetic by name Bhaskaracharya, had invited a Bairagi to dine with him, but unfortunately delayed to go and fetch his guest till after sunset. Now the holy man was forbidden by the rules of his order to eat except in the day-time, and was greatly afraid that he would be compelled to practise ap unwilling abstinence; but at the solicitation of his host the Sun god. Sûraj Nârdyan, descended upon the nim tree, under which the repast was spread, and continued beaming upon them till the claims of hunger were fully satisfied. Henceforth the saint was known by the name of Nîmbârka or Nîmbaditya. Their doctrines, so far as they are known, are of a very enlightened character. Thus their doctrine of salvation by faith is thought by many scholars to have been directly borrowed from the Gospel; while another article in their ereed, which is less known but equally striking in its divergence from ordinary Hindu sentiment, is the continuance of conscious individual existence in a future world, when the highest reward of the good will be, not extinction, but in the enjoyment of the visible presence of the Divinity whom they have served upon earth; a state, therefore, absolutely identical with Heaven, as our theologians define it. The one infinite and invisible God, who is the only real existence, is, they maintain, the only proper object of man's devout contemplation. But as the incomprehensible is utterly beyond the reach of human faculties, he is partially manifested for our behoof in the book of creation, in which natural objects are the letters of the universal alphabet, and express the sentiments of the Divine Author. A printed page, however, conveys no meaning to any one but a scholar, and is liable to be misunderstood even by him; so too with the book of the world. And thus it matters little whether Radha and Krishna were ever real personages; the mysteries of divine love which they symbolise remain though the symbols disappear." 1

- 2. From enquiries made at Benares it appears that initiates are accepted from among Brähmans, Kshatriyas, Vaisyas, and all Südras from whose hands high casts Hindus can take water. No regard is paid to social status, but no one is accepted who is addicted to drunkenness or incontinency, or who eats and drinks from the hands of persons of other creeds. The formula of initiation is Sri Krishna sarnam mama, "I seek refuge in Sri Krishna;" or Sri mukund charanamsarnam prapadys, "O Sri Krishna! give me refuge at thy feet;" or Sri Krishaaynamah, "I salute thee, Sri Krishna." When the candidate is initiated he is taught to be truthful, to shide by the rules of the order, to be peaceful, to fast on the eleventh (chidashi) of the month, to trust in Sri Krishna for all earthly and heavenly blessings, to avoid slandering and backbiting, to abstain from flesh and spirituous liquor, and to instruct the disciples.
- 3. They have a great respect for the Guru, whom they constantly visit; but he does not come to them unless specially invited. When a disciple visits his Guru, he brings a money present, and receives in return some consecrated food (prazid). Those of the sect who are family men live at home; the ascetic class in monasteries. The latter are supplied with food and other necessaries of life by the Guru.

¹ Growse, Mulhura, 181 sq.

Niranjani.—Classed in the last Census as an order of the Gusâins and found only in very small numbers in these Provinces. They are apparently a Panjāb order, founded by Handāl, the cook of Guru Amar Dās (A.D. 1552-1574). Bāba Handāl worshipped God under the title of Niranjana, "without collyrium or cintment, pure." According to Mr. Maclagan! their chief claim to notice is their rejection of the ordinary burial customs of the Sikhs and Hindus. The memorial ceremony (kirya karam) is not observed and the bones are not taken to the Ganges. They have special marriage rites of their own, and do not reverence the Brāhmans. There is a Gurudwāra or Darbūr Sāhib of Bāba Handāl at Jandiyāla in the Amritsar District, where the Niranjania chiefly resort.

Distribution of the Niranjania according to the Course of 1891.

Dis	TRIC	TS.		Numbers.	Dr	TRICTS.		Numbers
Dehra Dün		360	G	10 pm	Jhami	200		2
Hamirpur			(E)		Jálann	Y .	2	13
Allahábád		-30		1	Habralek	4/-	4	1
					2000	TOTAL		20

Nirola.—A class of Hill Brihmans who are considered to be somewhat lower in the social scale than the Sarolas and contain in themselves in a separate class a number of sub-divisions known generically as Dubhāgi; for they neither eat from the hands of Sarola or Gangāri, nor intermarry with them. They have several getras, such as Kasyapa, Angiras, etc., and hence the name Nanagotri given to them. Their principal sub-divisions are Dhūsāli, Jamlogi, Batanwāl, Kandhāri, Baramwāl, Silwāl, Poldi, Bilwāl, Garsāra, Thalwāl, Gugleta, Kimoti, Maikota, Darmwāra, Dyolki, Kandyāl, Thalāsi, Phalāta, Gatyāl, Dhumakwāl, Sauwāl, Managwāl, Bamola, Binjāl, and Ganai. Most of these names are derived from some village. All intermarry with each other, and now follow agriculture, service, peddling, and providing for the wants of the pilgrims to Kedårnåth, who are regarded as their legitimate prey and shorn accordingly.

Panjeh Causus Reports 152.

Niyariya.—(Hindi viyara, nirala "separate, distinct").—A refiner of precious metals, who washes the sweeping of the shops of goldsmiths and similar craftsmen, and extracts the gold and silver. The caste, such as it is, is purely professional and though some families have made it their hereditary occupation and call themselves Pathân or Shaikh Niyariyas, many outsiders, such as weavers and others, practice the trade. Those to the east of the Province ascribe their origin to Kota and Bûndi, from whence they say they emigrated about a century or so ago. They are Muhammadans and practice the usual Musalmân ceremonies at birth, marriage, and death.

Mr. Hoey s thus describes the way the trade is carried on in Lardenow. "Having his aqua fortis ready the Nivariya takes the melted mixture of gold and silver filings or olippings (rawa) and melts it in a erncible (ghariya), and when it is in a liquid state, he pours it from a beight into a vessel containing water. This fall into water makes each large drop of liquid metal remain separate. Then all those pieces of metal are placed in a glass phial (stish shishi) prepared to resist the action of fire. These phials are like balloons covered with a coating of mud so as to leave only a circular portion of the glass exposed at one side for the use of the operator watching the action of the acid. The narrow neck of the lalloon is of course turned up vertically to prevent the contents from spilling, and it is not closed up in any way. The mud used to cover the glass is called pllimatti. Having placed one hundred tolas of metal drops in the phial the Niyariya pours upon it two hundred tolas of soid. He then places the phial on a charcoal fire, and when the action of the aqua fortis and fire has become complete. the liquid is poured off. The gold lies in the bottom of the phial and the silver passes of with the acid, which is poured into a mud vessel in which there are pieces of copper. The silver adheres to the copper and is scraped off and thrown again with the acid into another mud vessel in which there is no copper. The Niyâriya then places a cloth-strainer over an empty mud vessel and lays over the cloth a sheet of bamboo paper. He pours the silver and acid into this strainer, and the silver settles on the paper, the acid passing through the cloth into the vessel below. The silver is then further cleared by burning in an earthenware pan containing cold charcoal ashes ground to powder. In these ashes a lead is made about the size of the hollow of the hand. The silver is laid in this hollow with a piece of lead and covered over; charcoal fire is laid above the ashes and blown with a pair of bellows. This clears the silver completely." He also melts down old ernaments for silversmiths.

¹ Atkinson, Himaleyes Garctises, III. 25.

Monagreph on tender and manufactures, 156 sq.

Distribution of the Nigariya according to the Census of 1891.

	Di	WEST	Tu-			Hiedus	Muliam- madans.	TOTAL
SahAranpur		4		0.0	2	10722		9
Muzaffarna			30	85	5	6	2	11
Mearat		10			100	18	740	18
Aligarh		.40	163			8		3
Ethwah		100			3		1	1
Bijnar		-33			13		7	7
Patelipur			7.9			1000	12	12
Hamlypur						-	35	35
Jàlann						144	2	3
Benares						33	15	15
Ballia							441	33
Gorakhpur							89	23
Pasti .							2	2
Azamgarh							9	9
Tardi .							2	2
Lucknow						inc	18	18
Stinpur							31	31
Pairabad		,				m.	9	9
Gorda					4		4	4
Bahraich						104	0	9
Bultanpur		*				her.	2	2
			To	TAI		65	193	258

0

Oiha .- A word commonly derived from the Hindi ojh, "entrails," in the sense that this class of exorcisor, like the Roman Harnspex, inspects the entrails of the victim. This, it is hardly necessary to say, the Indian diviner never does. It is almost certainly a corruption of the Sanskrit upddhyaya, " a teacher." The term is used in various senses. In the first place it is used to designate the devil priest, or diviner of the aboriginal races, such as those of Dravidian origin. Some account of the position and practices of this functionary has been given in another place.\ Next, it is appplied to a special class of inferior Brahmans who perform the same duties for the more Hinduised races. Thirdly, it is used as a title of the Maithila Brahmans of the Eastern Districts. Mr. Sherring $ is obviously in error in saying that " formerly the Ojha was always a Brilman; but his profession has become so lucrative that sharp, olever, shrewd men in all the Hindu castes have taken to it." The process has certainly been quite the reverse of this, and the Ojha Bråhman is, without any doubt, a direct importation into Hinduism from the demonolatry of the aboriginal races, from which much of the coarse worship of Mahadeva and the Saktas has been probably derived.

2. The Ojba Bråhman is a follower of the Tantras, the most debased form of modern Hinduism. "Whole Tantras," writes Sir M. Monier Williams, "teach nothing but various methods of making use of spells for acquiring magical power. Some give collections of charms for making people enamoured, for destroying enemies and rivals, for producing or preventing diseases, for curing blindness, for injuring crops. Others simply describe the most effectual modes of worshipping the Sâktis, Mahāvidyas, Mātris, Yoginis, Vatukas, or by whatever name the innumerable manifestations of Siva and his wife may be called. Others confine themselves to an explanation of the Yantras, Bijas, and Mudras (intertwining of the fingers) belonging to each manifestation, the places suited for the worship of each, the names of trees and plants sacred to each, or permeated by each, and the days of the year allotted to each. Some few touch on nearly every conceivable topic of human knowledge, and

Introduction to Popular Religion and Folklara, 06.

Illindu Castes, I, 37.

Drdhmanion and Hinduism, 206.

contain, here and there, really interesting matter," On account of these functions the Ojha is often known as Panchamakāri, because the conditions under which he performs the rites are represented in five words, each of which begins with ma-madya, "wine," mānsa "meat," matsya, "fish," mudsa, "mystic intertwining of the fingers," and maithuna, "sexual intercourse."

Distribution of Ojha Brahmans according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	nici	a.		Numbers.	Drag	RIUT	8.		Numbers.
Dehra Dán			,	16	Moradabad	4			57
Sahāranpur				18	Phibbit		4	ź.	4
Bulandshabr				0	Cawupur	,			23
Aligaria	4		+	403	Allabábád	4			1
Agra		+		371	Jhansi	÷		÷	12
Parokhākād				61	Jalaun		+		1
Mainpari		16	6.	6	Tarki				5
Etah		÷		89	Bahraich				5
Budann		N		109	1	To	TAL		1,161

Orh.—A tribe recorded in the recent Census as a sub-caste of Koris and almost entirely confined to Bulandshahr and Aligarb. They appear to have their origin in Central India. "The Ods in Kāthiāwār are professional pond diggers. The yelsim to be Kshatriyas, the descendants of Bhāgīratha, son of Sāgara. According to the Rāte Māla, Sindh Rāj sent for a number of Ods from Mālwa to dig the Sahasraling Lake at Pātan. He fell in love with one of them, called Jasma, and wished to take her to his palace. She declined and tried to make her escape. He pursued her, and, on overtaking her, slew several of the Ods. Jasma committed suicide, cursing the king, and declaring that the lake should never hold water. The curse was removed by the sacrifice of Mayo Dhed. The Ods lead a wandering life, coming to Kāthiāwār for work, and returning to their houses in Mārwār and Central India during the rains." In the Dakkhin they are known as Vadar. Of the Ods in the Bombery Gazelteer, VIII, 158, sq.

² Holl, XV, 347; XVI. 64 : Indian Antiquary, III, 155.

Panjab Mr. Ibbetson writes: 1 " The Od or Odh is a wandering tribe, whose proper home appears to be Western Hindustan and Rajputans; at least the Ods of the Panjab usually hail from those parts. They will not, as a rule, take petty jobs; but prefer small contracts on roads, canals, railways and the like, or will build a house of abode and dig a tank or even a well. They are vagrants, wandering about with their families in search of employment on earthwork. They settle down in temporary reed huts on the edge of the work; the men dig, the women carry the earth to the donkeys, which they always have with them, and the children drive the donkeys to the spoil bank. In the salt range tract they also quarry and carry stone; and in parts of the North-West Provinces they are said to be wandering pedlars. They eat anything and everything, and though not unfrequently Musalmans, especially in the West, are always out-caste. They have a speech of their own, called Odki, of which I know nothing, but which is very probably nothing more than the ordinary dialect of their place of origin. They wear woollen clothes or at least one woollen garment. They claim descent from one Bhagiratha, who vowed never to drink twice out of the same well, and so dog a fresh one every day till one day he dug down and down and never came up again. It is in mourning for him that they wear wool, and in imitation of him they bury their dead even when Hindu, though they marry by the Hindu ceremony. Till the re-appearance of Bhagiratha they will, they say, remain out-caste. They are said to claim Rajputor Kahatriya origin and to come from Marwar. They worship Rama and Siva, They are, for a vagrant tribe, singularly free from all imputation of orime." In Bihar they are described as a sub-caste of Luniyas.

2. There can be little doubt that the Orhs of these Provinces are

The North-Western Provinces Branch. Of the same race as those already described.

They have the same tradition of descent from Bhagiratha, son of Raja Sagara, and a woman named Gandharani.

They are not allowed to marry in their own gotra or that of their mother or grandmother. They lead a settled life, and do not admit outsiders. Marriage is both infant and adult, and sexual license before marriage is neither recognised nor tolerated. Polyandry is Penjib Ethnography, para. 578.

Rieley, Tribes and Castes, II, 150.

Mainly lessed on notes by M. Atms Rim, Hond Master, High School, Mathura.

not permitted, but polygamy is allowed. They marry in the way common to all respectable Hindu castes, and the binding part of it is the perambulation (bhanner) of the pair round the sacred fire. Widow marriage is allowed, and the ceremony is known as dharaicha. The widow is allowed full freedom of choice; but she can marry by the levirate any of the younger brothers of her late husband. A wife can be divorced for infidelity, and such a woman can be married again by the dharaicha form.

- 3. They are usually Hindus of the Vaishnava sect. Their special godlings are the Miyan Sahib of Amroha in the Moradabad District, whom they worship in any month except Muharram; Devi in Chait and Kuar; Masani of Karanbas and Zabir Pir in Sawan and Bhadon; Kuanwala, "the god of the well," in Sawan, and the ordinary Hindu gods. The offering to these godlings consists of sweetments (baddsha) and coconnuts, which the priests receive. They employ Brahmans as their priests, and these are received on terms of equality with other Brahmans. They burn their dead and leave their ashes on the burning ground. No coremony, except the ordinary sraddha in the month of Kuar, is performed.
- 4. Their occupation in Mathura is the weaving of scarse cloth (dobra), and most of them still follow this trade. But some of them have taken to agriculture and landholding and are dealers in grain, and lead money and grain usually on very usurious rates in the villages.
- 5. They cat meat, fish, and fowls, and drink spirits. They abstain from the fiesh of monkeys, cows, pork, and uncloven-footed animals, crocodiles, snakes, vermin, and the leavings of other people. They are thus in these Provinces in a far higher grade than their vagrant brethren in the Panjáb.

Distribution of Orks according to the Census of 1891.

DISTRICTS.				Numbers.	Distaicre.			Numbers.
Dehra Dûn		-	14	41	Farrukhābā	d			5
Meerat.				936	Etawah				1
Bulandahahr				5,876	Etah .				86
Aligarh				2,066	Morâdâbâd				00
Mathura				763	Jhansi.				2
Agra .	•			15		TOTAL .			10,781

Oswâl. —A wealthy and respectable trading class found in small numbers in these Provinces. They derive their name from the town of Ossa, Osi, Osiya or Osanagar, in Márwár.

97

2. The tribal legend runs as follows : About Sambat 222(165 A.D.) there was a Raja in Osanagar who had Traditional originno issue. He beard that an ascetic named Sri Ratan Sûri was practising ansterities in a jungle near the town, and he went to pay his respects to him. The ascetic told him that he would obtain his desires within a year; and accordingly within a year a son was born to him. The people of the town, fearing that the success of this prophecy would induce the Raja to become a Jaina, excluded the disciples of Sri Ratan Suri from the town. Then Osadevi, the guardian goddess of the place, told the saint to convince the Raja by a miracle. So she took a small hank (pass) of cotton and passed it along the back of the saint, when it immediately became a snake and hit Jaychand, the son of the Raja, in the toe, while he was asleep beside his wife. Every means was tried to save his life, but he died. As his corpse was about to be burnt, Sri Ratan Suri sent one of his disciples and stopped the cremation. Then the Raja came with the body of his son and stood with hands clasped before the saint. He ordered that it was to be taken back to the place where the prince had been bitten, and that the princess was to lie down beside it as before. At midnight the snake returned and licked the bite, when the prince was restored to life. Then the Raja, with all his court and people, became a Jaina. He and his family became the gotra now known as Srisrimal; his servants that of Srimål, and the Kahatriyas Oswål. When the Brålmans of the place heard of these conversions, they asked the saint how they were to live, as all their clients had become Jamas. The saint directed that they should remain as their family priests and be known as Bhojak or "enters." The Kshatriyas, who were thus converted, consisted of eighteen gatras. Subsequently other Kahatriyas were converted to Jainism by the Jaina priests, and in order to distinguish them from the original Oswals, who were converted by Sri Ratan Süri, they were called Khara Oswal. In Sambat 1167 (1110 A.D.) Sri Jindat Sûri, now known throughout the Jaina world as Dâdaji, converted about a lakh of people into Oswals,

I Based on enquiries at Mirrapur, and notes by Babu Vishan Chandra, Deputy Collector, a member of the tribe.

and no addition has been made to the caste since then. The Kachh tradition is somewhat different from this. "The Oswals from Os, Parinagar and Budhesar in Parkar say, that forced to leave Parkar on account of the misconduct of their chief, they went to Sindh, and finding the Musalman element too strong, came to Kachh. They are of three sub-divisions Visa, Dasa, and Pancha. The Dasas separated about three hundred years ago, wishing to introduce widew marriage. They afterwards gave up the practice, and within the last few years a small off-shoot introduced it and were named Panchas. Another story is that the Srimal King Desal allowed none but millionaires to live inside his city walls. One of the lucky citizens, a Srimāli Vānya, named Ruād, had a brother named Sand, whose fortune did not come up to the chief's standard of wealth. Forced to live outside, he asked his brother to help him to make up the required million, but meeting with no encouragement, he and Jay Chand, a discontented son of the king of Srimal, and many Srimalis, Rajputs, and others, left Srimal, and settling in the town of Mandavad called it Osa or ' the frontier.' Among the settlers were Srimali Vanyas, Bhatti, Chauhan, Gahlot, God, Gohil, Hada, Jaday, Makwana, Parmar, Rathaur, and Thar Rajputs, all devout worshippers of Siva. Ratan Sûri, a Jaina, by working miracles, converted Jay Chand, then king, and all the settlers to the faith, and calling them Oswals formed them into one caste. This is said to have happened in 186 A. D. Tod gives a different account of their origin, claiming them as descendants of the Solauki kings of Anhilvada (942—1240) who gave up the sword for the till. Chiefly image worshipping Jainas in religion, their family goddess is Satya in Parkar." 1

3. The annexed list gives the names of the exogeneous gotras of the Oswâls as found in the Eastern Districts of these Provinces. The Bombay tradition as to the division into Dasa and Bîsa is as follows:—"An Oswâl widow, contrary to the rule against widow marriage, lived with a Jaina priest and had two sons by him. The sons grew rich and hit upon the following plan to force their caste fellows to overlook their illegitimate descent. At the town of Raya, where there was a large number of Oswâls, they made grand preparations for a dinner, and asked the Oswâls, who, not knowing that the hosts were of illegitimate descent, attended the party in large numbers. A widow told her son the history of the men who were giving the feast, and he went before the assembled Oswals and begged of them to allow his mother to re-marry. They asked him why he had come there to make this request, and he told them the story of the birth of the two brothers who had invited them to dinner. On hearing that their hosts were cut-caste, there was a sudden confusion among the guests. Those who had touched the food joined the two brothers, and were called Dasa, while those who had not touched the food remained pure or Bisa. The terms seem to mean Bisa or 'twenty to the score,' that is pure blood, and Dasa or 'ten in the score,' or half caste," 1

¹ Bombay Gazetteer, V. 52.

4. As already stated, the getras or sections are exogamous. As stated from Benares the rule is that a man cannot marry in his own getra; he cannot marry a girl whose father's or maternal grandfather's getra is the same as that of his father or maternal grandfather. He cannot marry the elder sister of his deceased wife; but can marry her younger sister. There is no formula defining the prohibited degrees. Difference of religion or sect is no bar to marriage, as, for example, a Digambari Oswâl, or worshipper of the naked idols, can marry a Swetambari girl, or one who worshipped the clothed idols, or a Jaina Oswâl boy can marry a Vaishnava Oswâl girl or sice perat. It is said that in South Western India an Oswâl can marry in the Khandêwâl, Porwâl, and other similar tribes, the only condition being that both parties should be Jainas.

Marriage coronacies. Sending the tike, one or two rupees, with a coccanut and sweetments. The betrothal generally takes place when the girl is between seven and eleven years of age. The consent of the parents of the boy and girl is invariably necessary, and the girl is not allowed any freedom before marriage. A betrothal can be annulled, but there is no rule for the repayment of the expenses incurred. With the seventh circuit round the sacred fire, the marriage is complete. As the Oswâls are foreigners to these Provinces, the customs followed in Bombay may be quoted: "Boys are married between fifteen and twenty-five and girls between eight and fifteen. The boy's father, with from ten to fifty castemen, visits the girl and presents her with a silver

Bombay Gasetteer, XVI, 45,

oswál. 100

ring worth four annas or one rupes. The girl's father treats the company to betel and her priest puts the silver ring on the girl's The girl's father returns the visit, presenting the boy's younger brother with one or three rupees, and treats the guests to betel. Cocoanuts are served in the presence of both fathers, the priest fixes a lucky day for the marriage. Some days before the marriage, the boy's father presents the girl with ornaments, invitation cards are sent round, and the boy and the girl are rubbed. with turmeric paste. The turmeric rubbing takes place, at least, a menth before the marriage. A thread tinged with turmeric powder is out in two and each of the pieces is passed through an iron ring and tied round a piece of lac bangle, and one of the threads is fastened to the girl's right foot and the other to the boy's right hand, The month between the turmeric rubbing and the marriage is a time of gaiety. The friends and relations of the boy and girl in turn send one of their household to the boy's or the girl's house. The messenger places a cocoanut and silver coin in the boy's and girl's hand and asks him or her to come to their house in the evening. After sunset the boy or girl is scated on horse-back with music, and a band of friends is taken to the entertainer's house, the procession being known as gaiganer or entertaining the bridegroom or bride.' The house is brightly lighted, and carpets are spread in front on which the guests are seated. The women of the house and the guests take their seats in the verandah and sing Mårwåri songs. The women go on singing till the sister of the boy or the girl waves a light, and is presented with a cocoanut and a silver coin. On the marriage day the girl's priest goes to the boy's, and formally asks his family to the wedding. The bridegroom is scated on horse-back, and with music in front and a band of friends behind is taken to the temple of the bride's village Maruti. marriage party leave the bridegroom at the temple and go to the bride's house, where her father welcomes them, and betel is served. The Brahman priest tells the bridegroom's father the lucky moment for the wedding, and the party return to the temple with music. When the lucky hour draws near, it generally falls when it is growing dusk, the bridegroom lays a packet of betel leaves, a nut, and a copper before the village Maruti, hows and starts on horse-back to the bride's house. On reaching the bride's booth, a stick is banded to the bridegroom, and he strikes with it at the entrance of the porch (a survival of marriage by capture), hows to the pictures of Ganpati, is presented by the bride's father with a turban worth from one to twenty-five rupees, and dismounts.

"6. Until the lucky hour for the marriage the guests amuse themselves, watching dancing-girls in the marriage hall, or return home to take their food, while the bridegroom, with five or six of his men, steps into the house and bows to a betel-nut Ganpati, lays before it sandal pasto, rice, flowers, red powder, vermilion, and scented powder (able), burns frankineense before it, waves lamps filled with clarified butter round it, and offers sugar. The pair are scated in a booth on a soft cushion laid on a carpet, and a Brahman priest makes an altar of black earth, kindles the sacred fire (hom) on the altar, and drops into the fire clarified butter, grains of barley, and The pair look on in silence and are not bits of sandal-wood, allowed to move from the place until the fire worship is done. When the fire worship is over, the priest tells the pair to walk four times round the altar. Then comes the daughter-giving (kanyddan), when the bride's father pours water on the bridegroom's hands with a money gift varying from one to one hundred rupees. The Brahman priest is paid five to one hundred rupees, and the bridegroom takes the girl to his house with music and friends. At the boy's house, the pair again sit before the betel-nut Ganyati, which is set on a heap of rice, and their priest lays flowers and red powder before it. When the Ganpati worship is over, the bride's women take her home, and the first welding day is ended. 'The bride's parents, who have fasted all day, dime with the bride when she comes back from her husband's house. No easte feast is given this day. Next morning, in the bride's house, a list is made of households to be asked to dine, and the list is given to the priest, who goes round to the houses named, ending at the bridegroom's. At noon the invitations are again sent through the priest as in the morning, and the bridegreem's party goes to the bride's, and is treated to a sumptuous dinner, with a party of the bride's friends and relations. The Brahman priests cook and serve the guests with food, not allowing any of the guests to touch them, and themselves eating when the others are done. At night the guests are treated to a rich supper, and the party retire after betel is served. The third day passes like the second. On the fourth comes the cloth-presenting ceremony (phal), when the marriage party goes with music to the bride's, bridegroom is seated on a seat somewhat higher than the rest, and the bride's friends and relations arrive. A low wooden stool is set oswāl. 102 before the bridegroom, and on the stool a bell-metal dining dish marked with upright and crossed lines of vermilion. A metal cup is set in the dish, and a silver coin is dropped in the dish in the name of the family gods. The bride's father presents the bridegroom with as rich a dress and ornaments as he can afford, or at least with a cocoanut, and turbans are handed to his male friends. The bride's party throws red powder at the bridegroom's, who depart taking the pair with them." 1

7. No ceremony is performed during pregnancy except for the first child, when the satmasa or seventh month Birth peremonias. ceremony is performed. The mother goes to her father's house, where she is presented with a dress and sweetmeats and a feast is given. The midwife and servants attend the mother for twelve days after her accouchement. After the child is born, its astrological horoscope (janampatri) is prepared on the sixth day (chhathi), the mother and child bathe before sourise, the child is for the first time dressed and decorated with ornaments, and the mother and child worship the Sun. On the twelfth day (barahi), mother and child bathe before sunrise and a feast is given. On the maswas, after a month, the mother and child visit her father and receive dresses and ornaments for the mother and clothes and toys for the child. The father is unclean during the twelve days after his wife's delivery, and is not permitted to worship the gods. In Bombay when a "child is born, a little cold water is poured over it, and close to it a metal plate is heaten with a rod (to scare off evil spirits). The navel cord is cut, and the woman is bathed in warm water. Some of them dig, and others of them do not dig, the bath water hole in the lying-in room. Those who do not dig the hole, bathe the child in a large and deep metal tray. The mother and child are laid on a cot under which an earthen jar with burning cow-dung cakes is placed. On the first and three following days the child is given a rag soaked in castor oil to suck. From the fourth the mother suckles the child, and is given to eat a pounded mixture of cummin seed and molasses mixed with clarified butter. During the first three days, her diet is wheat flour boiled in clarified butter mixed with sugar, and from the fourth she eats rice and pulse with clarified butter. On the fifth day, a few among them worship the image of Satväi placed on a stone slab, as among the Kunbis of the district, while, as a rule, all of them place sandal paste flowers, turmeric powder, vermilion and fruit with sweet food cooked in the house before an inkstand, reed pen and paper with or without an image of the goddess Satvái, They say that the worship of the image of Satvai is not a Marwir custom, and the habit has been adopted by their women since they settled in Ahmadnagar. Lamps of dough filled with clarified butter are lighted and set before the goddess, or the pen, ink and paper, and in the place where the mother and child are bathed. These lamps are placed so that the child may not see them; if the child see the light, it is likely to fall sick. Unlike local castes they do not worship Satvāi on the twelfth day, nor do the shild's aunts name it. A Bribman priest generally attends the naming on the thirteenth, and fixes the name after consulting his almanae. A cradle is hung in the lying-in room, and the mother's female friends and kinswomen are called and formally oradle and name the child."1

¹ Bambay Gazetteer, XV, 79, 294.

8. The adult dead are cremated; bodies of children are thrown into a river, and, where this is not possible, are Disposal of the dead. buried. The ashes are thrown into a river, and, where it is not possible to do this, they are left on the place where the body was burnt. When the corpse is placed on the pyre, the nearest relative of the deceased, who acts as chief mourner, puts five pieces of firewood on the corpse and with fire in his left hand goes three times round the pyre and then sets it alight. When the burning progresses, he cracks the skull to allow the scul to escape (kapálkriya). No ceremonies are performed for the propitiation of ancestors in general, childless ancestors or those who die by a violent death. They do not perform the sraddha; no person officiates as pricet at the cremation, nor are any prayers repeated. In Bombay "after death the body is placed on a low stool, bathed and dressed in new clothes. A woman who dies before her husband is dressed in a new robe, her hair is decked with flowers and her body with ornaments. These honours are not shown to a widow's body. Poor Oswals lay their dead on a bamboo ladder-like bier, like that used by Brahmans, The rich use a raised bamboo seat with a bamboo covering like an English umbrella, fastened to it, and ornamented with small parti-coloured flags decked with tinsel. When the bier is used, the body is alid on the back with the face to the sky. If the canopied chair (wid) is used, the body is kept in a sitting position. Two dough halls with a copper coin in each are tied in a piece of cloth, which is put in a bell-metal cup and tied on the bosom of the dead. The funeral party starts for the burial ground with the bier on their shoulders. the barber going before, carrying a fire-pot, and the chief mourner following with the others who are all men. Unlike local Brillmanic Hindus, they have no rule against the fire-pot carrier turning round and looking back. This rule is intended to bar the return of the ghost from the burial ground. As they draw near the burning ground they halt, lay down the body, and throw the dough balls to the left and right. They go to the nearest water, strip the body of its ornaments, and hand them to the next of kin, when he returns home. The pile is made ready and the body is laid on it, and the fire is kindled by the son or nearest relation. When the body is burnt, they bathe in the nearest water and go home. Neither the bearers nor the mourners are held to be impure, and nothing is done to clean the house or the spot where the death took place. Next day the mourning family, both men and women, visit Parasnath's temple, and lay one ser of Indian millet before the god, bow to him, and go home. They do not gather the askes of the dead, nor do they perform any mind-rites, nor keep the yearly death day. Their only observance is that, on some day between the twelfth day after the death and at the end of a year, the caste people are treated to a dinner of sweetments and the dead are forgotten." 1

Bombay Gasetteer, XVII, 50.

9. Some Oswâls are Swetambari and others Digambari Jainas.

Religiou. Swetambari Oswâls worship Sri Jiudat
Sûrji, Sri Kusal Sûrji, Sri Chand Sûrji, who were Achâryas or high priests of Kartargachha and famous by the name of Dâdaji. Their footprints are generally worshipped, and the offering is taken by the Bhojak already described, or in their absence, by any Brâhman. The offering consists of fruits, sweetmeats, uncooked rice, and money. Some also, in imitation of the Hindus, amongst whom they live, worship anakes and trees like the pipal. They all worship the sun and fire, particularly at marriage. The chief places of pilgrimage are Sikharji, the Pârasnâth Hill in Hazâribâgh District, Champapur in the Bhâgalpur District, Pavapur in Bihâr, Benares, Ajudhya, Sidhachâl in Bhavnagar, Girvar Hill in Jûnagarh, Kesariyaji in Udaypur, and Mount Also. Such pilgrimages are usually undertaken in the cold season. For ceremonial purposes Bhojaks are employed, and, in their absence, Brishmans of any tribe. The real priests are the Jaina Jatis. In temples are worshipped the twenty-four Arhat or Tirthaukara : Adinátha or Rishabhanátha, Ajitanátha, Sambhunátha, Abhinaudananåtha, Sumatinåtha, Padmaprabhunåtha, Suparswånatha, Chandraprabha, Suvidhanātba or Pushyadanta, Sîtalanātha, Sri Ansanātha, Vasupadya, Vimalanātha, Anantanātha, Dharmanātha, Santanātha, Kunthunātha, Aranātha, Mallinātha, Munisuvrata, Neminātha, Naminātha, Pārasnātha, Vardhamana or Māhavira. Of course no animal sacrifice of any kind is allowed in the Jaina temples. The Swetambari Oswals read the Kalpa Sûtra and pray and fast during the eight days of Parjushans, which commences on the twelfth or thirteenth of Bhâdon. The Digambari Oswâls observe the Parjûshana for ten days, commencing from the twentieth of Bhadon. This is their greatest religious festival. Nine days in Chait and Kuar are set apart for the navakilra mantra or the Jaina gayatri, beginning from the twenty-first of each of these months. During this time prayer and fasting are performed. On the twenty-first of Karttik in each year, they fast and worship Gyan or true knowledge; on thirtieth Karttik, tanth of Pus, and eighteenth Baisakh, the deities are carried about on ears. On the nineteenth and twentieth of Chait, women, whose husbands are alive, worship Gangsur, as Hindus do, and entertain their friends. Similar feasts of joy are held on the eighteenth of Sawan. This is known as Tij. Like Hindus they observe the Holi, Rakshabandhan, Dasmi, Divali, Basantpanchmi. The winter solstice, Makar Sankrant, commonly known as the Khicharwar, is also observed. There is no regular propitiation of the dead, but those who have long lived under Hindu influence believe in ghosts and use the ordinary means of repelling them.

¹ Bomboy Gazetterr, XVII, SL.

105 OSWAL.

10. Animal food is universally prohibited. Like other respectable Hindus, they will not touch DomsBhangis, and similar merial castes. They follow the usual Hindu taboos regarding food and family intercourse.
When they salute each other, they raise the right hand. Brahmans and Jatis are saluted with joined hands. Elders and Brahmans return the salute with the asis and Jatis say in return Dharma labb.
In Bombay "they neither eat flesh nor drink liquor on pain of loss of caste. On the second, fifth, eighth, and eleventh of each lunar fortnight, they do not cat vegetable. Even on other days few eat onions or garlie. Most men take a pill of opium in the morning and at noon after food. They shave the head except three knots, one on the crown, and one above cach ear, a practice which has given them the name of Trishendi, or "three knotted."

The eighty-four sections of the Owests.

Thatha-	Bachhawat.	Vaid.	Silrhawat.
Barbiya.	Chhorawas.	Born.	Mirich.
Sethlya.	Darhiwal.	Bothara.	Pulacha-
Locks.	Kumat.	Juarag.	Ulencha.
Daga.	Rampariya.	Rawani.	Jhovarh.
Kojar.	Daftari.	Bhandari.	Lembu-
Pårakh.	Sekhani.	Bhansali.	Thak.
Kodhāri.	Bhātera.	Sihāni.	Tikuliya.
Dugach.	Manot.	Chaurariya.	Dosi.
Nuniya	Gugullya	Sauc.	Brahmachiya.
Nunkwat.	Lokar.	Kathri.	Kachiab.
Sath.	Khater.	Srimal.	Gandhi.
Palawat.	Birar.	Sriscimal.	Jhajlani.
Sucheti.	Bhuteriya.	Singi.	Chauth Miya.
Hirkwat.	Picha-	Pitaliya.	Bhurant.
Sarkan.	Vinayakiya.	Tugaliya.	Rauswasi.
Thajer.	Kechar.	Maubata.	Marori.
Kukara.	Goriya.	Parsani.	Dadha.
Dhapaiya.	Syamsukh	Modi.	Banks.
Dhamawat.	Pagariya.	Napharan.	Phophariya.
Barariya.	Dudheriya.	Ràddasni.	Dugar.

Distribution of the Oswdle according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	RIOT	B.	Numbers.	Dieru	ICTS	*	Numbers.
Debra Dûn		,	0	Aligarh .			10
Saharanpur			16	Mathura			21
Muzaffarnagar			4	Agra ,			1.02
Meerat .			1	Farruhkábád			2
Bulandshahr			16	Eldwah .			34

¹ Bombay Gezeiteer, XV, 77.

107

Distribution of the Oscalle according to the Census of 1891-coneld.

Dis	PRICT	8.		Numbers.	D	IBTRI	TIS.	Numbera
Etah .				1	Jalann .			12
Budhun				113	Lalitpur			17
Cawnpur	4			14	Benares .			67
Fatehpur			,	1	Mirrapur			3
Bands .				4	Kheri			3
DådådallA				37
Jhanni .				12			TOTAL	804

P

Pachhtoriya.—A sept of Râjputs found in the eastern districts who claim to be of Dikshit origin and take their name from Pachhotar in the Ghâzipur District. They hold a fairly respectable rank. One branch of them has been converted to Islâm.

Pahāri (pakdr=a hill).—A general term for the hillmen of the higher and lower Himâlayas. The name is applied to a considerable sept of Râjputs in Dehra Dûn, who are probably allied to the Khasiya (q.v.).

Pahriya.—A caste of messengers and village watchmen so called because they do watch and ward (pahra). In the hills they are a branch of the Doms. In the plains they are probably an occupational offshoot from some of the menial tribes.

Distribution of the Pakriya according to the Course of 1891.

	Districts									Numbers.
Gorakhpur				9	-	4	-			344
Basti				1.0						19
Gonda				4						88
Bahratch			4							41
							To	TAL		405

Palliwâl.—A sub-caste of Banyas who take their name from the town of Palli or Pâli in Mârwâr. According to Mr. Sherring they are supposed not to be true Vaisyas and to have Bargûjar blood in their veins. They emigrated westward in the time of Alâ-ud-dîn Ghori.

¹ Census Report, 1865 : Appendix B, 122 : Elliott, Chronicles of Undo, 35, note.

Disa	MIDIA.			Hindus.	Jainna.	TOTAL
Meerut .					3	2
Bulandahahr				1	5	6
Aligarh .				156	399	555
Mathura			-	154	281	435
Agra .	• 1			98	1,609	1,707
Parrukhábád				29	351	380
Etah .					33	83
Cawapar					114	114
Jilaun .				8		. 8
Lalitpur .			1	MO. 19 1.	47 W	3
Gorakhpur			4	405	1900	405
Laoknow	. 1	10		man132	4	4
Bårabanki		+50	1		57	57
	Total	L		854	2,855	3,709

Palliwal.-A local tribe of Brahmans who, like the Banya subcaste of the same name, take their title from Pali, the commercial city of Marwar. They belong to the Kanaujiya division of the Pancha Gauda. Colonel Tod had a theory that as they worshipped, among other things, the bridle of a horse, they were survivors of the priests of the Palli Soythian race. They are said to give a brideprice at marriage. They appear all over Upper India as moneylenders, merchants and cultivators. A great misfortune fell unon them in 1156 A. D. when Sivaji, the founder of the Rathaur dynasty and son of the King of Kanauj, passed Pali on his return from a pilgrimage to Dwarika. The Brahmans of Pali sent a deputation to him asking for protection from the two evils which prevailed—the Minas of the Aravalli range and the lions. Sivaji relieved them from both; but the opportunity to acquire land was too good to be lost, and on the festival of the Holi he put the leading Brahmans to death and seized Pali.1

Annals of Rejasther, II, 18.

Distribution of Palliwal Brahmans according to the Census of 1891.

D161	PRICTS.			Numbers,	Dia	Distriors.
Saliampu	r	+		1	Facratila	bål			6
Muzaffarn	agar			61	Etah		+		48
Meecut	•			897	Campur				67
Bulaudaba	hr			213	Jalann	į.			102
Aligarh				154	Lalitpur				6
Mathura				848	Jannpur	÷			122
Agra				114		Tor	AL		1,684

Palwar, Paliwar.-A sopt of Rajputs confined almost altogether to the Gorakhpur Division and the Faizabad District. According to the Faizabad tradition, one Prithiviraj Dec, Sombansi, known also as Mur Deo or Blur Deo, came from the village of Pâli in the district of Hardei in 1248 A. D. and took up his residence in the village of Rannupur, where he accopted service under the Bhars. From his native place he and his descendants gave up the name of Sombansi and adopted that of Palwar. He is said to have formed a connection with a fairy (deckanya) or a witch (ddin), and by her he had a son Haribar Dee, who formed attachments with an Ahrin and a Bharin, of whom there are multitudinous descendants in the Azamgarh District. These descendants have become known as Dainiyas or "children of the witch" and Bantariyas or "dwellers in the woods." Tradition says that on one occasion, soon after the birth of her son, this lady of the woods was engaged in the homely office of baking cakes, when her infant, which lay some paces off, began to cry. She had either to neglect the baby or the cakes; when, as her husband arrived, he saw his fairy wife assume supernatural and gigantic proportions, so as to allow of the baking and nursing to go on together. When she saw she was discovered she disappeared for ever, leaving the child as a legacy to her astonished husband.

According to another version of the legend the founder of the sept was one Patraj of the Somlansi tribe, who is said to have migrated from the neighbourhood of Delhi to Bandipur in Faizābād, where he made himself famous in his contests with the Bājbhars. He had four wives of different castes—a Rājput, an Ahîr, a Bhar and one whose caste is unknown. Their descendants were the Palwars, Ahiriniya, Bhariniya and Dainiya.

Settlement Report, 103.

3. In a third version they claim a connection with Sandi-Pâli, which the Sombansis of that place deny. On this the Palwärs change ground and refer their origin to Pâli near Delhi, or to a village of that name in the Partâbgarh District, which is likely enough, as that is one of the chief seats of the Sombansi sept in the present day.4

4. Some interest has been taken in the tribe on account of the Chaurâsi or group of eighty-four villages which Sir H. M. Elliot attributed to them in the Gorakhpur District. On this Mr. Carnegy writes 1:- "Sir H. M. Elliot, in his extraordinary article in his Supplemental Glossary on Chaurasi, speaks of a collection of eighty-four villages in Pargana Anaula (should be Bhawapar) in the Gorakhpur District, where their possessions, which have been mostly confiscated for their proceedings in 1857, are said by the tribe to have commenced with eighty-four bighas of land and soon to have swelled into eighty-four full villages. But the fact is the whole of the Gorakhpur, Faizābād and Azamgarh Palwars spring from one common ancestor. The system of reckoning by Chanrasi and Biyfilisi, so much dwelt on by Sir H. M. Elliot, is uncommon in this part of Oudh-in fact few natives understand it; but the number 49 seems with these very Palwars to have a special charm. For instance, they talk of unchas kos ha hhat, which means that on the occasion of ceremonial gatherings of the tribe to commemorate a birth, marriage or death, all the members inhabiting a circle of 49 kos, which area is supposed to represent their proprietary possessions, are invited to attend and eat the bread of sociability. Of these, however, the Surhuspur (Bandipur) branches are debarred from eating and drinking with the tribe by reason of illegitimacy; and Atrauliya branch because it is stained with blood, Members of these branches on such occasions are obliged to content themselves with baving dry rations served out to them in lieu of cooked viands. The absurdity of the former of these exclusions, and of the system

Cenaus Report, N.-W. P., 1865, II, 112, eq.

^{*}Census Report, 200.

¹ Paintbill Settlement Report, 206, sq.

PANKA.

A female of the Surhurpur illegitimate branch and another of the Birhar legitimate branch both married into the orthodox Rājkumār family of the Rāja of Dera, and thereafter both branches were alike admitted to the Rāja's social board. Both parties then eat and drink with the Rāja, but they still will not cat and drink with each other; and they thus remain a living confutation of the mathematical axiom that things that are equal to the same thing are equal to each other. Unchds kos bi kumak is another common expression with these people, which means that the proprietors within an area of 49 kos were wont in the king's time to make common cause in opposing the aggressions of the Meopur faction of the Rājkumārs and all others."

- 5. The turbulence of the sept in Gorakhpur during the Mutiny led to the confiscation of nearly all their possessions, and they have now fallen on evil days and possess little rank or influence.
- 6. In Faizābād the Palwārs give brides to the Gargbansi, Sūrajbansi, Chandel, Bachgoti, Bais and Chanhān septs. In Azamgarh they claim to belong to the Bhāvgava gotra; take brides from the Bais, Rāthaur, Bisen, Chanhān, Raghubansi, Donwâr and Chandel septs; and marry their daughters to members of the Sūrajbans, Kalhans, Rājkumār, Raghubansi, Sirnet and Chandrabansi septs.

Distribution of Palwar Rajputs according to the Census of 1891.

Dts	TRI	T'S.	Number.	Dierni	Number.
Agra			29	Ausmgurh		7.664
Jálugu			5	Kheri .		1,206
Jaunpur			11	Faizābā4 .		5,587
Ghâzipur			80	Sulthopur		177
Gorakhpu			3,376	Barabanki		14
Basti		•	231	To	TAL	18,380

Panka, Panika.—A low weaving and watchman tribe in South Mirzapur. They are the same people who are known in Bengal as Pân, Panwa, Paur, Pâb, Panika, Chik, Chik Baraik, Ganda, Mahato, Sawâsi or Tânti. In Mirzapur they are known as Panka,

Vos. IV.

Panika or Pankiva and Kotwar, the last of which, in relation to their occupation as village watchmen, means "keeper or porter of a castle" (Sanskrit kola or koshtka palla). The name Panka or Panika is usually taken from panik, which means the elastic bow which the wenver uses to extend the cloth as it is weven; but the Bengali synonyms for the caste make this uncertain. Colonel Dalton was disposed from their appearance to believe them of Aryan or Hindu, rather than Dravidian origin, and describes them as "in all probability remnants of the Aryan colonies that the Hos subjugated.1" This is disputed by Mr. Risley,1 who remarks that "the most cursory examination of the exogamous divisions of the Pans affords convincing evidence of their Dravidian origin," Though they have lost in Mirzapur their totemistic sopts, still their appearmore clearly indicates their connection with the Dravidian races like the Majbwars. They say that Parameswar created the first man of the easte out of water (pdsi) and appointed him his water-carrier. One day Parameswar sent him to bring fire. He went in search of fire to a place where the Majhwars were enting, and they gave him a share of their food. He returned to Parameswar, who taxed him with cating with such degraded people. He denied the charge, but Parameswar gave him a blow on his back and he immediately vomited up a quantity of rice and pulse. So Parameswar turned him out of Heaven, and the Pankas have since then gone down in the world and eat with Majhwars. The Mirzapur Pankas describe themselves as emigrants from Bálmandeva in Rîwa, and fix the date of their arrival some eight or ten generations ago.

2. They have lost, if they ever possessed, the elaborate scheme of totemistic septs which are found among the Pans of Bengal. Their rules of exogamy prohibit marriage with the daughter of the maternal uncle or of their father's sister, and they also do not marry in their own family as long as the members are united and live together, no matter how distant relatives may reside under the same roof. This abhorrence of marriage between persons residing closely together from early youth is, according to one theory, the basis of the rule of exogamy. They have a tribal council known as kutumayat or kabildari. There is no permanent president, but at each meeting the most respectable person present takes the chair.

¹ Descriptive Ethnology, 185. 2 Tribes and Onster, 11, 150.

⁴ Sep Westermarck, History of Human Marriage, 920 , 199.

3. Differences of wealth or social position (except the practice of degrading employments, such as shoe-making) are not a bar to marriage. Polygamy is permitted, but they can seldom afford more than one wife. If there are more wives than one, the head wife alone is mistress of the household and shares in the family worship. If an unmarried girl is detected in an intrigue with a clausman, her parents have to give a tribal feast and she is then restored to caste: but if her lover be an outsider, she is permanently expelled. The bride price amounts to five rupees in cash and two maunds of rice and pulse. The rules as to physical defects in bride and bridegroom agree with those of the allied tribes.

- 4. Divorce is permitted in case of adultery in either party or if pivores.

 Chamar or Dusadh. But the intention to divorce must be announced before, and sanctioned by, the tribal council.
 - Widow marriage and the levizate.
- Widow marriage and the levirate are permitted on the usual conditions.
- Sacousion, adoption 6. The rules on these subjects correspond in every way with those of the Majhwars,
- 7. The woman is delivered on a cot and is attended by a Chamilin midwife, who cuts the cord and buries it under the cot. The woman receives no food for two days: on the third she gets rice and cakes made of pulse and pumpkin (konkrauri). They have the usual sixth day (chhathi) and twelfth day (barahi) ceremonics, after which the woman is clean and resumes her household work. A husband does not cobabit with his wife for three or four months after her confinement.
 - 8. The only ceremony in adoption is the announcement of the fact and the exchange of mutual premises before the leader of the council.
 - 9. The marriage ceremonies do not appreciably differ from these of the cognate tribes. The betrothal is cleached by the boy's father sending to the bride's house five rupees and three or five sers of coarse sugar (gur). This is called neg bharna. Three days before marriage is the matmangar ecremony (see Bining 1). When the procession reaches the door of the bride, the relatives of the bridegroom distribute betel-nut among those of the bride, who return the compliment. After the procession returns to the reception place (januainsa), the bride's mother goes there with five sers of coarse sugar and three tooth brushes (datum): with these the bridegroom has to clean his teeth and she makes him smell the sugar. His father then sends the "offering" (charhana) to the bride-two shoots (edri) and five sers of sugar. At the netual ecremony the bride's sister fills the hands of the bride and bridegroom with rice and dried mangoes. Then the bridegroom rubs some red lend (sendar) on the branch of the cotton tree (semal) fixed up in the marriage shed (monro) and then smears it over the nese, forehead and parting of the bride's hair. This is the binding part of the ceremony. After this they are taken into the retiring room (kohabar) (for the significance of which, see Majhwar.") There the bridegroom has again to smell some sugar. On returning home there is the usual feast, and a day or two afterwards the bride and bridegroom go to "drown the naptial jans" (kalsa) in a neighbouring stream, and on their way home they worship every pleat and banyan tree they meet, and rub red lead on their trunks. This form of marriage is called charhanwa.

Vol. IV. n 2

^{&#}x27;The first name means "family council," Sanskrit kulmudu = the household; the latter an impertation from the Arabic qubit = kindred.

10. The form of marrying a widow by sagdi is very simple.

The man has to pay three rupes as the bride price to her relations, then he brings her home, and as she enters the house he rubs red lead on the parting of her hair and puts palm leaf ornaments (tarki) in her cars. On that day he feasts the clausmen.

11. Unmarried children and people who die of epidemic disease are buried: others are cremated. When the monriers return home they pour a little oil on the ground and sit down and console the chief mourner. He goes to the riverside and fixes a bundle of real grass into the ground, which he and the women of the household water every day at noon

¹ Para. 14.

² Para. 18.

³ This is the custom also in Bongal; Ball, Jungle Life 322, note; Rieley, Tribes and Castes, II, 159.

until the obsequies are completed.1 The death impurity lasts ten days, when the obsequies are concluded by a tribal feast.

afraid of evil spirits (bhil) which commonly reside in makes, pipal or banyan trees.

These are periodically propitisted by efferings of goats and fowls performed by the Baiga. They do not employ Brahmans in any of their religious ceremonies. Their two great festivals are the Holi and Dasami (Dasahra); but they in no way follow Hindu usage on these festivals, and offer a burnt offering to the marriage god Dulha Deva, who is represented by a piece of rudely out stone on a mud platform. His worship is performed by the Baiga. They observe the Någpanchami festival, but do not appear to have as is the case in Bengal, any special worship of the snake as the ancestor of the tribe.

18. They believe that old wells, streams and trees are haunted by evil spirits. The Baiga raises a regular Demonology and yearly subscription to provide for their worandestor worship. ship; and offers to them young pigs, fowls and goats, with a burnt offering (kow) of sugar and butter. The tenth day of the second half of the month of Kuar is devoted to the worship of the dead, to whom food and a burnt sacrifice are offered. On the teath day after a man or woman dies a young pig is encrificed. At the end of the proceedings they invoke the spirits of the dead in a low voice in these words-"Now live for ever in this house and do not trouble our children." Every day till the tenth day they lay out food at night for the dead along the road by which the corpse was taken to cremation or burial. They are constantly in the fear of the spirits of the dead, and whenever they have a bad dream or a nightmare they offer a burnt sacrifice (Aom) to them.

Various superstitions. Pattern. If they fail to do this, a woman in the next life is reborn as a Turkin or the wife of a Muhammadan, on whom they look with special abhorrence. They have the usual omens. They swear by putting a piece of iron in a drinking vessel of water which is held in the hand. No

On the significance of this eccessory, see B(yds, para, 14, Bisley, Tribes and Cartes, IL, 120, Panka will violate such an oath. They have a firm belief in witchoraft, and think that a witch can kill a man by looking at him; hence old women suspected of witchcraft are carefully avoided. They also believe that a witch can turn meat into a mass of blood and maggets merely by looking at it. Most diseases are due to demonincal influence, which is treated by the Baiga. They have a firm belief in the Evil Eye which is avoided by the use of sundry amulets.

15. They regard the cow as Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth, and will not eat boof. Any one eating it Social enstown, is put out of easte. Besides the flesh of the eow and buffalo, they will not eat the horse, ass, camel, jackal, lizard or erocodile. They eat pigs, fowls, fish and all kinds of jungle game. The men eat first and women after them. Some men wear a special religious neoklace (kauthi), and these, when they eat, throw a little bread and water on the ground as an offering to the earth goldess Dharti Mata. They use liquor and tebacco freely. They salute olders in the form pdl/agi, and the reply is asis, or a blessing. They respect their women, who work at spinning thread which the men weave. They are very hospitable to clansmen but fear strangers. They will not touch a Chamar or Dharkar, nor the wife of the younger brother. The father-in-law and mother-in-law of a married couple do not touch or speak to each other.1 They will cut food cooked by a Brahman and no one else. None but a Dom or Ghasiya will touch their leavings, Compation. The work as weavers and village watchmen. The loom is known as dongs. The main kinds of cloth which they make are the darap, charas and bhagua. The darap is a woman's thick sheet worth about two rupees. The charas is a loin cloth for men like the Hindu dhots: the bhagua a small cloth worn under the loin cloth only by Majhwar women, for which they get a fancy price. They often work up cotton into cloth for their customers, and for weaving a dhots receive three sers of kodo or saunda millet. Their dress presents no peculiarities. The women wear pewter anklets (pairs), glass wrist bangles (chārs), a wristlet (berawa) and a nose-ring (nath). As may be anticipated from their customs, they are regarded as pure village menials and their social status is very low.

Sas Lubhock, Origin of Civilisation, 11, 277.

Pankhiya.—A peculiar class of Muhammadans who are found in the low lands (khādir) of the Ganges in Shāhjahānpur and some of the neighbouring districts. They profess to be strict Muhammadans, but transgress the law of Islām by eating turtles, crocodiles and other animals usually regarded as forbidden food. They appear to be a fairly well-to-do cultivating class, and their hamlets show a stock of cattle, goats and poultry much larger than that possessed by ordinary Hindu cultivators.¹

Distribution of the Pankhiyas according to the Census of 1891,

Dis	PRICT	n.		Number-	Dray	raio	ra.		Number,
Campur				68	Ghāzipur				6
Allahabad	+			41	Basti .			-	550
Benares				8	Amagarb				111
Jampur			2	182	12000
		30	r. Y	3000	0.027	To	FAE		018

Pant, Panth-(Sanskrit pathin, "a path in merals or religion") a class of Hill Brihmans, who ascribe their origin to Maharashtra or the Marhata country. They belong to the Bharadwaja, Parasara and Vasishtha gotras and the Madhyandinya sakka. They say that some twenty-one generations ago their ancestor Jayadeva came to Kumaun. In the tenth generation his descendants divided into four branches, named after Sarma, Srinatha, Nathu and Bhaudas. Sarma became a physician, Srinatha, the spiritual preceptor of the Raja, Nathu, a teacher of Pauranile theology, and Bhandas, a soldier. The last-mentioned acquired in camp and court a habit of eating flesh like his Khasiya soldiers, and his descendants retained the custom. But the others confined themselves to vegetable food, as their present representatives do, and even oblige their wives, who come from flesh-eating clans like the Tiwaris and Joshis, to do the same. The Bharadwaja Pants intermarry with Tripathis or Tiwaris, Joshis and Paures. They rarely marry Pants of the two other gotras, and their customs and habits and manner of eating and drinking resemble those of other ^{*} Imperial Gazetteer, XII, 347, 19-

Hill Bråhmans. Their favourite object of worship is the Vaishnava Såkti.¹

Panwar.-A noted sept of Bajputs who in name represent the ancient Pramara race. Colonel Tod * calls them the "most potent of the Agnikula or fire races." "The world is the Pramar's" is an ancient saying, and Nankot Marusthali signifies the nine divisions into which the country from the Satlaj to the occan was divided among them. By another theory they represent the Pauravas, the famous race which, after the time of Alexander, was predominant in Bajasthan under the name of Pramara. They are mentioned in the Veda and Mahabharata, where the first kings of the Lunar race are represented as being Pauravas who reigned over the realms included between the Upper Ganges and the Jumna. They are the Porounroi or Porunroi of Ptolemy. General Cunningham, on the contrary, would identify these last with the Parihar sept. The popular account of them is that they were the third in order of creation from the Agnikunds, and were bence called Pramara or "first strikers,"

2. In Bombay the Pramaras, who are called a detachment from the Agnikula tribes of Mount Abu, like the others under the same fictional appellation, are, according to Dr. J Wilson,⁵ descendants of Kulis. Their traditions centre round the State of Dhar, the Raja of which is still a member of the sept. In romembrance of their heroic defence of the capital they repeat the verse—

Jahda Pyde tahán Dhár hai ; Aut Dhár jahán Puár ; Dhár bina Puár nahin ; Aur nahin Puár bina Dhár.

"Where the Puār is there is Dhār; and Dhār is where the Puār is; there is no Dhār without the Puār and no Puār without Dhār." They claim that the great Rājas Bhoja and Vikramaditya of Ujjain were members of their sept, and allege that they were kings of Mālwa for ten generations after Rāja Vikramaditya. The Puār dynasty of Mālwa ended with Jaychand; then Jītpāl estab-

Atkinson, Himalayan Gazettser, III, 421.

McCrindle, Indian Antiquary, XIII, 369.

Archeological Reports, IX, 55, sq.
 Indian Antiquary, III, 227.
 Tol, isc, etc., II, 263.

lished the Tomar dynasty which lasted one hundred and forty-two years and was succeeded by the Chauhans for one hundred and sixty-seven years.1 They have now a poor reputation in Central India, because they are said to have intermarried with Marhatta Súdras and the procest Rajput chief would disdain to cat with them or give them his daughter in marriage." Colonel Tod asserts that the famous Mauryas were the Mori, a branch of the Pramara clan, which occupied Chithor in the eighth century. Their golvas or sections in Râjputâna are Delât; Kalât; Doding; Kheyât and Pokhariya, of which the Delat is the most numerous. The men of the Pokhariya section like to be called Rawat, but are generally called Mer. The chief men are called Gameti. They are an industrious race, generally taller and better built than the Chauban Minas. The Kalats will not give their daughters in marriage to this section, but will take wives from them, and they intermarry freely with the Hindu Chitas and Barars and the other Mer clans. Their customs are the same as the Chanhan Minas.

3. In these provinces their expulsion from Ujjain under their leader Mitra Sen is ascribed to the attack The Panwars of the North-Western Frev-inces and Ondla. of the Muhammadans under Shahab-ud-din Ghori. The story truns that Raja Bijaypal of Bayana wished to bring about an alliance between his daughter and the son of Raja Sindpal of Ujjain, and with this view sent an embassy with presents. Sindpal, however, objecting to the proposed marriage, ordered the ambassadors to return, but his son Lakhansi meeting them on his own account accepted the proposal, and in spite of his father's objections, brought back the party to Bayana and there the marriage took place. Villages were then assigned to the prince and princess for maintenance. These, however, proving insufficient, the daughter was sent back to her father some little time after to solicit a further grant. But all that Sindpal gave his daughter was a sword, which she was instructed to deliver to her husband Lakhansi. He then interpreting the gift, whether rightly or wrongly, to mean that he should extend his possessions by its means, seized and added to his territories fourteen hundred villages, giving them over to his followers. At various times they moved northwards, their first halting-place being the Pargana of

¹ Malcolm, Contrat India, I, 26.

² Ibid., I, 130.

² Rajputana Gazetteor, II, 45.

⁴ Consus Report, North-Western Provinces, 1865, B, Appendix 67, #1.

Khairagarli, where they are hadderds and cultivators. They have in course of time become dispossessed of many of their estates, hartering them for less substantial wealth to Güjars and Bráhmans.

- 4. In Farrukhâbâd they trace their colonization to Râja Sindpâl Sinh, who is said to have settled the Pargana of Amritpur by the favour of the Râja of Khor. His sons quarrelled with, and were expelled by, Partit Rãê, the Kâyasth minister of the Râja, but one son Basant Sâh returned and recoveren his estate. The Bulandshahr branch say that they came from Nâgpur and Ujjain after their expulsion by Shahâb-ud-dîn Ghori.
- 5. The Khidmatiya, Barwar, or Chobdar are said to be an inferior branch of them, descended from a low-caste woman. No high-easte Hindu eats food or drinks water touched by them. According to the Ain-i-Akbari a thousand men of the sept guarded the environs of the palace of Akbar, and Abul Fazl says of them:—
 "The caste to which they belong was notorious for highway robbery and former rulers were not able to keep them in chock. The effective orders of His Majesty have led them to honesty; they are now famous for their trustworthiness. They were formerly called Māwis. Their chief has received the title of Khidmat Rāc. Being near the person of His Majesty, he lives in affluence, His men are called Khidmatiyas."
- 6. In Unio * the Panwars have two colonies in different parts of the district. In the Morawan Pargana they occupy about thirty villages. They say that their ancestor, Narhar Sinh Panwar, distinguished himself in the siege of Chithor under Akkar Shah and received a grant of this tract of land as a reward for his services. He founded the village of Narhai Chak, which is called after his name. These Panwars must have been once a powerful clan; but the great encroachment of the Bais reduced them to complete insignificance, and deprived them of a large portion of their land. In Sitapur, also, they fix the time of their smigration in the time of Akbar. In Gorakhpur they are said to have driven the Biseus out of Bhāgalpur, whence the latter retired to Majhanli. In Ghāzipur they trace their origin to Jhānsi and they

[|] Settlement Report, 13.

^{*} Census Report, 1865, I, Appendix 17.

Blockmann, I, 252. Billiott, Chronicles, 55.

⁵ Sattlement Report, 57.

Buchman, Eastern India, II, 305.

are known by the name of Ujjaini. The head of the sept in that part of the country is the Raja of Dumraon who traces his descent in eighty-six generations from Vikramaditya. The great Rája Sáladitya, who at the beginning of the seventh century overcame the Gupta dynasty, was king of Malwa and no doubt belonged to this clan. In Jhansi they are regarded as a shade higher than the Bundelas and in consequence all powerful chiefs take their daughters in marriage. "They are needy and as proud as Lucifer and will always elce out their living by robbery if they can," 1 In Mahona of the Lucknow District they have, from their connection with the Delhi Court, adopted some Musalman practices, such as fastening their coats to the left and paying reverence to the tdeiass emblematical of the martyrs Hasan and Husain, which are carried about at the Muharram, and they have before their residence a large stone which they hold in almost sacred reverence. They say that they brought it from Delhi and that it is their symbol of right to their estates which were granted to them by the Delhi Emperor; he is said to have enjoined them to take it as the foundation for their future settlement. Whenever a new Raja succeeds, he places upon it an offering of flowers, sweetmeats, and a few rupoes. 8

7. In Jálann the Panwars give brides to the Bais, Bhālé Sultin, Nikumbh, and Ahhan, and marry girls of the Chauhān, Kachhwāha, Parihār, Sengar, Bhadauriya, Rāthaur, and Chandel septs. In Unão they marry their daughters to Dikhita beyond the Ganges, Gaura, Chandels, Kachhwāhas, Chauhāns, Hāras, and Rāthaurs; and their sons to Chauhān and Dikhit girls.

Distribution of the Panuar Rajputs according to the Cennus of 1891.

Dist		CTs.		Hindus,	Muhamma- dasa.	TOTAL.
Delma Dûn				2,265		2,265
Saharanpur				251	313	564
Muzaffurnagar				136	496	623
Mesrut .				1,794		1,794

¹ Oldhum, Memorandum, 1, 16, ay.

[&]quot;Sleeman, Jeurney through Outh, I, L V.

^{*}Settlement Report, LXI.

Distribution of the Pannar Rajputs according to the Census of 1891 -contd.

	1	ISTE	2018			Hindos.	Muhamma-	TOTAL,
Bulandshi	hr					1,513	553	2,066
Aligarh					1	817	rii .	817
Mathura			,			683	2,686	3,369
Agra			+			7,386	12	7,878
Farrakhå	bad					2,994	8	3,002
Mainpuri						819		819
Ethwah			*			504		504
Etah						624	5	629
Bareilly						243		243
Bijnor				30	1	233		233
Budaen			20		014	778	123	901
Moradaba	d			1.		2,035		2,085
Slalvjabá:	opar	. \			-	4,639		4,689
Pillbhit			3.			310	18 m	310
Cawapur					-	4,609	41	4,650
Fatahpur						1,263		1,263
Bànda						9,290	28	2,327
Hamirpu						1,240	10	1,250
Allahaba	1.					517		517
Jhanni						1,045	5	1,050
Jalaun						671		671
Lalitpur						3,241	1	3,242
Beunres						465	88	553
Miranpue						126	•••	126
Jaunpur						4,105	7	4,112
Ghāzipur						691	783	1,474
Ballia						2,248	191	2,439

PARAHIYA.

Distribution of the Panudr Rajputs according to the Census of 1891 -concld.

	1	distra	CTs.			Hindus.	Muhamma- dans.	TOTAL.
Gomkhpu	r					3,987	195	3,392
Basti			,			1,870	7,366	8,736
Azamgarl	h.					1,465	1,417	2,882
TarAi						3,214		3,214
Lucknow				٠.		2,664	1	2,665
Unão	•				-	2,140	95	2,235
Båå Barel	i.					1,097	61	1,158
Shapur						2,845	587	3,432
Hardei				40.0	19	6,143		6,148
Kheri			15	ж.	1101	9	348	357
Falzābād					-	8,265	343	3,608
Gonda	,	4				336		836
Bahrdich			0			91	25	116
Salthopur		+		-		705	78	778
Partabgar	h					180		190
Bårabanki	•					1,108	92 .	1,130
			Ton	AL		90,863	15,803	96,365

Parahiya, Parhaiya.—A Dravidian tribe found in small numbers in Pargana Dudhi in Mirzapur. The word is said to mean, in Gondi, "burners of the jungle." Bishop Caldwell's writes:—"It has been said that the name Pareiya or Pariah is synonymous with that of the Pahariyas (from pakar, 'a hill') a race of mountaineers, properly called Malers, inhabiting the Rājmahāl Hills in Bengal: and hence it is argued that the Pareiyas may be considered, like the Pahariyas, as a race of non-Aryan, non-Dravidian aborigines. It is an error, however, to suppose that there is any connection between these two names. The word Pariah, properly Pareiya, denotes not a mountaineer, but a drummer, a word regularly derived from parei, 'a drum,' especially the great drum used at funerals. The name Pareiya is, in fact, the name of a hereditary occupation, the Pareiyas being the people who are generally employed at festivals, and especially at funerals, as drummers." Dr. Oppert oonsiders it means a mountaineer, from the Dravidian root pare, "a hill."

¹ Comparation Grammar, 549.

1. Those I have seen in Dudhi are a very wild looking set of men, about five feet three inches in height: Appearance. not as robust as the Korwas, but still a strong, active mee. Some have very sennty beards and moustaches. Some shave the front of the head, while others keep all their hair and leave it entirely unknupt. Colonel Dalton noticed considerable variety of features among them. Some, he thinks, might be classed as Negro, others as Mongolian. The former were flark and prognathous; the latter bright copper coloured, with flat, broad faces, and slightly oblique eyes. He thinks that they are closely akin to the Bhuiyars.3 Mr. Forbes also notices the variety of type among them, and remarks that they are so athletic and powerful, that "as strong as a Parahiya" has passed into a proverb.4 In Mirzapur they are renowned for their swiftness in running.

2. The members of the tribe in Mirzspur fix their beadquarters in the villages of Jhansi and Uspar, in Sarguja, close to the British frontier.

They have emigrated from there in quite recent times, and the emigration is still going on. They still go to their original home at the festivals of the Ramnaumi and Dasahra. There is no temple there, but in one of the chief men's houses there is a shrine to Devi called "the House of God" (desphar). There they wership the goddess, by each man throwing a little butter and resin (dhap) on the fire as a burnt offering (hom). After that, butter cakes (pari) are offered and consumed by the worshippers.

¹ Original Inhabitants of Bharatavaria, 32, eq.

² Description Ethnology, 131.

¹ Ibid., 284, note.

^{*}Satilement Report on Palaman, queted in Huntor, Statistical Account of Bongol, XVI., 207.

3. The Mirzapur people profess ignorance of the totemistic septs recorded by Mr. Risley,1 They Tribal organisation must marry within the tribe and the only and rules of exegumy. prohibited degrees are that a man cannot marry his daughter to the son of his brother or cannot marry himself into the family of his children. These are perhaps about the most simple rules of exogamy to be found in any tribe in these Provinces. They have a tribal council called " the brotherhood " (hhaigdri). The rules do not differ from those in the allied tribes. The usual punishment is a two days' feast to the brethren. Adultery, or formication with a person of another caste, is punished with excommunication for five years. The president (Makto) is a hereditary permanent official. If any one disobeys his orders, he is tied up and beaten with rods. Polygamy is recognized, but as a rule a man does not take a second wife unless the first is barren.9 The senior wife rules the household and shares in the family worship: if she is not treated with respect, they believe that the family goes to ruin. The wives five apart in separate huts. Polyandry is forbidden. Intertribal incontinence in women is easily condened, but young women are kept shut up at night and not allowed to go about alone. In the case of intrigues in the tribe, the offenders are brought before the council, and are not allowed to sit on the tribal mat (tall) until they feed the clausmen. Men or women found misbehaving themselves with a stranger to the tribe are permanently expelled. The marriage age is 12 for both boys and girls. The marriage is arranged by the boy's father under the advice of the Mahto. The bride-price is one measure (pasers) of salunda millet, five rupees in cash, and five cakes. This is the invariable rate fixed by tribal castom.

4. Divorce is easily managed. Either husband or wife can leave the other whenever they please. If the wife leaves her husband without due cause shown to the satisfaction of the Mahto, her relations are obliged to refund the bride-price. In ordinary cases of divorce, all that is necessary is to inform the Mahto. A divorced man or woman can re-marry. In the case of illicit connections, the children follow the Tribes and Castes, IL., App., 118.

Wastermarck, History of Human Marriage, 488.

easte of the father, but a son of a Parahiya by a strange weman will not be admitted to full easte rights.

5. Widow marriage and the levirate are permitted as among Widow marriage and the Bhuinhars (para. S). The same is the case levirate.

Adoption. with adoption, (ibid., para. 9).

6. The custom of Beena marriage (gharjasydu) prevails. In this case the man who serves for his bride sequires no rights from his father-in-law but inherits his father's estate.

7. All they know about succession is that a man's sons are his heirs, and that the eldest son gets somewhat in excess of the others, as the Mahto directs.

If there are no sons, the nearest agnates inherit.

8. No Parahiya can name more than three generations in the ascending line—father, paternal grandfather, and maternal grandfather,—and sons and daughters and grand children in the descending line.

9. The birth ceremonies agree closely with those of the allied tribes like the Bhuinhars (para. 12), but Birth ceremonius. they are attended by the Chamain midwife, who buries the cord under a tree in the jungle. On the third day at the exact time the child was born, the Dhobi comes and carries off the dirty clothes to the wash, and the baby is washed by the midwife. Then the mother is bathed and dressed in clean clothes by the husband's sister (nauad), who also re-plasters the delivery-room. Though this is done on the third day, they knew it as the sixth-day ceremony (chhathi). A month after the Dhobi again takes away the mother's clothes and washes them. The mother bathes, throws away all the earthen vessels, which were in the delivery-room (sanr), and changes the water pots in the house, Then she cooks for the family and is pure. The extension of the period of impurity, as compared with those in the cognate tribos, marks the strong dread felt by primitive races of the menstrual and parturition discharges,1

10. There is no actual ceremony at puberty, but the initiation of the child into caste is represented by the ear-boring (kanchkedan), which takes place in the fifth year, and after which the child must conform to caste regulations in the matter of food.

11. The marriage ceremony closely follows that of the Bhuinhârs, and there is a clear survival of marriage by capture in the custom by which, when he comes to be married, the bridegroom marches straight into the inner room and drags out the bride to the marriage shed, while she carries on a pretended struggle with him. The binding portion of the ceremony is the marking of the forehead of the pair by the bride's father with a mixture of curds and rice. There appears to be no trace of the Palamau custom by which oil or ghi is poured over the head and allowed to run down the face. If the betrothal is annulled by either side the bride-price must be returned.

Death coronnels.

Death coronnels.

are buried: all others are cremated. As among all the other Dravidian races, the dead are buried with the head to the South. When a corpse is burnt, the feet are placed to the South. The ashes are floated away (sersea dena) by being thrown into a running stream on the day of cremation. The final ceremony, the "tenth" (daswdn), is done on any day which may be convenient. On that day all shave and wash their clothes, and when they come to the house of the dead man, each one touches with his finger a mixture of oil and turmeric; after which they cat together, and the death impurity ceases.

13. At this "tenth day" ceremony they kill and eat a geat in the name of the deceased, that he may not return and trouble them. When the dead are neglected, they return in evil dreams and bring death and disease. They are propitiated by offering a sacrifice under a sdl (shorea robusta) tree. In the month of Aghan, there is a special worship of the dead, when a cook and goat are sacrificed in their honour. The worshippers cower down in abject terror and murmur "Fathers! protect our children and our cattle."

14. They pretend to be Hindus, but their worship is of a non-Religion and feetivals.

Aryan type. They worship the Dih, or collective village gods, and a female deity, Sairi

I

Forkes, Scillmant Report, quoted in the Statistical Account of Bengal, XVI., 207.
Dulton, Descriptive Ethnology, 138.

Vol. 1V.

Devi 1 with offerings of fowls, geats, and a bornt sacrifice (hom). The time for this worship is on a Monday in the months of Sawan or Baisakh. They have no temple, but offer the sacrifice under a sal (shorea robusta) tree. At the same time they worship deceased ancestors and propitiate Mother Barth (Dharti Mata) by pouring a little milk or liquor on the ground. They do not seem to have any knowledge of Gohet, which is one of their local gods in Lohardaga." Any one may make this offering. In each house there is a small mud platform dedicated to the sainted dead. The village gods and Sairi Dovi are worshipped at the ordinary village shrine under a tree in the jungle. In all cases of sacrifice, the worshippers consume the offering. They have three festivals-the Sawani, Baisakhi, and Phagua or Holi. On the two first, so called from the months in which they take place, they offer a burnt sacrifice (Aom), a goat, and a fowl to the local gods and Sairi Devi. These festivals are hold in the light fortnight of the month and usually on a Monday or Friday : but Monday is more usual. At the Phagua, they do not burn the Holi, but, as at the other festivals, drink and practise rude debauchery. They believe that evil spirits (blat, pret) live in the makua, sal, and pipal trees : at such trees they make offerings and will not cut them or climb their brauches. They also believe in a vague way that Devi lives in certain hills and mountains where they occasionally offer a goat. For this animal they have a peculiar respect. Before they sacrifice a goat, they feed the animal on a few grains of rice, and then pour water on its head before sacrifice. This is called "the worship of the goat" (bakea pajan). Sometimes, after worship, the goat is released in the jungles as a scapegoat, and this is particularly done when they worship Devi during an epidemic of small-pox.

15. Their omens, caths, and ordeals are the same as those of cognate tribes like the Bhuiyars and Bhuiyas.

Omens, caths, ordeals.

Dreams are interpreted by the senior man of

¹ The common explanation of her name is because "also moves about" (Arabic axir); but this is very improbable. She may be connected with Sewantiya, who appears to be a deity of boundaries; see Bhuinh dr., para. 16.

Risley, Tribes and Caster, IL, 164.

[&]quot;It is curious that the Bengal Farabiyas have a tradition that their tribe formerly held sheep and deer sacred, and used the dung of these animals to smear floors with, as they now use cowdrang.—Delton, Descriptive Ethnology, 131, note. They were possibly the tribal totams. The Mirmour Parabiyus soom to have the family, and always imply the displeasure of the sainted dead. Disease always comes from them, and in such cases an Ojha is consulted. Of the Evil Eye, they assert they have no knowledge.

They were possibly the tribal totams. The Mirmour Parabiyas soom to have transferred this feeling of respect to the geat.

Tabors. Beef is not eaten, but they admit that this rule is of modern growth and in imitation of their Hindu neighbours. They will not touch a Dom, Chamir, Ghasiya, or Dharkir. They will not eat food cooked by any one but a clausman. Women are not allowed to eat pork or to join in worship. A man cannot touch his younger brother's wife, and connection with her is considered the worst form of incest. They will not mention by name the dead, nor their fathers, nor the headman of the tribe.

17. They will not eat beef or the flesh of the horse, camel, ass, alligator, monkey, lizard, or snake. Any other Social quatoms. kind of meat is allowed. Women are not allowed to cat pork. The men eat before the women, and they have no ceremony at meals. They do not smoke the water-pipe (hugga), but use these made of leaves known as change, and chew the dry tobacco (sarti). They use bliang and liquor freely, which are believed to keep off malaria, but habitual drunkenness is considered discreditable. They salute each other in the form known as pádlagi, but they are now beginning to do the ordinary salam to strangers and superiors, Generally, in the presence of a superior, they stand on one leg, take off what answers to a turben, and how the head to the ground. They speak a sort of broken Hindi much intermixed with Mundari and Gondi. They rank fairly high among these jungle tribes, having much the same status as the Chero. Chamars, Dharkars, and Doms will cat food cooked by them, and they pride themselves on their abstinence from beef as a mark of respectability. Kalwars drink with them, but will not take water from their hands. The men wear earrings of gold or brass in both ears: the women pewter anklets (pairi) and brass wristlets (charle). They now do a little cultivation, but quite recently they never stored any grain, plucking and parching the crop as it got ripe. They usually pay about three rupees per annum for as much land (tora) as they can cultivate with a single plough. They make a living by cutting and selling wood and bamboos, and by collecting and exchanging forest produce, such as lac, silk-cocoons, and various dyes, fibres, etc. But they are a miserable people, living in little buts, apart from each other, along the hills, and with little clan feeling or effective tribal organization.

18. The following account of their brethren just across the border in Palaman may be quoted:—" In their habits and customs they present a curious mixture of the Hindu and the Aborigines:

they are certainly not pure Mundas : they may be Kurkus, who are a branch of the Munda family. They differ so much in personal appearance, that it is difficult to assign them any distinct physiological features. I have seen many of them that might almost be mistaken for Korwas, while others are a tall, fair, handsome race of men, with foatures rather Aryan than otherwise, and so athletic and powerful, that the expression 'as strong as a Parhaiya' has almost passed into a proverb; these last have none of the Negrito stamp about them. Many of them are to be found residing in the plains, but they generally choose the more jungly villages, and reside in a separate hamlet (tole) ; some are good cultivators, but the majority, like the Brijiyas, live in the hill ranges, and roam about from spur to spur, clearing small patches of ground, and cultivating a few hardy crops: they also bring down to the plains honey, beeswax, resin, lac, and other jungle products, which they barter for grain, salt, tobacco, and cloth. Most of them have Brihmans as priests, and employ the barber at marriages. Hindus of every class will drink water from their hands, and eat any food, but rice, that has been cooked by them: and, strange to say, they carry their Hindu prejudices so far that they will not eat ghi that has been kept in a jar (happa) made of cow hide. They always smear the cooking-places with cowdung, and cat barefooted like the Hindus. They know nothing whatever of their former history : in fact the only ancient custom of the tribe that I have been able to discover is that they formerly held deer and sheep sacred, and used the manure of these animals, where we now use cowdung. Notwithstanding their affectation of Hinduism, they still adhere to many of their old customs, which decidedly point to their origin. Marriage rarely takes place before the age of puberty. In their wedded life they are chaste and moral : before this takes place, the intercourse between the sexes is unrestricted. They never marry out of their tribe, and any woman found misbehaving with a male of an alien tribe is at once outcasted; and so with the males. Notwithstanding the employment of Brahmans and barbers, their marriage coremony is simple and decidedly aboriginal. I have never witnessed one of their marriages, and am unable, therefore, to describe all that takes place: but the principal part of the ceremony consists in pouring ghi or oil upon the forehead of the bride, and allowing it to run down the face. If it trickles from the centre of the forehead straight down the ridge of the nose, the fates are propitions and the marriage will be a happy one: if, on the centrary, the ghi or oil trickles down to the right or left, it is a sign either that the girl will shortly die or prove unfaithful: and very often in this case the marriage is broken off, and the maiden has to wait till another seeks her hand."

Paramahansa.—A general term for any notable ascetic, more especially one of the higher order of Sannyasis and more particularly Dandi Sannyasis. "He is the ascetic who is solely occupied with the investigation of Brahma, or spirit, and who is equally indifferent to pleasure or pain, insensible to heat or cold, and incapable of satisty or want. Agreeably to this definition, individuals are sometimes met with who pretend to have attained such a degree of perfection; in proof of it, they go naked in all weathers, never speak, and never indicate any natural want. What is brought to them as alms or food by any person is received by the attendants, whom their supposed sanctity or confederation of interest attaches to them, and by these attendants they are fed and served on all occasions as if they were as helpless as infants. They are usually included among the Saiva ascetics, but it may be doubted whether the classification is correct."

Pardesi (Literally "foreigners").—A class of thieves and swindlers who, in the old Criminal reports, are classed with the Jogis of Aligarh and the Dalerae of Bareilly. In 1868, a gang of them was captured and convicted in Gorakhpur, since when nothing more has been recorded of them. But recent enquiries show that there are still twenty-five families of them in Gorakhpur and about as many in the adjoining district of Champâran, where, however, they do not appear under that name in Mr. Risley's lists. The Gorakhpur Pardesis are still suspected of swindling in the disguise of faques or pilgrims. They are not shown separately in the returns of the last Census.

Parihar, .- (Sanskrit parihdra "repelling") A sept of Rajputs

W. L. B. Ferben, Report, p. 45. Wilson, Essays, I., 231 sq.

whose name is popularly derived from the fact that, when the first of the race issued from the Aguikunda or "fire-pit," he was placed as guardian of the gate (prithaldwara). The story how they supplanted the Kachhwahas is given in connection with that sept. The Parihar dynasty of Gwalior 1 lasted for seven generations from 1129 to 1211 A.D. Kutab-nd-dîn Aibeg took the city in 1196; during the short reign of Azam it was re-taken by the Hindus, who held it till 1232 A.D., when the Parihar dynasty became extinct. To the south of the Bolinga Ptolemy places the Porvaroi with their three towns, named Bridama, Tholobana, and Malaita. They were probably either the Parihar or Panwar Rajputs, who occupied this part of the country from a very early date. The Parihar Raja of Uchahara traces his lineage to a very remote date. As the Parihars are said to have been subjected by the Kalacharis they were probably in possession of the country before the Kalachuri conquest of Kalinjar and the establishment of the Kalachuri or Chedi era in 249 They claim to have preceded the Chandels and Baghels in Bundelkhand and Riwa. The Mahoba Khand * mentions the Parihar minister of Parmal, the Chandel, in the twelfth century and must therefore, be at least contemporary with the Chandels. The head of the family now lives in the Native State of Jagui. They call themselves descendants of Govind Dova, and Sarang Dova grandson of the celebrated Parihar Raja Jhajhar Singh of Hamnpur who emigrated there from Marwar. According to Colonel Tod 1 the capital city of the Paribars was Mandawar, from which they were treacherously expelled by Chondu, the leader of the Rathaur exiles from Kanauj. He notes that there is a considerable colony of them at the confluence of the Chambal with the Sindh and the Kuari, "who are the most notorious body of thieves in the annals of Thag history."

The Parihars of the North-Western Previscos and Outh.

Etäwah * "that intricate and inaccessible net-work of ravines that abute on the Pachnadi as the confluence of the Jumna, Chambal, Sindh, Kuāri, and Pāhuj is here called. They have been a particularly lawiess and desperate community." They here fix their rise after the defeat of Anaugpāl of Delhi. Some of them have Cunningham, Archivological Reports, II., 376, sq.

 Karth-Western Provinces Gaselines, I., 207.

⁴ Annals, I., 108, sq.

^{*} Census Baport, N. IV. P., 1865 I., App. 85.

recently raised their importance by marriages with Chauhan and Sengar families. The sept in the Unao 1 District inhabit the Pargana of Sikandarpur and possess a Chaurisi or estate of eightyfour villages. According to their tradition they came from Jigini or Srinagar in Kashmir. "About three hundred years ago, in the time of the Emperor Humayun, a Dikshit girl from Parenda was married to the son of the Parihar Raja, who lived in Jigini across the Jumna. The bridegroom same with a large escort of his friends and brotherhood to celebrate the marriage and the party on their journey passed through Sarosi. As they sat round a well (the locality of which is still shown, though the well has fallen) they asked who were the lords of the fort which stood not far off, They were told that it was held by Dhobis and other Súdras who held the neighbouring country. The procession then went on to Parenda and, returning, conducted the bride to her home. before the Holi festival, a party headed by Bhage Sinh returned. waited for the evening of that riotous feast, and then, when the guards of the fort were heavy with wine, and no danger was looked for, suddenly attacked and slaughtered them and made themselves masters of the surrounding country." Their property became reduced because the law of primogeniture did not apply in the sept, and it gradually became divided among the heirs. They intermarry with the Kachhwahas and Chauhans of the West, but have to pay heavily for their brides. They seem to have disputed with the Gantams for the territory on the Jumna below Kalpi, but were both finally overcome by the Chandels. Dr. Buchanan a asserts a connection between the Eastern branch and the Bhars; but in Gorakhpur they are held in good repute. In Azsmgarh a they say that they came from Narwan and settled in Pargana Muhammadabad, whence they were driven out by the Gabarwars. In Jalann they give brides to the Bais and Gantam septs; and take girls in marriage from the Kachhwaba, Bhadauriya, Chandel and Rathner. In Hamirpur they marry their girls to the Mainpuri Chanhans, Bhadauriyas, Jadons and Rathaurs; and their sons to girls of the Dikshit, Bais, Chandel, Gautam, Sengar, Gaur and Chauhan of the Cawnpur District. Their Gotra is said in Agra to be Kasyana.

I Mitati, Chronieles, 58, #19.

Einstern India, II., 465, Dr. Opport (Original Inhabitants of Bharateursa, 95) would connect their names with the Dravidian Paradas.

[&]amp; Settlement Heport, 62.

Distribution of the Parikar Rajputa according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	RIOI	9,	_	Number,	Dist	nter	в,		Number,
Moerut			,	20	JAlann				2,410
Aligarh		4		8	Lalitpur				428
Mathara			4	34	Benarce	ž.	4		5
Agra .				2,772	Mirapur				120
Farrukb4b4	1		4	996	Ballia .				407
Mainpori	6	*		685	Gorakhpur				93
Ethwah				3,324	Aznıngarh				1,146
Etah .				98	Tavái .				8
Bijner .	16	30	Č.	97	Lucknow	1			80
Budhun		1		58	Unho .	Ŷ.	13.	-	2,498
MorldAbld	ě.			22	R&A Bareli		ŋ.		721
Shahjahanp	ar	.33		62	Sitapur	v			191
Pilibhît	è			11	Hardoi				228
Cawnpur	4.			8,162	Kheri .				84
Patchpur	è			1,646	Faizābād				1
Bånda +	+			732	Bahrfiich				134
Hamfrpur				3,277	Sultanpur			-	293
Allahábád	6			1,346	Partabgarh		,		189
Jhanai .	٠		,	4,162	Barabanki				419
						To	TAE		31,880

Parwal; Parwar, a sub-caste of Banyas, enumerated in the former Census in Bundelkhand, Cawnpur and Agra, but who are not found in the returns of the Census of 1891. To the east of the Province they have two endogamous sub-divisions—Samaiya and Parwal and twelve gotras with twelve sections (mill). These gotras with their sections are thus given in Mirzapur:— Bachhalya with sections—Nârd; Pachlori; Dhumsar;
 Chharir; Rakari; Kadua; Barê Sareri; Abari; Kathari; Jageswar; Nagâich; Tahari.

(2) Goil with sections—Bâr; Nagari; Kharo; Bhuri; Luhâich; Chhola; Baisâkhiya; Karkach; Godhu; Sara; Gâgaro; Barahad.

(3) Båsil with sections—Deda; Deriya; Bala; Haidam; Doba; Raka; Råvandim; Chhalkar; Sakheswar; Sadravad; Chandari; Pahu.

(4) Khohil with sections - Setsägar; Kahala; Rathiya; Chhorari; Rohrairi, Kharhat; Sonharn; Lagait; Bagari; Khadhari; Birāri; Dhokhadari.

(5) Gohil with sections—Chhatra; Gaba; Mamala; Mahâdim; Baromaro; Indradhar; Baru; Kharahat; Punhara; Gabari; Papihad; Khalasi.

(6) Måthil with sections – Mar; Rodo; Båhil; Kathahai; Sakahman; Mandlari; Kharaich; Jhulari; Idoha; Gansil; Bhariware ; Bharburi.

(7) Kansil with sections—Bahuriya; Masta; Richa; Osil; Kochhichar; Gagwaro; Suchaha; Sirerê; Pabubarê; Chachari; Basawalo; Sarbsola.

(8) Bharil with sections—Bharu; Big; Khona; Iga; Kuba; Pâbub; Kuchari; Bhagwant; Harari; Bagari; Herir; Gaheri.

- (9) Kåsil with sections—Ujiya; Divkar; Sarbehhåi; Sola; Digaya; Puthwar; Dhana; Lata; Dhodhara; Dogar; Sanga; Induur.
- (10) Phágil with sections—Sobar; Gaghari; Phágil; Buhrerê; Chhirari; Baresara; Mangala; Balaichrê; Jajarê.
- Kohil with sections—Padmäwat; Bebare; Ghachi; Chha-gati; Dahari; Horari.
- (12) Bächhil with sections—Irari; Bibikuttam; Basil; Gaha; Gåjaro.

This list is imperfect in the names of some of the sections, but it illustrates the fertility of invention exercised in establishing this tribal organisation.

2. A man cannot marry in his own gotra or in any of its sections; in the section of his maternal uncle, father's maternal uncle, grandmother's maternal uncle, maternal grandmother's maternal uncle, maternal grandmother's maternal uncle,

3. In their marriage eccentonies the Parwills agree with those of the Marwaris up to the stage where the Marriage ecremonics. procession goes to the house of the bride. But when the bridgeroom reaches the door one peculiar ceremony is performed. They do not at this time worship Gauri and Ganesa as other Hindu castes do, which is known as the dodrpeja. Among the Parwills the bridegroom is there denorated with langles and ear-rings and then joins his party at the reception place (janudasa). Another special ceremony, known as bol, is also performed. In this the bride's father roturns to the bridegroom Rs 2-8 out of the sum paid by his father at the betrothal. Then the bride in a litter and the bridegroom on a horse walk round the nuptial shed-a commony called bindyaki. On this day the father of the boy feeds his relatives and friends on sweetments which is known as the chalens or "giving of parelied gmin," On the fourth day the ceremony of gananna is done. The bride and bridgersom, dryssed in new clothes, stand under the marriage shed and the bride takes some rice and sugar in her hands and walks seven times round the shed. When she finishes the seventh circuit she puts the rien and sugar in the hands of her husband. On the fifth day is the palaka upackde. The pair sit on a cot and on it is laid the dowry. After this the pair go to the place where the wedding party is bring entertained and distribute sweets among them. Then the bride's brother takes her home. Next is the dewre when the women of the bride's family go to where the bridegroom's party are bulting and sing songs of abuse directed against the father of the bridegroom-a survival of marriage by capture. After this is the phily. It consists in the relatives of the bride throwing coloured water on the friends of the bridegroom, as is done at the Plaggas or Holi. They receive fresh clothes from the girl's father to replace those that have been soiled. Last comes the ceremony of Lukus bandhili, The father of the bridegroom distributes presents to dependents, such as the barber, washerman, etc., and the bridgeroom comes to the bridg's house and opens one of the fastenings of the marriage shed (water) and receives some money or ornaments from his wife's father.

Pâsi; Passi 1 (Sanskrit polskita, " one who uses a noose") a Dravidian tribe principally found in the Eastern Districts of the

Based on exquiries at Mirraper and motes by M. Sayyid Ali Babi, Inr. Deputy Collecter, Parkibgarh j Mv. E. J. Kitts, C. S.; M. Malantes Prands, Hand Master, High School, Phiblish.

PÅSI.

Province and in Oudh. Their original occupation appears to have been tapping various kinds of the date tree for its sap, which is fermented into tari. Mr. Nesfield's idea that the name implies that they have recently emerged from the savage state of noosing birds does not seem to be justified by actual facts.

2. The Mirzapur tradition of the origin of the tribe runs thus:-One day a man was going to kill a number Traditions of origin. of cows. Parasurâma was at that time practising austerities in the jungle, Hearing the cries of the sacred animals be rushed to their assistance, but the cow-killer was aided by his friends. So Parasurama made five men out of knag grass and brought them to life by letting drops of his perspiration fall upon them. Hence arose the name Pasi from the Hindi pasina "sweat" (Sanskrit prassinna, "covered with perspiration"). The men thus created rescued the cows. Then they returned to Parasurâma and asked him to provide them with a wife. Just at that moment a Kayasth girl was passing by and her Parasurama seized and made over to the Pasis - a remarkable survival of a tradition of primitive polyandry. From them sprang the Kaithwas sub-caste.

3. In parts of Oudh they have a tradition which professes to explain their connection with other possibly allied tribes on the basis of a series of ridiculous folk ctymologies. Thus the Rajpasis say that they are a branch of the Pasis and originally came from Gujarat. Tilok Chand, instead of being the eponymous hero of the Bais Rajputs, was according to them a Bhar king and called his family Rájbansi or "these of royal lineage" and from this came the name Rajpasi. After a time they fell out and some took to their beds (khatyo) and were called Khatiks; others took to the trees in a grove (bagh) and were called Bachhal; while the remnant were called Rājpāsi or " royal" Pāsis. It is said that the Pasis and Arakhs there always claim kindred with the Bhars,1 All through Oudh the Pasis have traditions that they were lords of the country and that their kings reigned at Sandila, Dhaurahra, Mitauli and Ramkot in the Districts of Khen, Handoi and Unão.2 Ramket, where the town of Bangarmau in Unao now stands, is said to have been one of their chief strongholds. The last of the lords of Ramkot, Raja Santhar, threw off his allegiance to Kanauj and refused to may tribute. On this Raja Jaychand gave the Ganjar country to the Banaphar heroes, Alba and Udal and they attacked and destroyed Ramkot, leaving it the shappless mass of rains which we now find it.1 Similar traditions prevail in other parts of Oudh. In the Kheri District the Pasis, Rajpasis, Arakha, Mothis and Khatiks are looked on as kindred castes. The Rajposis of that part of Oudh say that they are descended from Ratan Dat Sinh, a Thåkur of Pataungarh, near Nîmkhâr, and a Påsi woman who bore him several children. His descendants went so far as to claim a marriage alliance with the Ahban Rajputs. The head of the clan is said to have yielded consent on the ground of the Rajput paternity of the Rajpasis, and to have invited the whole of the tribe to the betrothal feast. He plied them well with wine to which the tribe is to this day much addicted, and while they were in a state of drunken inscusibility, some seven or eight hundred of them were put to death and their estates seized by the victors. Those who escaped are said to have fled and settled in Bangar, Mahmudi and the northern part of Sitapur.

Lucknow Scillement Report, XXIV.

² Outh Gautteer, IL, 207.

- 4. Another legend tells that during the time Parasurima was incarnate there was an austere devotee called Kuphal who was asked by Brahma to demand of him a boon, whereupon he requested that he might be perfected in the art of thieving. His request was granted and there is a well-known verse regarding the devotions of Kuphal, the pith of which is that the montion of the name of Kuphal, who received a boon from Brahma, removes all fear of thieves; and the mention of his three wives—Maya (illusion), Nidra (sleep) and Mohani (enchantment) deprives thieves of success in their attempts against the property of those who repeat these names.
- 5. There is also a tradition that a descendant of Kuphal, named Karan, who dwelt in the jungle and is now deified by his rare, had two wives, the one a Chhatri and the other an Abîrin. From the former of these, it is asserted, sprang the Rājpāsis and Bhîls and from the latter the Khatiks.
- Still another tradition runs that the Pasis came originally from Kacohh and settled in Kanauj. According to this form of the tribal legend there were four brothers who were called out to fight, and of these Mohan alone responded to the summons. He was killed and of him were sprung the Rajpasis, while the descendants of the other brothers, who lived to fight another day, are known as Arakhs, Marghas and Thothos. A heroic Pasi, named Siu of Barniya figures prominently in the legend of Alha and Udal.

^{&#}x27;Hilbott, Chromicles of Undo, 24.

² Carnegy, Notes, 61 ag. Stinpur Settlement Report, 88.

- 7. In the Partabgarh form of the story the Pasis, Arakhs, Khatiks and Pachhars are all one. The original Pasis had a great fight with the Raja of Newar. Some of them were cowards and hid under a cot (kšatya) whence they came to be called Khatiks; others behind an Arka plant (Calotropis gigantes) whence they came to be named Arakhs. Again it is said that there was a Pasi, named Mahiyan, who was in the service of the Raja of Newari, and he was the Raja's watchman. One day his pigs trespassed into the fields of a Murŝo, named Koeli. He preferred a complaint to that Raja and demanded nine lakhs of rupees as damages. The Raja offered to give him four lakhs, but he insisted, in addition, that Mahiyan should be banished from the kingdom. When Mahiyan was ordered to go into banishment he refused and, summoning his easternen, defeated the army of the Raja; but he spared his life and compelled him to pay a fourth (chanth) of his revenue to the Pasis. This is said to have happened just before the wars of Alha and Udal.
- S. Another story current in Partabgarh is that the ancestor of the tribe was one Ratan Daksha. When Parasurama destroyed the Kshatriyas he killed Raja Vens as well as the others, and then the Rani kept the corpse of her husband and implored Parasurama to create from it a man to continue the race. Parasurama touched the head of Raja Vens and out of it sprung a man of dark complexion with a bow and arrows in his hand. He was the first Rajpasi and to him was entrusted the duty of watchman of the kingdom. In the form of the story current in Philibhit the Rishis were offended with Raja Vens for his implety and killed him; but at the prayer of his Rani they formed a man out of his sweat (pasing) and he was the first Pasi.
- 9. From all this mass of tradition it may be gathered that there is a close connection between the Pásis, Arakhs, Mothis and Khatiks, which from their appearance and manners is not antecedently improbable. Mr. Carnegy tries to make out a closer connection between the Pásis and other Rájput tribes of Oudh, such as the Bais, than is perhaps warranted by the facts.

10. As might have been anticipated from the discrepant legends of their origin and connection with other Teibal organisation. tribes, the internal organisation of the caste cannot be ascertained with absolute certainty. At the recent Census they were enumerated in six sub castes-Arakh, Baurasi, Kaithwâns, Mothi and Râjpâsi. In Mirzapur the Pâsis name five endogamous sub-castes-Kaithwâs who, as already stated, claim Kâyasth origin; Bhar, a tribe which though perhaps allied to the Pâsis it is more convenient to discuss separately; Pasmangta who are said to be begging Pasis (Pdsi mangua, " to beg ") and to be so called because they receive alms from other Pasis at marriages; Baurasi said to be so called because one of the five original Pasis created by Parasuráma or Parameswar once ran amuek (banrána). To the east of the Province Pasis are often designated by the general term Pasi-Baurasi. Last come the Pahri who are said to take their name from their duty of keeping guard (pakea); they are often classed as a distinct tribe. Mr. Sherring | from Benares gives another list-Jaiswara, who like the Banya and other clans of the same name take their title from the old town of Jais; Kainswit or Kaithwan, who correspond to the Kaithwans or Kaithwas of the other lists; Gûjer, who, of course, are a distinct tribe; Tirsuliya, who take their name from the triands or three-bladed knife with which they pierce the stem of the palm tree. Dr. Buchanan a makes a curious mistake in connecting the name of this sub-caste with the sacred tulasi, because they have planted the sacred Osymum, called tirsali in the vulgar tongue, and have thus become a sort of Hindus. Next in Mr. Sherring's list follow the Pasiwan; Chiryamar or "bird-killers" (chirya-marna) who are more properly included among Baheliyas, a possibly allied tribe; Byadha (Sanskrit vyddka, "a hunter") who also come more properly under Baholiyas; Bihāri or "residents of Bihar" and Bhar which it is advisable to treat separately. In Bihār a there are four sub-castes—Byādha, Gaiduha, a word which seems to mean "milkers of cows" (gdd-duhua) ;-Kamani and Tirsuliya, of whom the Byadha say that their original occupation was cultivating the water chestnut (ringhara); but they now tap date trees like the other sub-castes. A list from Partab-

¹ Hindu Tribes and Capter, I., 389.

² Ecation India, L. 175.

Rieloy, Tribes and Castes, II., 166.

garh, again, gives, Rajpasi, Gajar, Kaithwans, Gual, who are really Ahîrs, Mangta, Baurŝsi, Arakh, Khatîk and Pachhar. From all this it seems obvious that the term Pasi is merely occupational and includes a number of distinct tribes, whose only connection is the common occupation of extracting the juice of the date palm. The complete Census returns show 305 Pasi sub-divisions of the familiar type. Those of the greatest local importance are the Baheliya and Bhîl of Budaun, the Aheriya and Bhîl of Morádábád; the Parasarámi of Allahábád and Fatehpur, the Boriya of Fatehpur; the Rewas of Banda; the Baheliya and Bhare of Mirzapur; the Babeliya, Manwas and Tarmali of Ghazipur; the Chaurasi of Basti, Sultanpur and Barabanki; the Bhadauriya of the Tarai; the Banya of Lucknow; the Boriya, Mahtiya and Parasarâmi of Unão; the Boriya of Rãê Bareli; the Bachar, Dhânuk and Khatik of Sitapur; the Banya of Gonda; the Bachar, Chunarha, Dhånuk and Khatik of Bahraich,

11. It does not appear that Pasis actually introduce outsiders into the easte, but it is reported from Partab-Marriago rules. garli that if a woman of the tribe become pregnant by a stranger to the tribe and her child be born in the house of her father or husband it will be accepted as a Pasi of pure blood and admitted to all tribal privileges. The rule of exogamy prevailing in the endogamous sub-castes is not very rigidly fixed. Many Pasis say that they har all near relations generally. Mirzapur they fix the prohibited degrees as the families of the maternal uncle, paternal uncle, maternal and paternal aunts for seven generations in the descending line. Marriage questions are decided by the tribal council (panchdyat) which is presided over by a chairman (chaudhari) selected at each meeting from among the most influential adult males present. The council deals specially with cases of immorality and pollution caused by journeys across "the black water" (kdlapdai) which the criminal pursuits of the tribe occasionally necessitate. When a woman is detected in an intrigue with a clansman the relations on both sides have to give a tribal feast and the offenders are then admitted to easte. In the same way if a man offend with a strange woman he has to purchase his re-admission; but if a woman intrigue with a stranger she is permanently expelled. Concubinage, even with a woman of the tribe, is in Mirzapur punished by expulsion. Immorality in both sexes, provided it be inter-tribal, is lightly regarded. Marriage takes place from the age of five or seven to sixteen; but infant marriage is the rule. No bride or bridegroom price is taken; but the friends of the girl are expected to give something to the relations of the bridegroom by way of dowry. If either party become blind or leprous after marriage a separation can be procured with the leave of the council. Widow marriage and the levirate both prevail. the deceased husband leave a brother, who is of age to marry and is not already married, he is expected to take over the widow. The regular sagdi marriage is performed only in the case of virgin widows and they are as a rule married to widowers. In the case of widows whose marriage has been consummated there is practically no ceremonial of any kind and such a woman can with the permission of the tribal council live with a man as his acknowledged mistress (rokker). This form of union is recognised after a tribal In the ordinary sagdi the only ceremony is that the intended husband goes to the widow's house with a few friends taking with him some jewelry (generally five articles for hick) and a suit of clothes. The friends on both sides cat together and during the night in a dark room the man marks the porting of the woman's hair with red lead and next morning she is dressed in her new clothes and taken home. In the case of the levirate there is no fiction of ascribing the children of the subsequent union to the elder brother. If the widow marry an outsider she loses all rights in the property of her late husband. If she marry her husband's brother he has the usufruct of the property of his late brother and manages it until the sons of the first marriage come of age, when they succeed.

12. The Pasis of Mirzapur profess to be able to state elaborate rules on the subject of adoption in imitation of those prevailing among the higher Hindu castes; but practically a man only adopts his brother's son with leave of the council and there is no recognised religious element in the transaction. The same is the case with succession. A man's heirs are his sons or in default of sons his associated brethren. Primogeniture is so far recognised that the eldest son gets a quarter share in excess as compared with his younger brothers. Widows have a life interest, but this depends on their continuing chaste and not marrying by ragdi. In default of a daughter or a daughter's son the inheritance devolves on him who performs the funeral ceremonics of the deceased.

13. During pregnancy the Eastern Pasis make vows and a sacrifice to Birtiya, the village pantheon (dik) Birth peremonies, and to Philmsti Devi. If the mother has an easy delivery these deities are honoured with an offering of spirits (khapper) and a hog (mdl). They have no ceremony on the sixth day (chhathi). The Chambrin midwife attends for six days and receives as her remuneration four sers of grain and four pice, if the baby he a boy, and half that amount if it he a girl. On the twelfth day is the barabi ceremony when the house is cleaned and the earthen pots replaced. Mother and child are bathed by the barber's wife, her hand and toe nails are cut and her feet stained with lac dye (wohdwar). Then the father of the child sacrifices a young hog to Birtiya and pours a libation of spirits on the ground. After this he invites a few of the tribesmen and feeds them on the pork and boiled rice. By this dinner the birth impurity is finally removed. When the mother goes first to draw water from the well after her confinement she places a handful of rice on the platform and bows down to it. The husband does not cohabit with his wife for six months after her delivery. The only ceremony of initiation is the ear-boring (kanchhedan, kanbedha) which is done by the village goldsmith when the child is five or six years old. His fee for doing this is one pice. The family feed on choice food that day and from that time the child has to conform to caste rules in the matter of eating and drinking.

14. The marriage is of the usual low easte type. The negotiations are commenced by the father of the Marriage ceremonies. bride who goes to the boy's house with the salutation Ram! Ram! as he enters. The boy is sent for and approved. The Pandit is called in and approves the horoscopes of the pair (rastarg). His future father-in-law gives the boy a rupec and this completes the betrothal (mangai). Then follows the tilak or marking of the boy's forehead by his father-in-law. This is known to the east of the Province as the "water drinking" (pani pina) and the bride's Brihman and barber take with them a betrothal gift consisting of a tray (thali), a coccanut (nariyal), one or two pieces of cloth, some sweetments and one rupes or eight annas in cash. A feast of rice and pork follows and on that day the wedding day is fixed. Then comes the rite of matmangara or collegtion of the sacred earth (for which see Bhuiye, paragraph 14) and the erection of the nuptial shed (mauro), which is made of four bamboos and contains in the centre a plough beam (harie) and some wooden images of parrots (suga). On that day the Pandit binds round the wrist of the boy a bracelet (kankan) consisting of iron surrounding a mango leaf and some mustard seed to keep off ill-luck. Next follows the ancinting of the bride and bridegroom with oil and turmeric, and on the day before the procession starts the boy's father sacrifices a hog and pours a libation of spirits on the ground in honour of Agwan Deva, the herald deity who presides over enterprises, the Panchon Pir and the goldess Phulmati. ceremonies are of the usual type. The binding part of the marriage ceremony is the bridegroom rubbing some red lead on the ploughshare set up in the muptial but and smearing some on the parting of the bride's hair, after which they revolve five times round the ploughshare. Next follows the kehabar ceremony when the married pair retire into an inner room. The significance of this rite is explained in paragraph 18 of the account of the Majhwars. Five days after the return of the bride with her husband, the bridegroom's sister flings the marriage festoons (landarwar) into running water with the sacred water pots, (kalsa), and on her way back she worships every banyan and pipal tree she comes across with an offering of rice and water.

15. The dead are disposed of in the usual Hindu fashion. They usually cremate their dead, but sometimes Death ceremonies. bury them when epidemic disease prevails. When they bury, the head of the corpse is usually laid towards the north and the feet to the south, while the face is slightly turned to the cast. Immediately after death a little sugar is put into the mouth of the corpse. After oremation the relatives chew a leaf of bitter wise as a sign of mourning and then cat a little sugar as a protection against demoniacal influence. The eremation is generally followed by a drunken revel at the village grog-shop. Next morning the chief mourner arranges a habitation for the vagrant spirit (pret) by fixing some blades of kusa grass on the bank of a tank. On this he regularly pours water during the ten days of mourning, and food is left out every night for the use of the ghost along the road by which the body was removed for cremation or burial. The ashes are usually left on the site of the pyre, but some who are more careful collect them for ultimate disposal in the Ganges or some other sacred river.

16. To the cast of the Province some of the more advanced Passis are often members of the Sakta sect, but few ever become regularly initiated. Many of them in Mirzapur worship Bandi Måi, a form of Devi. She has no regular temple, but nearly every house has a platform (chanri) in her name and an image of brass or silver is placed upon it. This image is adorned with a necklace (mdla) and at every marriage in the family a fresh bead is added to the necklace, of gold for a boy and of silver for a girl. She is worshipped specially at marriages with the sacrifice of a castrated goat (khassi) cakes (pile) laddu), sweetments, rice, milk, flowers and betel leaves. There is no holiday in her honour but she is specially worshipped whenever a vow is made or any particular blessing craved. Others worship Agwan Deva, Phulmati or the Panchon Pir. To these deities pigs and liquor are offered. The household worship of the Panchon Pir is often represented by an iron spear (sdag) with three points or by five wooden pegs buried in the floor of the court, yard. In Partibgarh they have a large collection of local gods, such as Karadeva, Miyan, Kambira, Kshetrpål or Bhūmiya and Bahirwār. To the last two pigs and liquor are offered which are consumed by the worshippers. These offerings are made on a Wednesday or a Saturday. In Pilibhit Bhilmiya, or the godling of the soil, is known as Bhilmsen. But Pasis, like all the lower Hindu castes, are very catholic in their worship and will visit the temb of any saint (pir) or marty? (sayyid, shabid) which is convenient. They offer water every day to the souls of their deceased ancestors in the first fortnight of Kuaz. In the east of the Province some Pasis again have quite another set of deities, such as Râm Thâkur, who perhaps represents Râma, Mahâbîr Ram Thakur is honoured with the sacrifice of a and Bhairennath. castrated goat at weddings. Mahabir and Bhairon receive a bloodless offering, the former ladds sweetmeats and the latter cakes (bara) made of the flour of the and pulse. When small-pox breaks out Sitala Måi is specially worshipped by women. When the time comes for tapping the date palms they collect a few friends and burn some incense over the sickle (hassuli) used for the purpose, and over the wooden strop on which it is sharpened. All classes of Brahmans will officiate at their marriages and other ceremonies, and do anything for them which does not involve touching them or anything in their houses. Their festivals are those ordinarily observed by Hindus, the Phagua or Holi, Dasami, Diwâli, Kajari, Khichari and Tij. E 3 Vot. IV.

17. Their demonolatry is that common to the lower class of Hindus. They believe that old trees are occupied by evil spirits (bidt) or demons (deo, bir) and to these collectively a pig is offered in the month of Aghan and a little spirits poured on the ground. They generally perform the ariddha rite, and some of the wealthier of them go even as far as Gaya for that purpose. They will not cut down or injure the pipal tree which they believe to be the abode of Vasudeva.

18. To the east of the Province the women wear bracelets of glass or lac (chiri) on their wrists, necklaces (guriya), nose-rings (sathiya), ear ornaments (karanphil), heavy pewter anklets (psiri).

The men wear an ear ornament (Inrka) and round the neck a gold coin or bead or an image of Sîtala, if the wearer have escaped a severe attack of small-pox. If he has lost his first wife and married another he will hang an image of the dead woman round his neck. This is also very commonly worn as a protective by the second wife and is known as "the co-wife" (santin). Any present made to the new wife is always first offered to this image in order to avoid any jealousy on the part of the ghost. They swear on water or on the head of their eldest son. They believe strongly in witchcraft, possession by evil spirits, the demoniscal theory of disease and the Evil Eye, In such cases the Ojha or Syana is consulted. They will not cat the flesh of the cow, buffalo, alligator, monkey, horse, jackal or lizard; most of them cat pork, fowls and field rats, sheep, goats and deer, but no meat is eaten in the fortnight in Kuar sacred to the dead. Women eat apart from and after the male members of the family. They use tobacco and spirits and the latter often to excess. salute castemen by the form pddlags and their seniors by Rdm ! Rdm! Low castes like Chamars and Bhangis will take water from their hands. As a rule they will eat kachehi cooked by their own castemen or by Brahmans, and pakti cooked by a Brahman, a Rájput, respectable Banyas such as Agarwalds or Rastãogis or by a Halwai.

19. A few are landowners, but most of them are day labourers, collectors of palm-juice, or makers of grindstones or curry stones. They bear on the whole an indifferent reputation and in the east of the Province many of them are noted thieves and burglars, who often make long journeys and commit serious crims.

General Sleeman says that in his time it was supposed that there were one hundred thousand families of Pasis in Oudh, who were skilful thieves and robbers by profession and were formerly Thags and poisoners as well. They generally formed the worst part of the gangs kept up by refractory landowners "who keep Pasis to fight for them, as they pay themselves out of the plunder and cost little to their employers. They are all armed with bows and arrows and are very formidable at night. They and their refractory employés keep the country in a perpetual state of disorder." Things, of course, have much improved since the British occupation of the Province but "even now in the Bangar the Pasis pride themselves on taking some evidence of their prowess—a penknife, a handker-chief, from the tents of the English officers who visit their jungles for sport, and with whom they are generally on the best of terms".

¹ Journey through Outh, 25, Stapus Settlement Report, 87, Harlet Settlement Report, 5,

Distribution of Pasis according to the Census of 1891.

	D	Durnicrs.	18				Amkb.	Barriel.	Gújar	Kultbwin.	Mothi.	Rajplasi.	Others.	TOTAL.
Dekra Dûn	1					1.	1	848	231	25	1	60	77.61	1,284
Sahāranpar							1	188	18	ke	1	150	601.00	743
Mazallarmagne						+	1	13		94	i	1	9	421
Meernt .							1	i	100	1	i	1	669	663
Rathers .						•		1	Ti g		1	1	14	14
Agra .				,		•		1	107	n	ī	:	11	п
Parrakhibad					i		1	00	7		1	0	15	36
Mainpuri .								69	-	1	1	н	25	96
Etamh .					5	*	ŧ	1	300	60	I	1	91	55
Etah .			*				ŧ	7,	-	:	1	1	62	60
Eareilly .							ı		1	156	:	1	184	840
Bliner .							1	1		1	i	;	00	os.
Bedåen .			*					1	30	1	2	1	6,738	6,746
Moradabad						-			1	1	1	1	7,199	7,199

14.218 8,166	2,657 348	15 889	88 1,306	437	1	3,098 112,892	88	130	91	1,541	2,158 475	0,001	4785	419	17.267	324
-				26		100,242	-	-					-	-	_
1,830	2,749	198	6	ia	1	91	ı	1	1	10	4	i		1	7,109	606,0
- 69	5,826	i	29	14	7	I	1	1	T	1	-	1	1	1	14,155	10,413
4	18	:		1		,	1	1	-	1	1	:	1	1	i	-
*	+	*		15		*		,	1		10	3				•
										٠
	٠	i			•
	٠	*						*			+	*
								*	٠	*		٠	ú.
1								,					•	٠
Skahjabanpur	Pilibhit	Cavrigur .	Fatehpur .	Pånda .	Hamirper	Allahabild .	Thânsi .	Jalann .	Lalispar .	Benares .	Mirsapur .	Jacapur .	Ghåalpur .	Ballia .	Gerakhpur	Besti

Distribution of Pasis according to the Centus of 1591 - concid.

		Distraicts	, S.L.				Andrie.	Baurdel.	GGM	Kaitiewin,	Mothi.	Răpsei.	Others	Torat.
Assemgarh				,			1	1	1	22.4.0	· ·	1	65	28,484
Turki .		٠				+	250	Ī	1	1	16	2	918	1961
Lucknow .	•						103	169	170,02	19	4.688	29,107	1,608	75,656
Date .	,				,		8	1970	29.818	120	ŧ	19,314	31,792	82,431
PAS Bareli	*		•		•	+	1	870'09	10,434	28,943	Ī	17	14,325	101,948
Sftapur .	,						9,020	14	13	-	1,043	95,643	5,157	104,900
Hardoi .	*					3	-	90	21	Ī	48 27	86,308	627	86,039
Kheri .	*			*	,		735'S	242	4	I	1.218	03,350	559	74,515
Faisabhad	٠			*			-	2,786	34,623	1	1	1	287	37,748
Genda .		*					I	14,061	22,011	İ	812	168	1,110	37,665
Sabrthieh .		*	•				317	8,653	21,450	66	1	4,221	15,635	60,095
Saltanpar	٠						1	23,455	2,687	6,598	:	į	1,973	34,733
Partshaneh					4		1		127	61,998		I	239	62,459
Baral anti						7	4,314	73,615	5.931	i	i	26,653	10,318	129,828
				TOTAL	34.	-	16,310	907,558	175.857	321.914	8.267	353,685	135,961	1,210,311

PATHARI.

Patari.-A branch of the Majbwar tribe, who have now become their family priests. Two explanations of the name have been given : one connects it with the Sanskrit patravárnika in the sense of "a scribe" or "recorder," in which case they may have been originally priests and genealogists of the Gond Majhwars. Another theory connects the word with pdt which in Gondi appears to mean "a sacred place". Thus in Mandla to propitiate evil spirits the Gonds set up rude shrines (pdt) which are "sometimes merely a bamboo with a piece of rag tied to the end, a heap of stones, or perhaps only a few pieces of rag tied to the branches of a tree. However, the spirit is supposed to have taken up his abode there, and in consequence on the occasion of any event of importance happening in the Gond's family, the spirit has his share of the good things going, in the shape of a little spirit, and possibly a fowl sacrificed to him." 1 The same word apparently originates Pat who is a mountain doity of the Kurs, and Mainpat which is the hely plateau of Sarguja, looked upon with reverence by these Dravidian tribes.* The word Patari or Pathari with synonyms Pradhan and Gugya appears as a sept of the Gonds of Mandla,5 Of the Gond Pradhân Mr. Hislop writes: "The Pådål also named Pathådi, Pardhân and Desái is a numerous class found in the same locality as the Raj Gonds, to whom its members act as religious counsellors (Pradhdua). They are in fact the Bhits of the upper classes, repeating their genealogies and the exploits of their ancestors, explaining their religious system and assisting at festivals on which occasions they play on two sorts of stringed instruments (kingra and jantar, yantra). For their services they receive presents of cows and bullocks, cloth, food and money." 4 This is pretty much the position of the Patari among the Mirzapur Majhwars.

2. The Mirzspur Patäris are divided into four exogamous groups (jund) which each contain a number of septs (kuri) mostly totemistic. These septs are practically analogous with those of the Majhwärs (q.v.). In the first exogamous group we have six septs—Markam, Poiya, Kusro, Soi, Neti and Serlo: in the second twelve—Tekam, Marpachi, Netām, Pusām, Kariyām, Sindrām, Kerām, Oima,

¹ Central Provinces Gasetteer, 275.

Dalton, Descriptive Ethnology, 231, 135, 223.

¹ Central Provinces Gapeticer, 273.

Hislop, Papers, 6.

Dadâichi, Keichi, Ulagwati, Kargati: in the third Marâi, Sarota, Soiyâm, Sarotiya, Bandaru, Karbê, Kursenga, Purkela, Masrâm, Armor, Ârpati and Karpati: in the fourth Korâm, Poika, Armon, Pâwalê, Chichâm, Balariya, Otê, Urich, Salâm. Most of these are analogous to the Majhwar septs and, as there shown, many of them are totemistic. A closer analysis of the Contral Provinces' septs of Gonds will probably show that this is generally the case.

8. The Pataris say that they were originally Majhwars : the whole tribe was descended from seven Tradition of origin. brothers. When they could find no one else to act as family priest (purokit) they compelled the youngest of the seven to undertake the duties. The curious part of the arrangement is however that a Majlawar must be attended as his priest by a Patari of the same sept as his own. Thus a Markûm Patâri acts as priest to a Majhwar of the Markûm subdivision and so throughout the tribe. The result is that the parishioners or constituents of a Patari are scattered over a large area and he has to undertake long journeys in order to pay his periodical visits. The system under which, by a specialisation of function this class of aboriginal local priests was formed, is very instructive in its analogies to what was probably the method by which the tribe of Brahmans with its numerous local sub-divisions was organised.

Tribal comed. 4. Their tribal council is exactly on the same system as among the Majhwars.

5. The rules of marriage agree with those of the Majhwars, but there appears to be no hypergamy. They Marriago rules. marry rather earlier than Majhwars-at the age of ten for boys and nine for girls. The bride price fixed by invariable tribal custom is ten sers of sesamum (tili), ten sers of the ardi pulse, twelve measures (panseri) of rice, four measures of coarse sugar, three rupees in cash and a cloth (dhoti) for the bride. Formerly part of the bride price used to consist of liquor but this gave rise to such an amount of quarrelling that about four years ago the tribal council decided that coarse sugar (gur) was to take the place of liquor. A wife, who makes a practice of adultery, who wastes the family property or thieves, may be discarded with leave of the council. If a man does not support or ill-treats his wife she can leave him, and such divorced women can marry again by the angli form. Polygyny is allowed and the children of all the wives rank equally as heirs. Concubines are not allowed: illegitimate children follow the caste of the fathers, but the clansmen will not eat with or intermarry with them.

8. When a man dies the council marry his widow to some widow marriage. Widow marriage and the kindred of the first husband is essential. On a day fixed the man eats at the widow's house. Next day he takes her home and puts on her a set of bangles and ear ornaments (chiri, tarki) and pays to the husband's younger brother, who accompanies her; twelve rupees, a turban and a loin cloth which are regarded as the equivalent of the bride price. The levirate is allowed on the usual conditions. They practise Beena marriage in the usual gharjaiyan form.

Domestic coromonies. 7. The domestic ceremonies are practically the same as those of the Majhwars.

S. The position of the Patari is decidedly low. He is looked upon with contempt as a beggar, and he is discredited because, like the Hindu Maha-brahman, he takes the clothes, utensils, etc., of the dead man which are given to him in the belief that he will pass them on for the use of the deceased in the next world. And although they are the family priests of the Majhwars, the latter show their contempt for them by refusing to eat with them or drink water from their hands.

Påthak.—(Sauskrit pāthaka, "a reciter, teacher") a functional division of Brāhmans, who like the Upādhyāya, are devoted to the instruction of youths in religious knowledge and the manner of performing rites and coremonics. The term pātha is technically applied to the modes of recitation of the Vedic texts, of which there are five—Samhita, Pada, Krama, Jata and Ghama.

Pathan.—One of the chief Muhammadan tribes. There has been much controversy on the origin of the term. To quote Dr. Bellew, the latest and best suthority on the ethnology of these races, "The origin of the name Pathan, and the nationalities originally represented by it, carries us back to very early times. The term Pathan is not a native word at all. It is the Hindustani form of the native word Pukhtana, which is the plural of Pukhtan or Pakhtun (the a as in our pack) as it is pronounced by the Afridi. And Pukhtun is the proper patronymic of the people inhabiting the country called Pukhtünkhwa, and speaking the language called Pukhta or Pukhto. What the meaning of the word Pukhta, from which Pukhtûn and its derivatives are held to come, may be a matter of speculation. By some it is supposed to be the same word as the native Pukhta, "a ridge" or "hill" in distinction to Ghar. "a mountain chain " or "peak"; the two words corresponding respectively to the Persian Pushta and Koh. Be this as it may, and there is no denying the fact that the name PukhtûnKhwa, "the Pukhtûn coast or quarter", is very well in accordance with the character of the country in its physical aspect; there is also the fact that in the time of Herodotus, four centuries before our era, this very country was called Pactiya or Pactiyaca, and its natives Pactiyans. In Western Afghanistan the harsh 44 is changed into the soft sa, and Pukhtan becomes Pushtan, Pukhtu becomes Pushtu, and so on. By some Pukhtun tribes, the Afridi notably, Pukhtůn, Pukhtu, etc., are pronounced Pakhtůn, Pakhtu, etc., and this brings the words nearer to the Pakhtucs of Herodotus. In short, the Pakhtun or Pukhtun of to-day, we may take it, is identical in race and position with the Pactivan of the Greek historian." 1

This was exactly the position of the same class (spurit) under Roman law, "These children irregularly conceived, have a mother, but no logal father: they do not come under the paternal power of the father, like the child of lawful marriage and cannot be legitimated." Letournean, Evolution of Marriage, 202.

2. The popular account is, it is almost needless to say, different. Modern genealogists trace the descent of Afghāns, Pathāns and Ghilzais from Kais or Kish, the father of Saul, and they say that the Prophet, pleased with the services of Kais named after his forefather, gave him the title of Pathān, the Syrian word for "rudder" and bade him direct his people in the true path. By one authority the name Afghān is said to mean "wailing"; but another explanation is more probable. Ashvaka, a name of Sanskrit origin was used as a territorial appellation of Gandhāra. This word, derived from assa, "a horse," signifies merely the "cavaliers." It was less an ethnic, in the rigorous acceptation of the word, than a general appellation applied by the Hindus of the Panjāb to the tribes of the region of the Kophes, renowned in antiquity for the excellence of its horses. In the popular dialects the Sanskrit word took the usual form Assaka, which reappears scarcely modified in Assakāni or Assakeni in the first historians of the expedition of Alexander and subsequent writers. It is impossible here not to recognise the name Avghān or Afghān.\(^1\) The theory which has been proposed by which Pathān is connected with the Hindi pd/$\daggerau$a, "the top of a hill" is as untenable as that which derives their title Khān from the Dravidian tribe of Khāndhs.\(^2\) The latter word has been by others derived from the Sanskrit ass or swdmin, meaning "lord."

The Bares of Afghanisian, 50, eq. Benjamin, Persia, 142.

3. To quote Dr. Bellew, again : "The traditions of the Afghans refer them to Syria as the country of their Tribal traditions. residence at the time they were carried away into captivity by Bukhtanasar (Nebuchadnezzar) and planted as colonists in differents parts of Persia and Media. From these positions they, at some subsequent period, emigrated eastward into the mountainous country of Ghor, where they were called by the neighbouring people Bani Afghân and Bani Isrâil, or "children of Afghân" or "children of Israel." In correboration of this we have the testimony of the Prophet Esdras to the effect that the ten tribes of Israel, who were taken into captivity, subsequently escaped and found refuge in the country of Arsareth, which is supposed to be identical with the Hazarah country of the present day, and of which Ghor forms a part. It is also stated in the Talaqat-i-Nasiri, a detailed account of the conquest of this country by Changhiz Khân, that in the time of the pative Shansabi dynasty there was a people called Bani Isra'il living in that country, and that some of them were extensively engaged in trade in the countries around." Mr. Thorburn a quotes in support of their Jewish extraction, some peculiar customs obtaining among the tribes of purest blood, for instance the Passover-like practice of sacrificing an animal and smearing the doorway with its blood in order to avert calamity, the offering up of sacrifices, the stoning to death of blasphemers, the periodical distribution of land and so forth, and he points out that most of the learned men who reject the tradition of Jewish descent have no personal acquaintance with the Afghan people.

4. Though the tribal organisation of the Pathans in these Provinces is much less closely defined than along the Paujab frontier, Mr. Ibbetson's

¹ St. Martin quebed by McCtindle, Indian Antiquery, VI., 343, sq.

² Raja Lachhman Sinh, Bulandshahr Memorundum, 192.

Quoted by Ibbotson, Panjab Ethnography, purngraph 390, sqq.

remarks on this subject deserve quotation: "The tribe is probably far more homogeneous in its constitution among the Pathans than among the Riloches. Sayyid, Turk and other clans have occasionally been affiliated to it, but as a rule people of foreign descent preserve their tribal individuality, become merely associated, and not intermingled, with the tribes, among whom they have settled. Even then they generally claim Pathan origin on the female side, and the tribe is usually descended in theory at least from a common ancestor. The Aamsaya a custom by which strangers are protected by the tribe with which they dwell is in full force among the Pathans as among the Bileches. But with the former, though it does protect in many cases families of one tribe who have settled with snother, it seldom accounts for any considerable portion of the tribe; and its action is chiefly confined to traders, menials and other dependents of foreign extraction who are protected by, but not received into, the tribe. Thus a blacksmith living in an Utmanzai village will give his clan as Utmanzai; but his easte will, of course, remain Lohar. The nation is divided genealogically into a few great sections which have no corporate existence, and the tribe is now the practical unit, though the common name and traditions of common descent are still carefully preserved in the memory of the people. Each section of tribe, however small, has its leading man who is known as Malik, a specially Pathan title. In many, but by no means in all, the tribes, there is a Khan Khel or chief house, usually the branch of the tribe, whose Malik is known as Khan, and acts as chief of the whole tribe. But he is seldom more than their leader in war and their agent in dealing with others; he possesses influence rather than power; and the real authority rests with the Jirgah, a democratic council composed of all the Malika. The tribe, clan and sept are alike distinguished by patronymics formed from the name of the common ancestor by the addition of the word sai or khel, sai being the corruption of the Pashto see, meaning "son," while khel is an Arabic word meaning "association" or "company." Both terms are used indifferently for both the larger and smaller divisions. The stock of names being limited, the nomenclature is exceedingly puzzling, certain names recurring in very different tribes in the most maddening manner. Moreover, the title which genealogical accuracy would allot to a tribe or class is often very different from that by which it is known for practical purposes, the people having preferred to be called by the name of a junior ancestor who had acquired local renown. The frontier tribe, whether within or beyond our border, has almost without exception a very distinct corporate existence, each tribe, and within the tribe each clan, occupying a clearly defined tract of country, though they are in the Indus valley often the owners merely rather than the occupiers of the country, the land and smaller villages being largely in the hands of a mixed population of Hindu origin who cultivate subject to the superior rights of the Pathâns. These people are included by the Pathâns under the generic and semi-contemptuous name of Hindki; a term very analogous to the Jan of the Biloch frontier, and which includes all Muhammadans who, being of Hindu origin, have been converted to Islam in comparatively recent times."

159 PATHÁN.

- 5. At the last Census the Pathâns of these Provinces were classified under the following chief tribes:

 Classified under the following chief tribes:

 Afridi, Bagurzai, Bangash, Barech, Bunerwinces.

 Afridi, Bagurzai, Bangash, Barech, Bunerwinces.

 Wâl, Daûdzai, Dilazâk, Durrâni, Ghilzai, Ghorgashti, Ghori, Kâkar, Qizilbâsh, Khalil, Khatak, Lodi, Mehmad, Muhammadzai, Rolnilla, Tarîn, Urmuz, Ushturyâni, Warakzai, Wazîri, Yâqûbzai and Yûsufzai. The following notes are mainly taken from the writings of Dr. Bellew and Mr. Ibhetson.
- 6. They represent in name and position the Aparytic of Herodotus. One of the four great divisions of The Afridi Pathans. the Pactiym of Herodotus was that of the Gandhari, the other three were the Aparytm or Afrali, the Satragyddm or Khatak, and the Dadiez or Dadi, all alike of Indian origin. "The original limits of the Afridi country probably comprised the whole of the Safed Koh range and the country on the base of it on the north and south sides, to the Kabul and Kurrum rivers respectively; whilst its extent from cast to west was from the Pewar ridge or the head waters of the Kurrum further west to the Indus, between the points of junction with it of the Kabul and Kurrum rivers, in the former direction." Of the chargeter of the tribe Dr. Bellow writes: "Looking at the Afridi as we find him to-day, it is difficult to imagine him the descendant of the mild, industrious, peace-loving, and contemplative Buddhist, abhorrent of the shedding of blood or the destruction of life of even the minutest of God's erestures; or even to imagine him descended from fire-worshipping ancestors, whose tender care for life was almost equal to that of the Buddhist, and whose sincere and punctitious devotion to the observances of the minute ceremonies and ordinances of their religion was surpassed by none. The Afridi of to-day, though professedly a Muhammadan, has really no religion at all. He is to a great extent ignorant of the tenets and doctrines of the religion he professes, and even if he know them, would in no way be restrained by them in the pursuit of his purpose.

7 "Whatever he may have been as a Buddhist or as a fire-worshipper, he has now sunk to the lowest grade of civilisation, and borders upon the savage. Entirely illiterate, under no acknowledged control, each man has his own king, the nation has dwindled down to a small community of less than three hundred thousand souls, mostly robbers and out-throats, without principles of conduct of any kind, and with nothing but the incentive of the moment as the prompter to immediate action. Even among his own nationality (the Pathân), he is accounted the faithless of the faithless, and is held on all sides to be the most fierce and stealthy of all enemies. As we know him merely in the character of an independent neighbour, he is a wily, mistrusting, wolfish, and wilful savage, with no object in life but the pursuit of robbery and murder and the feuds they give rise to."

Soythic descent, and are supposed to have come into their present positions with the Soythic irruption. They originally lived about Gurdez in Zurmat, but in the latter part of the fourteenth century they increased in numbers, and being pressed upon by the Ghilzai, emigrated eastward en masse and settled in Kurram. They are descended from Luqman, and have absorbed several tribes of doubtful origin. Their chief settlement in these Provinces is at Farrukhabad, and a very complete account of them has been given by Mr. R. S. Whitsway.

The Bunerwal Pathans.

 The Bunerwill tribe take their name from the Buner country, north-east of Peehiwar.

10. The Dandzai occupy the left bank of the Kabul river as far down as the junction of the Bara.

The Daddgai Pathans.

PATHÂN.

The Dilazak Pathans. valley before the Pathan invasion, and are apparently of Scythic origin, and came into the Panjab with the Jats and Katti in the fifth and sixth centuries. "They soon became powerful and important, and ruled the whole valley as far as the Indus and the foot of the northern hills. In the first half of the thirteenth century the Yūsufzai and Momand drove them across the Indus into Chach-Pakhli. But their efforts to regain their lost territories were such a perpetual source of disturbance that at length Jahangir deported them an masse and distributed them over Hindustan and the Dakkhin. Scattered families of them are still to be found along the left bank of the Indus in Hazara and Rāwalpindi."

12. The name Durrani is derived either from durr-i-dauran, "pearl of the age," or from durr-i-durrda, The Durrant Pathans. " pearl of pearls." The title was adopted by Ahmad Shah Abdali, when he ascended the throne, in allusion to the Abdåli custom of wearing a pearl stud in the right car. According to Dr. Bellew 1:-" The special Aighan tribe is called Abdali, and is more commonly known since the time of Ahmad Shab, the first independent sovereign of Afghanistan of this race, by the name Durrani. The Durrani comprise the following chief divisions or claus: Saddozai, Populzai, Barakzzi, Halakozai, Achakzai, Nurzai, Ishaqgai, and Khagwani. Their home and fixed seat is in Kandahar Province, the former country of the Gandhara, who, at an early period of our era, spread into the present Hazara country along the courses of the Helmand and Arghandab rivers. Members of each clan, however, are found in small societies scattered all over the plain country up to Kabul and Jalalabad, and they are there settled mostly as lords of the soil or military feoffices, the people of the country, so far as concerns the agricultural community, being their tenants or serfs."

13. According to Mr. Ibbetson, "the Ghilzai are a race probably of Turkish origin, their name being another form of Khilchi, the Turkish word for swordsman,' who early settled, perhaps, as mercenaries rather than as a corporate tribe, in the Siahband range of the Ghor mountains, Ibbetson, loc. cit., para. 415.

² Loc. cil., 20.

where they received a large admixture of Persian blood. The official spelling of the name is still Ghaleji at Kabul and Kandahar. They first rose into notice in the time of Mahmud Ghaznavi, whom they accompanied in his invasions of India. Not long afterwards they conquered the tract between Jalalabad and Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and spread east and west over the country they now hold. In the beginning of the eighteenth century they revolted against their Persian rulers, established themselves under Mir Wais as independent rulers at Kandahar, and overran Persia. But a quarter of a century later they were reduced by Nadir Shah, and their rule disappeared, to be succeeded not long after by that of the Durrani," Dr. Bellew tells the romantic legend of Bibi Matto and Shah Husain, whose son was called Ghalzee, "son of a thief," the father having stolen his daughter's honour, whence the name Ghilzai.

14. He adds : "As a race the Ghilji mix little with their neighbours, and indeed differ in many respects, both as to internal government and domestic customs, from the other races of Afghanistan, Those small sections of the people who are settled in the plain live in villages and follow agricultural pursuits, but the great majority of the tribe are pastoral in their habits of life, and migrate with the seasons from the lowlands to the highlands with their families and flocks and easily portable black hair tents. They never settle in the cities, nor do they engage in the ordinary handieraft trades, but they manufacture carpets, felts, etc., for domestic use, from the wool and hair of their cattle. The pastoral clans are notoriously predatory in their habits, and continually at foul amongst themselves and with their neighbours. Physically they are a remarkably fine race, and in stature, courage, and strength of body, are second to none in Afghanistan. But they are very barbarous people, the pastoral clans especially, and in their wars excessively savage and vindictive. Several of the Ghilji or Ghilzai claus are almost wholly engaged in the carrying trade between India and Afghanistan and the northern states of Central Asia, and have been so for many centuries, to the exclusion almost of all the other tribes of the country. The principal clans employed in this great carrying trade are the Niazi, Nasar, Kharoti, and to some extent the Sulaiman Khel. From the nature of their occupation they are collectively styled, or individually so far as that goes, Povinda and Lawani or Lohani. These terms, it appears, are derived from the Persian word parminda, 'a bale of merchandise,' and rawdui, 'a traveller.' "

15. The term Ghorgusht is a corruption of Ghirgisht or Ghur-The Ghorgushti Pathins. Gusht, the third son of Kais. The word is only an altered form of Girgis or Ghirghis, "wanderer on the steppe," and indicates the country whence this people originally came, namely, Northern Turkistan.

16. The Ghori Pathans, who are very numerous in the Provinces, appear to take their name from the Ghor country to the east of Herât. They are usually classed as a sub-division of the Kand, one of the septs of the Bani Isráil, or pure Afghâns.

 Of the Kåkar Pathâns Dr. Bellew writes 1:—"The Kåkar of Afghanistan are a people of Soythian The Kakar Patisins. origin, and of kindred race with the Gokkar or Ghokhar, who are settled in Chach and Rawalpindi on the other side of the Indus, and other parts of India. According to the Afghân account, Kâkar was the grandson of Ghurghusht or Ghirghisht, by his second son, Dani. And this Ghirgh was the youngest of the three sons of Kais or Kish, the great ancestral progenitor of the Afghan nationality of modern times. It has already been shown how the name of the first son, Saraban, was merely the adoption of the race name of the people whom the Afghan genealogists classified together as one set of the descendants of Knis, and the fact of their Rajput origin might then have been made clearer by tracing up the descent to more recent times. Saraban had two sons, Sharjyûn and Krishyûn, which are evidently transformations of the common Rajput names, Surjan and Krishna, and they have been still more altered by transformation into Muhammadan names, Sharjyun being changed into Sharffuddin and Krishyun into Khyruddin. Similar traces of Indian affinity are to be found in almost all the Afghan genealogical tables, and it is only what we might expect when we remember the tradition that the five Pandava brothers about the time of the Mahabharat emigrated to the Panjáb and Afghánistán as far as Ghazni and Kandahar, and there established independent kingdoms which lasted for several centuries."

18. Mr. Ibbetson calls the Qizilbash Pathans "a tribe of Tartar horsemen from the Eastern Caucasus, who
The Qizilbash or Qasallotsh Pathans formed the backbone of the old Persian army and of the force with which Nadir Shah invaded India. Many of the great Mughal ministers have been Qizilbāsh, and notably Mîr Jumlah, the famous minister of Aurangzeb. They are said to take their name from a red cap of peculiar shape which they wear, and which was invented by the founder of the Sophi dynasty of Persia, an intelerant Shiah, as the distinguishing mark of that seet, and which his son, Shāh Tumasp, compelled Humayan to wear when a refugee at the Persian Court. There are some twelve hundred families of Qizilbāsh in the city of Kābul alone, where they were located by Nādir Shāh and exercise considerable influence in local polities."

19. The Khalil occupy the left bank of the Bara river and the country along the front of the Khihar Pass.

They have four main claus: Matuzai, Barozai, Ishaqzai and Tilarzai, of whom the Barozai is most powerful.

20. To quote Mr. Ibbetson again : "The Khataks are descended from Luqman, surnamed Khatak, He The Khatak Pathans. had two sons, Turqman and Bulaq. The descendants of the latter are still known as the Bulaqi section; while Tarai, son of Turq man, rose to such distinction that the whole section, including two main clans, the Tari proper and the Tarkai, is called by his name. The Khatak are a fine, manly race, and differ from all other Pathans in features, general appearance, and many of their customs. They are the northernmost of all the Pathins settled on our frontier who speak the soft or Western dialect of Pushto. They are of a warlike nature, and have been for centuries at fend with all their neighbours and with one another. They are active, industrious, and a favourable specimen of Pathan, and are good cultivators, though their country is stony and unfertile. They are great carriers and traders, and especially hold all the salt trade with Swat and Buner in their hands. They are all Sunnis. The Marwat, the hereditary enemy of the Khatak, says: 'Friendship is good with any one but a Khatak; may the Devil take a Khatak, and 'a Khatak is a hen, if you seize him slowly, he lies down: and if suddenly, he clucks.' Another proverb runs thus:- 'Though the Khatak is a horseman, still he is a man of but one charge."

21. "To the Ghilzai and Lodi, the latter of whom gave a dynasty to Upper India," according to Mr. Ibbetson, "and especially to the former, belong almost all the tribes of warrior traders who are included under the term

Pawinda, from parwinda the Persian word for 'a bale of goods,' or perhaps more probably from the same root as powal, a Pushto word for 'to graze.' They are almost wholly engaged in the carrying trade between India and Afghanistan and the Northern States of Central Asia, a trade which is almost entirely in their hands. They assemble every antumn in the plains east of Ghazni, with their families, flocks, herds, and long strings of camels laden with the goods of Bukhara and Kandahar, and forming enormous caravans, numbering many thousands, march in military order through the Kakar and Waziri country to the Gomal and Zhob passes, through the Sulaimans. Entering the Dera Ismail Khan District, they leave their families, flooks, and some two-thirds of their fighting men in the great grazing grounds which lie on either side of the Indus, and while some wander off in search of employment, others pass on with their laden camels and merchandise to Multan, Rajputana, Lahore, Amritsar, Delhi, Cawnpur, Benares, and even Patna. In the spring they again assemble, and return by the same route to their homes in the Hills about Ghazni and Kelat-i-Ghilzai. When the hot weather begins, the men, leaving their belongings behind them, move off to Kandahar, Herat, and Bukhāra, with the Indian and European merchandise which they have brought from Hindustan. In October they return and prepare once more to start for India."

22. The Muhammadzai of the Census returns are perhaps the same as the Muhammad Khel, the largest sept of the Daulatzai. The present rulers of Bhopâl belong to this tribe.

23. The country known as Pukhtûn Khwa, to which reference has already been made, is called by outsiders and foreigners, on the side of India almost exclusively, by the name of Roh, which has the same meaning as Koh, "a mountain;" Rohilla hence means "a Highlander." Their occupation of the country called after them Rohilkhand is quite modern. After the death of Aurangzeb in A.D. 1707 the dissensions among the Hindus of Bareilly gave a chance to Ali Muhammad Khân, the leader of the Rohilla Pathâns, to obtain possession of the country. In A.D. 1744 he conquered Kumaun as far as Almorā, but two years after he was defeated by the Emperor Muhammad Shâh in the Bareilly District. He was succeeded by the famous Hâfiz Rahmat Khân, and in his latter days he came in contact with Warren Hastings, when the name of the Rohillas for the first time attracted attention.\(^1\) They assert that they are of Coptic origin, and say that, driven out of Egypt by one of the Pharaohs, they wandered westward till they arrived under that part of the mountains known as Sulaimani Koh, or "the hill of Solomon," where they halted. The Rohilla has been always notorious for bravery and turbulence. Shore \(^2\) says that in his time the Rohilla soldiers would submit to be flogged within an inch of their lives with a leathern martingalo, but to be struck with a whip or cane would be an indelible disgrace and very likely to be resented by a stab or a bullet.

24. Dr. Bellew 5 writes of these: "The tribal traditions are to the effect that about three or four hundred The Tarix Pathans. years ago the Yûsufzai or Mandar and Mohmand tribes of Afghans were settled on the Gwara Margha and the headwaters of the Tarnak and Arghasan rivers, as neighbours and allies. Beyond them, lower down the course of these rivers, were the Tarin, another tribe of Afghans, who still occupy the same positions, and the valley of Peshin. Their lands were in the summer subject to droughts, and were besides in great part waste, owing to the exhaustion at that season of the tributary streams and the diminished volume of the rivers. The consequence was a contest for the better lands, and the Tarin tribes, being the stronger of the two parties, gradually encroached on the fat pastures of the Mandar and Mohmand tribes and finally dispossessed them of their lands."

25. Of the Ushturyani, whom Mr. Ibbetson * calls Ushturani, he says: —"They are the descendants of Hannar, one of the sons of Ushtaryani, a Sayyid, who settled among and married into the Shirani section of Afghans. They were settled with the Shiranis to the south of the Takht-i-Sulaiman, and till about a century ago were wholly pastoral and engaged in the carrying trade. But a quarrel with their neighbours, the Müsa Khel, put a stop to their annual westward migration, and they were forced to take to agriculture. They still own a large tract of country, in which indeed most of them live, cultivating land immediately under the hills and pasturing their flocks beyond the border. Their territory only includes the eastern elopes of the Sulaimans, the crest of the range being held by the Mûsa Khel and Zmari. They are divided into two main clans, the Ahmadzai and Gagalzai, and these again into numerous septs. They are a fine, manly race, many of them in our army and police, and they are quiet and well behaved, cultivating largely with their own hands. A few of them are still carriers. They are much harassed by the independent Bozdâr (Biloch). They are all Sunnis."

¹ For their history, see MorddAbdd Settlemont Report, 12, sq.

⁵ Notes, 1L, 490, 2 Loc. off., 68, aq.

Lee, cit., para. 400, sq.

 Of the Wazîri Pathâns, Dr. Bellew says :- "The Wazîri, who displaced the Khatak or Shattak, as it The Wastri Pathins. is pronounced in the Western dialect of Pushtu, from his ancient seat on the Sulaiman range from the Sattagydia of Herodotus, for he is the only one of the ancient authors who has mentioned this people, appear to be identical with the Wairsi or Vairsi of the early Muhammadan historians. The Wairsi were a division of the Sodha tribe, which itself was a branch of the Pramara Raiput. The Waziri appear to have made their first assault against the Khatak about five or six hundred years ago, at a time when the country was sorely afflicted with famine; and the route they took was across the Sham plain into the adjoining valley and district of Barmal. Here they settled and remained for some time before making a further forward move. Hence they occupied the whole of the ancient Khatak country from the Sham plain on the South to the Kohât Valley on the North. They are a powerful and entirely independent tribe, and mostly pastoral and normal in their habits of life. In personal appearance they are very different from other Pathan tribes and retain many customs peculiar to themselves."

27. The history of the Yûsufzai Pathâns is given in detail

The Yûsufzai Pathâns. by Dr. Bellew and Mr. Ibbetson. They now hold Swât, Buner, and the Lundkhwar and Rânizai Valleys in the North-West of Yûsufzai.

28. Mr. Ibbetson's remarks again deserve reproduction:—"The true Pathān is perhaps the most barbaric of Character of the all the races with which we are brought in contact in the Panjāb. His life is not so primitive as that of the gypsy tribes, but he is cruel, bloodthirsty and vindictive in the highest degree; he does not know what truth and faith is, in so much that the saying Afghan bounds has passed into a proverb among his neighbours, and though he is not without courage of a sort, and is often curiously reckless of his life, he would scorn to face an enemy whom he could stab from behind or to meet him on equal terms if it were possible to take advantage of him, however meanly. It is easy to convict him out of his own mouth. Here are some of his proverbs :- 'A Pathan's camity smoulders like a dung fire : ' 'A consin's tooth breaks upon a cousin : Keep a cousin poor but use him; when he is little, play with him; when he is grown up, he is a cousin, fight him : ' ' Speak good words to an enemy very softly; gradually destroy him root and branch,' At the same time he has his code of honour which he observes strictly, and which he quotes with pride under the name of Pakhtunwali. It imposes upon him three chief obligations: Nanawatai, or the right of asylum, which compole him to shelter and protect even an enemy who comes as a suppliant; Badal, or the necessity to revenge by retaliation; and Melmastia, or open-handed hospitality to all who may demand it. Of these three, perhaps, the last is greatest. And there is a sort of charm about him, especially about the leading men, which almost makes one forget his trencherous nature. As the proverb says: 'The Pathan is at one moment a saint and the next a devil.' For centuries at least he has been on our frontier subject to no man. He leads a wild, free, active life in the rugged fastnesses of his mountains; and there is an air of masculine independence about him which is refreshing in a country like India. He is a bigot of the most function type, exceedingly proud, and extraordinarily superstitious. He is of stalwart make, and his features are often of a markedly Semitic type. His hair, plentifully oiled, hange straight to his shoulder; he wears a loose tunic, baggy drawers, a sheet or blanket, sandals, and a sheepskin coat with its wool inside; his favourite colour is dark blue; and his national arms the long, heavy Afghan knife and the matchlock or jazail. His women wear a loose shift, wide, wrinkled drawers down to their ankles, and a wrap over the head, and are, as a rule, jealously secluded. Both sexes are filthy in their persons,

29. "Such is the Pathan in his home among the fastnesses of the frontier ranges. But the Pathans of our territory have been much softened by our rule and by the agricultural life of the plains, so that they look down on the Pathans of the hills, and their proverbs have it :- 'A Killman is no man;' and again, 'Don't class burrs as grass or a hillman as a human being." The nearer he is to the frontier, the more closely the Pathan assimilates to the original type; while on this side of the Indus, even in the rivernin itself, there is little or nothing, not even language, to distinguish him from his neighbours of the same religion as himself. The Pathans are extraordinarily jealous of female honour, and most of the blood fouds for which they are so famous originate in quarrels about women. As a race they strictly seclude their females, but the poorer tribes and the poorer members of all tribes are prevented from doing so by their poverty. Among the tribes of our territory a woman's nose is cut off if she be detected in adultery; and it is a favourite joke to induce a Pathan woman to unveil by saying to her suddenly 'You have no nose.' The Pathan pretends to be purely endogamous, and beyond the border he probably is so; while even in British territory the first wife will generally be a Pathan, except among the poorest classes. At the same time Pathan women are beyond the Indus seldom, if ever, married to any but Pathans. They intermarry very closely, avoiding only the prchibited degrees of Islam. Their rules of inheritance are tribal and not Muhammadan, and tend to keep property within the agnatic society, though some few of the more educated families have lately begun to follow the Musalman law. Their social customs differ much from tribe to tribe, or rather perhaps from the wilder to the more civilised sections of the nation."

80. In these Provinces, perhaps, the best class of Pathans are those from Rohilkhand, who are active, intelligent, and good rulers of men; many of them hold appointments in the Revenue, Police, and other Government Departments.

Distribution of the Pathans

Distances.	Africa,	Balareal,	Broggal.	Barnah.	Buscowki.	Désidani,	Diluta.	Denies,	Ghilzal,	Ohorgasta	dhori,	Kåker.	Acces 1845.50
Defens Dán .	69	-44	66				340	-	de	1-	114	218	1,
Sahleanpar .	131	11	P2	31	7	1	in.	3	RI	39	2014	3,797	1.
. regentalisator	101		- 6	1	18	4	- 6	16	12	lan.	202	2,600	1
Macout	81	188	285	-	1	3	1341		8	100	3,006	907	1
datebustell	10		33	- 4	100	40	3	189	404	1	1,467	41	1
Aligne's	93		100	100	100	70-	1	- 6	128		5,530		1.
Markurn	35		45	-	- 1	100		114	21	200	1,574	20
Lera	433	1	100	140	1 4	87	78		46	-	3,961	an	1
Jacrnichiblid .	3,568	38	4,043		100	25	100	33	1990	-	3,202	1,246
Mainpart	401	27	175	100	-	no	130	-393	72	-	2,380	200
Stawals	98		207	-	146	100	177	200	17	-	1,781	83	19
Etah	253		791	191	100	10	391	2	68		1 -	270	1
Bartilly	1,105	827	100	1,493	11	10-	173	- 60	030	1374	3,600	71
Bijnor	26	m	100	100		19X	95	m	82		190	102
Onážum , .	110	10	101	761	206	0	007	7	0.5	40	0,225		6
. bidibhoù	150	2	179	12.0	0.42	35	792	Ti	135		3,740	202	1
hölahlapur .	600	1,070	1,117	13	1	F24	2,018	62	126	Tree.	3,807	450
Hibbit	110	181	Bt	60	· m	Line	123	ine	212		1,244	200	1
lawnpar	190		811	H	34	4	74	29	31	10	1,075	300
Catelager	341	-	94	1500	100	100	11	33	67	12	2,314	10	١,
Blads	37	1 8	25	20	1	177	10	3	85	10	6,100	249	1
Hantlepar .	11		- 23	140	1	-	1	1	31	1	1,006	64	١,
Albertald .	80	9		140	100	-	336	102	100		793	36	1
Thamat	10	1	62	100	-	-	- 1	11	61		1,208	44	1
tat.	M	-	394		-		4	11	0.0	100	1,823	1111	i i
1.00	18	1	100		1 200		3	1	1	210	310	7	10
	40	-	81		1	700	100	100	20	15	207	20	1
	in	in.	-	7400	-	-41	20	1	-811	Asse	100		ľ
Charles and the	14	105		-100	The same of	Thurs	451	- at	34	1ve	1,410
 * *	4			-	1947		Da.		18		30	70
v. 804	163		100	-	500	ine	1	-	100	(in	41		7
Secretary .	17		11	361			223	31	70	200	1.20	1,016	*
ionakhpor .		28		-	146	10	100	4	74	1.0	735	10,630	*
		100		-	107		70		1000	716		374
mangach .	1.3	194		*	-	765		No.	100	100	2,479	1
Farhwal				-	-	866	ries.	+14		108	PM.	++	7
	20	-	67	H	810	180	-	-	- 100	-	68	360	49
rarat	1,421	18	180	346	-	Dist	er Nov	1	#1	1	671	640	-
Info	350	49	62	. 0	700	101	110	110	30	510	1,780	210	1
	611	100	87	778	340	494	1		215	241	6,072	203	90
- Contract	225	28		mr	-	190	100	28		-	701	543	*
teaper	. 800	Later Street	139	-64	1		25	100	10	100	2,416	7,335
Cardot	140	1,180	131	-	110	115	45	19	- 6	100	5,780	1,684	~
Davi	24	540	01	-	100	055	92	4	0.6	Anc	5,390	607	1
nialbid	100			200	.196		-		43	ASS	623	1,310	- onda , ,	819		6		166		-	100	2	103	410	10,047	- abritish , ,	317	200	- 91	2	55	34	181	U)	63	197	S,SIA	2,009
ultkaper ,	107	100	8	100	160	416	120	9	gn	i-M	41.6	190	7
ariabguch ,	107	- 4	0		1311	991	23			198	1,265	82	*
Meshanki .	100	-	-68	era -	191	793				*15	88	257	•
Total .	12,840	8,710	9,742	2,628	1,740	1,378	126,6	1,110	4,001	188	50,713	49,010

according to the Ocnaus of 1891.

Kleall.	Klatsk,	Lodi,	Makesad	Malam- madeal.	Rehills.	Perfe.	Unasax,	Ostbarykol	Warntani,	Westri,	Yaqdbasi,	Theatrait,	Others.	Total.
	12	248	700	98	110	311		-	20		-	872	1,848	8,01
349	45	1,172	3	220	1,000	134	-	-	47	791	-	6,008	3,600	15,08
A	18	1,710	4	121	1257	104	-	1-	448	1 E	-	2,050	2,161	11,63
-	233	25.0	-	28	0039	24	-	-		1.00		6,412	4,504	18,00
297	46	Gát	20	44	18	53	14	-	b	970	-111	2,287	4,174	10,11
•	79	2,600	100	33	122	red.	-	-	119	106	-	3,084	8,942	16,33
-	85	737	25	2	-68	70.0	-	100	4	20.0	100	822	1,790	8,17
8	0.0	3,668		96	871	72	-	100	40	1		2,400	5,476	18,07
80	2,100	1,361	60	218	108	40	-	30	1,407	710	-	2,558	11,274	30,00
	2	693	Apr.	45	22	10.00	-	100	78	17	-	110	6,050	0,50
111	4	1,118	111	61	710	9	-	-	48	8	-	871	4,001	6,42
63	191	$,130		994	-67	48	-		356	201	4	1,201	3,021	35,80
35	116	1,146		660	500	355	193	200	144	1-	48	8,140	21,125	40,11
80	75	709	100	1,090	197	ESTE		912	9	1911	-000	3/061	2,020	0,08
145	603	1,131	25	110	264	102	160		43.	-	9	2,100	10,006	24,03
23	710	1,438	595	645	400	500	-00	200	716	233	2.0	4,517	F_B34	$1,03
793	3.62	840	3,000	810	1,601	1,000	-		1,093	100	5-	6,000	24,094	39,55
54	200	819	55	776	444	78	192	75	219	-	18	2,115	0,000	13,46
25	8	5,469			171	nt	140	ree	D/#	63	300	4,101	7,007	14,70
10	31	1,67%	71	204	10	700	200	146	27	12	· ne	1,604	3,700	0,08
1	142	419	H	14	- 60	m	.01	100	17			030	$,128	30,08
	or .	206	100	17	16	11	100	110		1	100	871	3,546	5,25
	- 18	6,361	(中)	10	168	63	in	D	+		995	4,080	6,844	10,86
	-00	201	4	23	76	197	jac.	140	-100	6	-	119	2,616	4,00
+++	1980	048	25	Cest -	25	S-04			75.	1	- 22	327	1,011	0,45
	110	74	ref.	R	7	711	1		-		14	21	1,036	1,51
	n	1,741	446	- 60	117	9	100	-	100	-		2,346	8,974	9,71
ire.	195	1,110	100		- 55	164	-	100	- 6	100	995	3,437	3,225	8,77
		4,180	116	in	440	37	1		mir.	100	200	3,151	8,136	13,40
7	100	1,015	146	- 1	2.5	18	78	-	111	()	-000	3,499	3,451	9,51
	100	1,383	140	114	206	94	-		40	100	-	274	2,477	4,65
1	100.	6,007	316	21	612	- 1	14	-	-	12	-	3,896	7,700	23,13
Veri	1	6,237		100	2014	-40	-		ых	242	-	3,731	4,003	20,60
	-	2,008	346	60	14	a	1-	711	390	340	-	5,651	10,045	20,10
146	180	fin.	100	-		1779	200	las.	err.	191	193	-	- 7
	100	101	107	200	100	1000	100			-	991		201	41
int	1660	73	100	337	18	33	305	-	117	-	-	510	1,631	4,35
38	61	2,476	122	158	100	109	305	-	191	203	101	7,172	10,375	25,06
24	35	2,175	35	01	75	70	100	200	419	-	m	One	8,387	13,01
37	15	0,009	in	33	45	81	21	100	280	-		nii	2,390	0,00
48		3,305		210	100			in	53	-		2,510	A,COB	18,64
123	20	1,189	307	487	086	370	1	-	12	in	1	1,178	5,677	20,41
		2,513	39	201	237	185		-	100	20	-	2,110	0,540	18,00
	100	2,600	Per	-	33	- 147		440	800	.000	3	4,508	E,060	11,18
Fee.	100	5,000	-	0	101		177	-	991		100	9,111	8,818	27,81
II.	n	4,427	7	617	139	34		-	20			3,811	0,251	BLBS
	73	1,011	p4	9	33	in	181	100	-			1,192	1,000	4,70
-	164	6,028	2		65	42	100	100	-	193	-0.1	1,170	10,078	16,32
14	17	1,778		7	21	10	iès	1	6	-	313	2,764	6,821	12,11
,654	0,810	166,002	4,010	9,800	10,180	0,495	124	ø	5,610	un	158	174,605	246,210	700,50

Patwa, Patua 1—(Sanskrit pata, "woven cloth;" Hindi pat, "silk").—The caste of braid and silk fringe makers. They are also generally known by the name of 'Ilaqeband or 'Alaqeband ('ilaqa, 'alaqa, "connection"), who are usually Muhammadans practising the same occupation: Pathär, Patahra, Pathera.

2. One tradition states that when Mahadeva was about to be married to Pârvati, a goldsmith brought the Tribal traditions. wedding jewelry for the bride, and as there was no one to string them, Mahadeva formed the "silkman" to do the duty. The Eastern Patwas trace their origin to Barrella in the Faizābād District and to Balrāmpur in Gonda. In Ahraura, in the Mirzapur District, there is a small community of them who make silk cloth from the occoons collected in the jungles south of the river Son. They take the title of Sinh, and say that they are emigrants from Kot Kangra, where they were originally Katauj Rajputs, a sept which does not appear in Mr. Ibbetson's lists. In the Panjah they say they are Khatris. In Hamirpur they claim descent from Gokul in the Mathura District, and say that their ancestor was one Biba, a Panre Brahman ; they separated from the Bråhman stock on account of some quarrel about eating, and their brothren are now called Patiya Brahmans and act as their family priests. They also assert that the Gahoi Banyas are a branch of the same stock. In Farrukhābād they claim their origin from Uliain. They are apparently a purely occupational caste, and are probably composed of many different elements.

Agarwâla; Deobansi, or "the race of a god;"

Agarwâla; Deobansi, or "the race of a god;"

and Kharwâr, which is the name of an undoubtedly Dravidian tribe. In Benares, according to Mr. Sherring, their divisions are Khârêwâl or Khandêwâl, which is the name of one of the Banya tribes; Khara, or "genuine," Deobansi; Lahera, or makers of ornaments in lac (Sanskrit laksha-kāra); and Jogi Patwa. In Mirzapur there is a sub-caste known as Khanrawa, who are said to take their name for some unexplained reason from khānr, or coarse sugar, and to be out-castes. In Lucknow their sub-castes are Gauriya, Rewar, and Tanti. In Hamirpur they have a number of local sections which take their name from the villages in which they originally settled. These are Chhāniyān, who are named from the village of Chhāni; Ratha from Rāth; Tarela; Barauniya; Sikarwār; Kariya; Nasāniyān; and Jeorahiya. Here it is said that the sub-castes are exogamous, which is certainly a mistake. But these local divisions or sections practise hypergamy among themselves. Thus the Chhāniyān, Naṣāniyān, and Barauniya give their daughters in marriage to the Tarela, Ratha, and Jeorahiya, but will not marry their sons in these groups.

Based on suquiries at Mirsapur and notes by M. Râm Sahāy, Toncher, Tahstii School, Mahohu, Hamirpur; M. Jamsnadin, Teacher, Sumerpur School, Hamirpur; M. Cahote Lai, Archeological Survey, Lucknow; and the Deputy Inspector of Schools, Ballia and Fasvolchabád.

of exogamy, which prohibits intermarriage in the family of the paternal and maternal uncles and sunts for two or three generations, or as long as any relationship is remembered.

 The domestic ceremonies are of the normal type practised by Domestic ceremonies.
 Description of the same social standing.

6. Patwas are generally Vaishnavas of the Kabirpanthi or Satyanami sect. To the east of the Province Religion. their clan deities are Mahabir, the Panchenpir, and Hardiha or Hardaul Lala, who is the household godling. On the tenth of the light half of Kuar they offer flowers and sweetmeats to Mahabir, Mahadeva, Narsinha, and Narayana. At the Nagpanchami festival, in the month of Sawan, they let a ram loose in the name of Devi, and throw over it a mixture of sugar and pepper dissolved in water. Some are Nanakpanthis, and these at the Khichari festival, at the end of the month of Magh, worship the scriptures (granth) with an offering of the Halwa sweetmeat. This is known as kardsprased, or " the offering from the boiler." In Ballia some worship Durge and Bhairon and some a local saint known as Ganinath. These deities are worshipped on the tenth day of the waxing moon in the month of Kuar. Unmarried girls are excluded from this worship, and only women married by the regular ceremony, and not women married by the sagái or káj form, are allowed to attend. In Hamirpur they specially worship Hardaul Lâla, prayer to whom averts danger at marriage and preguancy, and brings good rain and keeps off storms. In addition to these they worship a crowd of godlings, such as Sati, Dhyan Das, Gharib Das, Goswami, to whom worship is done by making a fire-sacrifice (hom) and burning some inconse (dhip). To the east of the Province they have no shaving ceremony (mauran) for children and never cut their hair. At death they only cut their nails as a sign of mourning, rub their bodies with mustard oil (karua tel), and their heads with oil-cake. Their priests are Tiwari Brahmans of the Sarwariya tribe.

7. Some of the Patwas weave silk from the indigenous eccoons. The 'Ilâqêband, who, as already stated, is usu-Occupation. ally a Muhammadan, makes coloured cords of silk or cotton thread used for the threading of beads and the binding together of ornaments such as the bizuband or armlet, which consists of several pieces joined together in an elastic band, and he also makes braid, fringe, petticoat strings (udra), and girdles for drawers (izdrband). The Patwa does pretty much the same work; but the Musalman occasionally adds to this whip-making as part of his business, which the Hindu does not. He buys up plain cotton and silk thread and dyes it himself, not, however, usually employing fast colours. The Lahern sub-caste is said to be so called because they chiefly use the lac dye (lah-lakh) for this purpose. In Lucknow some are wealthy traders, selling lac trimming (lackka), kalabatun, or gold and silver thread, false gems and pearls, and they make up embroidery, presentation robes (Akil'at) and necklaces for entertainments (Adr), etc.1 The country Patwa very commonly deals in women's spangles and forehead ornaments (tikuli), and he sells various kinds of cosmetics, substances for making caste-marks, and common medicines.

Distribution of Patwas according to the Census of 1891.

Dier	RICTS.	Agar- wila.	Dechansi.	Kharwêz.	Others.	Muham- madana.	Total.
Dehra Dû	n .	an.			8		8
SahAranpu	٠.			m	343	1.5	358
MuzaEarn	ngar		22		202	1	225
Mearus			-	994	202	10	212
Aligarh					33		33
Mathura			9	35	136		174

Hooy, Monograph, 118, sq.

Distribution of Patwas according to the Course of 1891-contd.

Durat	oru.		Agaz- waia.	Diobanei.	Kharwir,	Others.	Muham- madans.	Toral.
Agra .			344			528		528
Farrakhâbâ	id			175	100	217		392
Mainpuri			66	3	- in	64		122
Rihwah			19		200	278		297
Etah .			37	3	140	105		145
Bareilly		4	100		164	524	j	824
Bijnor				93		825		418
Budhun				101		404		505
Mozádábád			48	70	120	257		333
Shāhjahānp	m	8	Z	837	121	103		840
Pilibhit		-		866		43		408
Cawapur		-	000	246		410	10-	656
Fatchpur			-	407		171		578
Bàuda				88	-,	894		982
Hamfrpur				18		543	340	561
Allahâbâd				745		440	27	1,221
Jhànei						163		163
JAlaun	è					280		296
Lalitpur				410		315		815
Bennes	é			88		819		877
Mirespur				975	191	196	2	1,173
Jaunpur			-	651				651
Ghāzipur				106	9	352		527
Ballia .				1,902	8	373		2,278
Gerakhpur				121	75	2,044	4	9,244
Desti .			111	118	1,281	160		1,559

Distribution of Palmas according to the Census of 1891-coneld.

Dietri	CIS.		Agnr- wala-	Deohtnei.	Kharwav.	Others.	Mukam- madans.	TOTAL
Azamgarh				342	49	313	44.	740
Tarší .				43		35		78
Lucknew		٠		460	100	219		085
Unão .				464		118		583
Bid Bareli	i		984	763		100		863
Stiapur				729	in	194		923
Hardei				945		13		953
Kheri .				760	100	202		962
Fain4bld		+	4.8	48	369	337	12	750
Gonda			-	01,00	1,525	65		1,590
Bahvaich			744	113	144	708		816
SultAnpur			1.464	136	193	483	8	820
Partabgarh.			++4	458	135	57	100	045
Bårabanki		+		356		168	97	561
Tora	L		m	12,786	3,663	14,253	166	80,977

Pauhari.—A variety of Bairagis, who are said to derive their name from the Sanskrit payas, "milk," alara, "food," in reference to their rule of abstinence. The Pauhariji of Paikauli in the Gorakhpur District is a notable personage, who wanders over that and the neighbouring Bihar Districts with a large train of followers. He has branch establishments at Baikunthpur, Ajudhya, Allahabad, and other places.

Pâwariya, Pânwariya.—A tribe of Muhammadan singers and dancers who take their name from păswara (pānw, foot), the mat or carpet on which they sing and play. They are apparently very closely akin to the Dhârhi and Kingariya, under which heads some account of these people has been given.

Distribution of the Pawariya according to the Course of 1891.

Dispaters.										Numbers.
Gorakhpur									di.		147
Azumgarh	+		+		+				*	-	365
								To	FAL		512

Pokharna.-A division of Brahmans of whom only a few scattered families are found in these Provinces. According to the account generally received they take their name from the sacred lake of Pokhar or Pushkar, and by one legend they were the navvies who dug the lake, and who were raised to the rank of Brihmans for their services. By their own story they were named Pushpakarna, "having a flower in the enr," because they offered flowers to Lakshmi, and, being cursed by Parvati for refusing to eat flesh, migrated from Jaysalmer to Sindh, Cutch, Multan, and the Panjab. Other castes affirm that the Pokharna is the illegitimate offspring of a Brahman devotee and a Mohani fisherwoman, who independently undertook to ferry the hely man across the stream.1 They wear the sacred thread, putting it on with little ceremony, generally at a relation's marriage, or at some place of pilgrimage. High easte Brahmans do not eat with them. Among members of the same gotra, marriage is not allowed. On the sixth day after childbirth, the women of the family, singing as at a marriage, bring a clay horse from the house of the mother's father to the busband's house. At marriages the men dance in the procession and the women sing immodest songs.1

2. In the Paujab they still worship the pickage with which they excavated the Pushkar Lake. They are the hereditary Brahmans of the Bhatiyas of Rajputana, and are more strict in caste matters than the Sarasvatas, They are found in some numbers in the Western Districts of the Panjab.

Potgar'-(Hindi pot, "a bead;" Sanskrit protakten) .- A small caste of bead-makers found only in the village of Nauvera, Tabail Patti, in the Partabgarh District, and numbering only 92 persons. They say that they were originally Kahatriyas, but have Barton, Sindh, 310.

Bombay Gazettier, V, 44.
 Ibbelson, Panjdb Ethnography, para. 512.

Frees a note by Mr. D. Calnan, C. S.

no tradition as to how they came to adopt their present occupation. They wear the Brâhmanical cord. They do not admit outsiders into the caste. They follow the customs of high caste Hindus. They will not touch liquor or eat any kind of flesh, and are strict vegetarians. They will not eat or smoke with any caste other than their own. A full account of the bead manufacture has been given by Dr. Watt.

Prânnâthi.—A Hindu religious order which takes its name from one Prânnâth, a Kshatriya, who, being versed in Muhammadan as well as Hindu learning, composed a book called the Mahitâriyal, in which the Qurân is reconciled with the Vedas. He lived in the latter period of the reign of Aurangzeb, and is said to have acquired great reputation with Chhattrasâl, Râja of Bundelkhand, for whom he discovered a diamond mine. They appear in the Census returns chiefly in the Gorakhpur Division; but Professor Wilson says that Bundelkhand is the chief seat of the order, and at Panna is a building dedicated to the use of the sect, in one apartment of which, on a table covered with gold cloth, lies the volume of the founder.

2. "As a test of the disciple's consent to the real identity of the Hindu and Muhammadan creeds, the ceremony of initiation consists of eating in the society of members of both communions; with this exception, and the admission of the general principle, it does not appear that the two classes confound their civil or even religious distinctions; they continue to observe the practices and ritual of their forefathers, whether Musalman or Hindu, and the union, beyond that of the community of eating, is no more than any rational individual of either sect is fully prepared for, or the admission that the God of both and of all religious is one and the same."

Distribution of the Praundthis according to the Census of 1891.

	Disvators.										Numbers.
Pilibhit							,				7
Lalitpur											18
Gorakhpar			:								26
Busti							A.				23
								To	TAL		69

¹ Dictionary of Economic Products, 1, 426, sec.

Essays, I, 851. For an account of the religious books of this sect, see Grower, Mathura, 210, stg.

179 rundir.

Pundir.-A sept of Rajputs who appear to belong to the Dahima, one of the thirty-six royal tribes, of whom Colonel Tod 1 writes:- "The Dahîma has left but the wreck of a great name. Seven centuries have swept away all recollection of a tribe who once afforded one of the proudest themes for the song of the bard. The Dahîma was the lord of Bayana and one of the most powerful vassals of the Chauban Emperor, Prithivi Raja. Three brothers of this house held the highest offices under this monarch, and the period during which the elder, Kaunas, was his minister, was the brightest in the history of the Chanhan. But he fell a victim to blind jealonsy. Pundir, the second brother, commanded the frontier at Lahore. The third, Châond Râc, was the principal leader in the last battle, where Prithivi Raja fell, with the whole of his chivalry. on the banks of the Kagar. Even the historians of Shahab-ud-din have preserved the name of the gallant Dahima, Châond Riê, whom they style Khandê Ráê; and to whose valour, they relate, Shahâhud-din himself nearly fell a sacrifice. With the Chauhan, the race seems to have been extinguished," The original seat of the Panjab 2 Pundirs was Thanesar and the Kurukshetra of Karnal and Ambala, with local capitals at Pûndri, Ramba, Hâbri and Pûndrak; but they were dispossessed by the Chauhan under Rana Har Rae, and for the most part fled beyond the Jumna. From this event most probably their settlement in these Provinces dates. In the Duab they say that they came from Hardwar in the Saharanpur District, Their leader is said to have been Raja Damar Sinh, who cetablished himself at Gambhira in Pargana Akrābād of the Aligarh District. Their fort was Bijaygarh, which took its name from Bijay, brother of Damar Sinh. It was captured in 1803 at the cost of the lives of Colonel Gordon and other British officers. It has now passed into the hands of the Raja of Awa. These Duab Pundîrs hold a respectable rank and intermerry with the higher Rajput septa.

2. In the Upper Duâb they are reported to give girls to the Bargûjar, Chauhân, Gahlot, Kathiya, Tomar, Chhokar, and Bhatti; and to take brides from the Bargûjar, Chauhân, Gahlot, Tomar, Bais, and Bhatti septs.

dancie, L 128.

¹ Ibbetaen, Panjah Riknography, section 145.

Distribution of the Pundle Rajputs according to the Census of 1891.

		Dist	Ricre	4			Hindus.	Mulaun- madana.	TOTAL
Dehra Dûn							411	1	1
Saháranpur							18,120	7,207	25,387
Muzaffarna	gar			2			7,128	3,875	11,003
Meerat				4			640	15,080	15,680
Bulandshah	r	i.					991	123	11,113
Maskura		6					285	5	290
Адта					+		98	1	99
Mainpuri							29	7	36
Btåwah							1	194	1
Etab .					41	10.74	1,693	22	1,715
Bodann				30	10		247	111	247
Moradabad		+17	1		ma	33,	54		54
Bånda			16		100		438	Jan. 1	438
Allababad		-1					128	/	12
Gorakhpur .				00		3	7	104	7
Basti .		4			-	7	- 4		4
Blá Bareli .							2		2
Bahraich .	ď.			÷.				24	24
Saltanpur .							31		31
				Ton	dat		26,140	27,004	50,144

Purchit—(Sanskrit purchite, "one placed foremost or in front").—
One of the functional divisions of the Brihman caste. In Vedic times the Purchit was regarded as a confidential and virtuous minister of state; but in Manu he is placed in a lower class than other Brihmans. At the same time the institution of the Purchit, who was not only a mere house priest but a political functionary, goes back to that early period of history when the Turanians and Indians lived peaceably as one nation. His high position in early times is shown by the assertion that the gods do not accept the food offered by a king who has no house priest, and by the fierce contest for the office which arose between the families of Vasishtha and Visyamitra.1

2. The functions of the Purchit in modern times are confined to the performance of the less intricate rites, those of more ceremonial intricacy and importance being left to the Acharya, Hotri, Bidua, and other priests of higher rank. He helps his master to perform the annual Sradaha, sets the part of a Brahman, who must be fed before his employer breaks his fast, officiates at the family shrine of the household gods, helps the barber to find a husband for his master's daughter, cooks for him on a journey, and arranges for the feeding of Brahmans. He sometimes does a vicarious pilgrimage for his employer, and the extension of these functions to the richer members of the lower castos is the chief method by which they are brought within the fold of Brahmanism.

8. Of these Bråhman priests Sir Monier-Williams writes: 1

"His anger is as terrible as that of the gods. His blessing makes rich, his curse withers. Nay, more, he is himself actually worshipped as god. No marvel, no prodigy in nature, is believed to be beyoud the limits of his power to accomplish. If the priest were to threaten to bring down the sun from the sky or arrest it in its daily course in the heavens, no villager would for a moment doubt his power to do so. And indeed the priests of India, in their character of Brahmans, claim to have worked a few notable miracles at different times and on various occasions. One of their number once swallowed the ocean in three sips, another manufactured fire, another created animals, and another turned the moon into a cinder. The priest confers incalculable benefits on the community of which death, for at least a century, in a hell of total darkness." Purwal, Purwar,-A sub-caste of Banyas who are believed to take their name from Puri or Jagannath. According to Mr. Sherring 3 they live in large houses in Benares and are persons of conse-

he is a member by merely receiving their presents. A cow given to him secures heaven of a certainty to the lucky donor. The consequences of injuring him are terrific. A man who does him the smallest harm, must make up his mind to be whirled about after ¹ Mnir, Ancient Sanskrit Tests, I, 128. Note: Mann, Institutes, XII, 46, Hang, Aitureya Brilimanum, I, 67 : II, 588. Max Mallar, Ancient Banabrit Literaturs, 485, app.

2 Monler-Williams, Bellemanism and Rindsism, 457.

Hindu Castes, 1, 283.

quence. The sub-caste is divided into twenty branches. Some are Vaixhnavas and some Jainas.

Distribution of Purwal Banyas according to the Census of 1891.

		Distri	alors.			-	Hindus.	Jaims.	TOTAL
Baharanpur							1	7
Bulandshal	ır	*.						6	6
Mathura							9	60	95
Agra .							434	4,048	4,482
Farrukbábi	hd				4		684	16	679
Mainpuri							336	237	573
Ethwah		-					9,021	7	9,628
Etab .						-		3,159	3,150
Bareilly					12	T:	519		519
Badáan				30	7		41		41
Pilibhit					700	91	43		43
Cawopur							1,869	20	***
Fatchpur							40		40
Banda							180	164	363
Hamirpar						-	512	64	576
Allahábád							36		36
Jhansi						-	189	1,504	1,893
Jálaun							1,107		1,107
Lalitpur						.!		6,001	6,094
Ballia	٠						25	200	25
Gorakhpur			٠				6,183	441	6,188
Lucknow	٠						13		13
8ltapar							4,078		4,078
Kheri							685		685
Gooda							150		166
Bahraich							3,063		8,008
BArabanki							1,041		1,011
				To	TAL		30,903	16,010	46,913

Q

Qadiri, Qadiriya.—An order of Muhammadan Faqire, who are the followers of Abdul Qâdir Jilâni, who is buried in Bâghdâd. The Arabs, who have no hard g letter, alter to Jilân the name of his birth-place Gilan, a tract between the Caspian and the Black Sea. He is also known as Piran-i-Pir and Pir Dastgir, "the saint of saints, the helper of the helpless," and as Ghans-ul-Azam, Ghaus-ul-Sumdāni, Mahbūb Subhāni, and so on. He was born in 1078 A.D., and died in 1166 A.D., and was buried at Baghdad, where he held the post of guardian of Abu Hanifa's temb,1 Mr. Maclagan writes: "-" Most of the Sunni Maulavis of the Panjab belong to this order, as does also the Akhund of Swat. They practise both the silent and the loud form of service (the sikr-i-khafi as well as the zikr-i-jalli). In youth they shout the Kalima with a particular intonation of the words illah 'illahu, but afterwards articulate it with suppressed breath. They reject musical accompaniments, and seldom indulge in songs, even unaccompanied by music, in their religious devotions. They wear green turbans, and one of their garments must be of ochre, a colour first used by the saint Hasan Basri. The repetition of the Darud, or salutation to the Prophet, bears a conspicuous part in the ceremonial of this order. Their chief places of sanctity in the Panjab are the Khangah of Maulâna Muhammad Fâzil in Batâla; the Mausoleum in Labore of Shâh Muhammad Ghaus, whose disciples are found as far as Kâbul, Ghazni, and Jalalabad; the shrine of Tahir Bandagi in Lahore, and that of Shih Kamal at Hujra Shih Muqim in the Montgomery District. There is also a shrine of his between the fort and the city at Ludhiana, where the saint is said to have left his tooth-brush. A fair, called the Roshani Fair, is held here on the 14th of Rabi-us-Sani; cattle are tied up at night at the shrine for good luck, and are said to keep watch (chanks) at the shrine, and women who desire offspring make offerings,"

2. The order has a special interest, as it was into this that Sir R. Burton was initiated before his famous pilgrimage to Makka and Madina. The curious may consult the record of the journey for a copy of the diploma investiture which he received.2

¹ Beel, Oriental Dictionary, s. v.

² Panjab Courses Report, 10k.

¹ II, 327.

Distribution of the Qddiris according to the Course of 1891.

Disys	ner	u.		Numbers.	Dist	RICH	8.		Numbers,
Dehra Dân	:			71	Blods				8
Sahäranpne				316	Hamirpur	٠			ā
Muzaffarnage	Nº			164	Allahabad	ě-			78
Bulandshalir			+	789	Jhansi			-	1
Mathura				13	Lalitpur				14
Agra .	v.	2		2	Glenzipur		+		120
Farrulchábád		4		21	Gorakhpur				21
Mainpari			×	22	Tarki .	÷			453
Etāwah		4	0	36	Lucknew				.325
Etal: .				65	RAS Bareli				110
Baceilly		4	×	1,152	Stiapur				2
Budhun		35	Ø	206	Fairabhd	40			236
Moradabad			1,2	204	Genda				1
Shahjahanpu	ır.	0		401	Bahrhich	6	y.,		15
Pilibhit			4	677	Blyabanki				120
Fatelipur				3	-	To	TAL		5,486

Qalaigar (Arabic qaldi, "tin").—The man who tins the copper cooking-vessels, which are so wilely used both by Muhammadans and Christians. The easte, so-called, is purely occupational, and all who entered their names as such at the last Census were Muhammadans.

Distribution of the Quidigors according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	raio	PE.	Numbers.	Districts.				Nambers.
M natellerina	pir	3	4	Turdi .			F	12
Budhun			22	Lucknow	à		+
Moradabad			31	Gonda				1
Falchpur			3	Dahrkich				1
Jhanei		*	2	Sultanpur				2
Ghazipar		,	10		To	TAL		80

Qalandar. - A caste of Muhammadan Fagirs, bear and monkey eaders. According to Mr. Platts, the word is used for the original kalandar, "a rough, unshaped block or log." They trace their origin to the Saint Be Ali Qalandar, who died in 1823-24. Of him many wondrous tales are told. He used to ride about on a wall, but at last settled down ut Panipat, "The James then flowed under the town, and he prayed so continuously that he found it convenient to stand in the river and wash his hands without moving. After seven years of this he got stiff, and the fishes ate his legs; so he asked the river to step back seven paces and let him dry. In her hurry to oblige the saint, she retreated seven miles, and there she is now. He gave the people of Panipat a charm which drove away all flies from the city. But they grumbled and said they rather liked flies, so he brought them back a thousandfold. The people have since repented. There was a good deal of trouble about his funeral. He died near Karnal, and there they buried him. But the Panipat people claimed his body, and came and opened his grave; on which he sat up and looked at them till they felt ashamed, They then took some bricks from his grave with which to found a shrine; but when they got to Panipat and opened the box, they found his body in it; so he now lies buried both at Panipat and Karnal."1

2. The Qalandar of these Provinces is generally a lazy, swindling rascal, some of whom go about with snakes; Oumpation. others with tame bears and monkeys. He wears round his neck several strands of white stones or beads and glass. He also carries a head rosary (tablah), and usually on his right wrist two or a single brass bangle. On his right leg he has an iron chain. He also has a vessel (kishta), made of coccanut, shell (darydi udriyal), and a brass lota. Sometimes he has an iron bar as well. He announces his approach by twanging the damaru, or little drum, shaped like an hour glass. Those who have monkeys, the male being generally called Maula Bakhah and the female Zahûran, make them dance to amuse children. Those who have bears, make them dance, and allow for a consideration little boys to ride on their backs, which is believed to be a charm against the small-pox. They also sell some of their hair, which is a favourite amulet against the Evil Eye. Some go about as ordinary beggare.

¹Inbutson, Panjdb Ethnogrophy, section 224 : Lady Burton, Arabian Nights, I. St.; VI, 227.

Though they wander about begging they are not absolute vagrants, as they have settled homes and families.

- 3. Marriage among them takes place at the age of from ten to twenty. They follow in all their ceremonies the rules of the Sunni sect of Muhammadans, to which they belong. Some of them have taken to the trade of the Bisāti, and make tin frames for lanterus and small boxes (dibiya) out of tin. All Muhammadans will cat and smoke with them. No Hindu, except a Dom or a Dharkar, will touch their food.
- 4. The Qalandar is our old friend the Calendar of the Arobigu Nights. Most of them are morely loaling The Oriminal Qalandar. beggars; but in Rohilkhand there appears to be a branch of them known as the Langre, or "lame," Qalandars, who are said to be Rchillas from Rampur.1 They were formerly residents of Hardoi, and devoted themselves to stealing horses and ponies, which were passed from Oudh to British territory and vice versa. Shahabad, in Hardoi, was regarded as their head-quarters, and there they had the name of Machhie. On the annexation of Oudh, they divided into gangs, and nominated one Bankê as their leader (sargiros), with two assistants, known as the Bhandari, or purveyor, and Kotwai, or police officer. On the celebration of the marriage of any of their members they continue, if possible, to assemble together and distribute food and wine to the best of their ability; on the occasion of marriage ceremonics among the Khatris, when any of the gangs are present, gifts of food and money are given to them, which they designate their birt, or " maintenance." This is also the name given to what they receive on certain occasions when religious ceremonies are performed. They are very superstitious, and have their own omens and signs, some of which are considered lucky, and others the reverse. Thus the barking of a hymna behind them or on their left is considered a bad omen.
 - 5. This tribe, or rather the numerous gangs composing it, proceed through districts disguised and call themselves Langré Qalandar or Rohillas of Report of Mr. H. Ross, District Superintendent of Police. Pilibhit.

Râmpur. In Râmpur and the neighbourhood they use the former, and towards Lucknow the latter. They travel about in the cold and hot weather, but in the rains they settle down and occupy themselves in begging. Their wives and children accompany them, but they do not encumber their movements with any luxury, such as cattle, furniture, etc., having only one or two ponies for the transport of their personal effects, in addition to which, hidden among their quilts and blankets, are reins, ropes, and headstalls for the stolen ponies. This is undoubtedly the reason why they have hitherto never been classed as a criminal tribe, nor have raised suspicion as to their real character. They pass the night under trees or in the fields, or, if near a populous place, in a convenient grove. During the day, disguised as beggars, they mark down the horses and ponies which they purpose to steal. When they obtain a fair number of animals, they pass off as horse-merchants, and make their escape as rapidly as possible. Animals stolen near Lucknow are sold in the northern parts of Ondh and the North-West Provinces-their chief markets being Bilaspur in the Rampur State, Durae in the Tarai, and Chichait in Bareilly. They chiefly frequent the districts of Pilibhit, Kheri, Bahraich, and the Tarai, as they are close to Nepal, where ponies and fodder are plentiful.

6. These people have a regular thieves' argot of their own, of Thieves' argot of the which the following are examples:—
Langré Qalandars.

Bidna			Man.
Bidni			Woman.
Basta			Rupee.
Bairgi			Cot.
Botay			Sheet, quilt.
Bajrin			Gun.
Bodi			Hair tuft.
Chál			Hair.
Chesha			Flour.
Chiki			Fire.
Chitya			Cat.
Chimmi			Fish.
Charya			Tree.
Chirma			Colt.
Dhaind			Burglary.
			-

NDAR.			188
Dhuu					Ear.
Dúdrla					Leg.
Dhurd					Grain.
Dhureka					Red pepper.
Dhungar	a.				The Sing sara unt (water caltrop).	r
Dhingail	la	4	4		Bullock,
Dhingail	i .			,	Cow.
Dhawar					Pig.
Dhung					Sheep.
Dhujja					Coek.
Dhuttar		- 1			Camel.
Dhahari			100		Sugarcane,
Dhulluda		- 9			Police Officer.
Dhuddah					Duck.
Dinrange		1	- 0		European.
Didra		- 73	o ann	Ľ.	Mouse.
Enlakh	38	800	27.00		Oil.
Ghutrin		100	1000	0	Eyes.
707774398	*		*
Ghummar			1		Elophant.
Ghuttani		*	1		Eight annas.
Ghurka		100	200		Water pot, jug.
Jurha			25	,	Pony.
Jurki			•		Pony mare.
Khunji					Buffalo.
Kundar	4				Comrade.
Khuranga					Donkey.
Khurchna	0.00	*			Pipe, huqqah.
Khunnay					House,
Khail		*			Wine.
Lilka				,	Butter, ghi.
Lung				*	Rope,
Morkay		7			Tooth.
Matlao					Tank, pond.
Maihrin					Goat.
Mogda					Jackal.
Mithkar					Sugarcane.
Mukki					Sheup.
Mohidar					Village Watchman.
many or can be to the fight.	-				Bludgeon.

Nudli				4	Village,
Niklu					Bread
Oi .					A well.
Phirkmi					Cart.
Pecha					Pica.
Patki					Grass.
Rdp . '	4				Foot.
Ratáila					Stomach.
Ratki					Wheat.
Ripha					Shoe.
Surpna					Nose.
Thunda					Boy.
Thundi					Girl.
Thatb					Hand.
Tena				i	Head.
Thum				×.	Grain.
Tundul		· Po	OW.	Ų	Rice.
Theman		3	301.3		Salt.
Thimman	.000				Coarse sugar (gur).
Thimidi	.100	1.7	A 10		Sweatment,
Thubbak	. 100				Reins,
Thokay	. 1			5	Jungle.
Urkna			95		Grain.
Dhalluda hof.	tr dy	a ha	i, pai	tê .	The Sub-Inspector is coming, run away.
Khurchno	tudle	,			Smoke the huggan.
Oi sé cha			ío .		Petch the water from the well.
Phirai pe	ar dha	rrup l	lo		Get into the cart,
Dhurang	ibaku	124			A European approaches.
Khunnay	nsen d	haind	lagi		A burglary has been committed in the house.
Mokidar thokay	bal mon	kassa, khon	jur do.	ħi.	A watchman is coming, take the pony into the jungle.
Nulka n	ndli n	ien An	rka	•	A dog is barking in the jungle.

Distribution of the Qulandars according to the Course of 1891.

Dist	nio	rs.		Numbers.	Dres	enic.	ra.		Numbers.
Dehra Dûn				13	Gharipur			٠,	100
Meerut.				317	Ballis		6		241
Bulandshahr				644	Gorakhpur				929
Aligarh				36	Busti .				3,833
Mathura				23	Lucknew				11
Agra .				11	Unito .				8
Forrukl-AbA	1	,		19	Bas Bareli				207
Barcilly				157	Sitapur				62
Pilibhit				73	Kheri .				74
Cawapay				8	Paizābād				316
Fateh pur			J.	19	Gonda,				4
Allababád.				205	Bahrl/ch		1		10
Bennes			12	25	Soltaupur			,	58
Mirraper		1		63	Barstanki			+	03
			77	Sept of	-1200	To	TAS		7,628

Qassab, Qassai-(Arabic quieb, " to cut"), the butcher caste.-They are usually separated into two endogamous sub-castes: Gaû. Gawa or Gorti Qassai, who kill cows and buffaloes, and Bakar Qassii, who kill only goats. The latter is also known by the names Chile, Chikwa or Buzqassab (Persian bas, "a goat"). The Chiles are all Hindus, and have various sub-castes, one of which is Khatik. The Qassabs are all Muhammadans of the Sunni sect, and follow the ordinary Muhammadan rules of exogamy and inheritance. Marriage usually takes place at the age of fifteen or sixteen, and when there are two or three marriageable youths in a family, they are generally married at the same time to save expense. Special reverence is paid in the east of the Province to the Panchon Pir, and in particular to Ghazi Miyan, to whom fowls, cakes (maltila), sweetmeats, and garlands of flowers are offered. The food, after dedication, is consumed by the worshippers. At the Shab-i-birat festival, they offer food to the sainted dead. The Gau-quesab, from his trade, is naturally an object of detestation to orthodox Hindus. A common proverb runs : Jašán sagaré gdon gassái, tabán ek Ramdás ki ka basdi? "How can a single servant of God live in a village of butchers?" In effecting his purchases, he often has to assume disguises, and sometimes procures his supplies through the agency of Nats. In Lucknow there are two classes of Qassibs : Kameladår and Ghair Kameladår, Kamela meaning the "shambles;" the former are slaughtermen, who sell wholesale, and the latter are retailers of meat, who buy from them and sell at shops. The former always count the hide their profit, and the latter sell at a fixed charge of one anna per ser for meat with bone, and one and a half annas per ser for boncless ment. Chikwas sometimes combine in a partnership of three or more; one remains in charge of the cattle yard and the other two go to neighbouring villages and buy up sheep and goafs. Both Qassabs and Chikwas again deal in hides.2 Some, again, add to their meat business a trade in cloth and stone : a few hold land as non-occupancy tenants. "The Indo-Europeans all make their appearance in history as meat-cating peoples, and only among the Hindus did animal food as early as Vedic times give way more and more to a vegetable diet, obviously because of the climate." In Vedic times the Vaikarta was the butcher, who ent up and distributed the firsh of the sacrificial victim, and the custom is distinctly recognized and prescribed by Manu.* In Buddhist times, however, we learn that in Madhyadesa "they do not keep swine or fowls, they do not deal in living animals, nor are there shambles or wine shops round their markets," 5

Distribution of Chiks and Quantity according to the Course of 1891.

Diern			Сн	IK.	Qassin.
Divin	icre.		Khatik	Others.	Bakur- quendb.	Others.
Debra Důu	4		144	196		79
Sabdraspor		-3				11,751
Muzaffarnager					17	12.170

¹ Heey, Mensgraph, 163,

[&]quot; See Hony, Grid, 90, equ.

¹ Schrader, Prehistoric Antiquities, 315.

Institutes, V. 83, son.

^{*} Beal, Pahhlan, 55.

					Cu	TR.	QA	88 Å D.
	Dist	BICAB			Khatžir.	Others.	Bakar- questib.	Others.
Meerat								16,013
Bulandsha	br						906	8,384
Aligarh	,						201	5,461
Mathora		+				300		5,418
Agua.								4,300
Farvukhâb	î/î		4			1,984	403	1,245
Mainpuri						551		1,010
Etäwah					30,50	812		745
Etah.	ě.			12	2000	733		2,947
Bareilly						287	2,394	242
Bijnor					-4	- 444	766	8,500
Budhun			4			533	341	1,746
Moradabas	1						33	6,851
Shahjahan	pur					585	533	2,519
Pilibhis						43	146	2,404
Campur	ě.				2	1,774	40	2,040
Fatehpur						95	10	2,554
Banda						778	38	134
Hamirpur						841		675
AllahAbAd						409	621	2,675
Jhanst						15	48	293
Jaloun				D.		138		30
Benares								1,295
Mirzapar			16			74	40	552
Janapur					Ant		510	1,240
Gházipar					400	· · ·		1,945

Distribution of Chiks and Quasabs according to the Census of 1891-coneid.

	Dene	niore			Сн	IE.	QA	SEÂD.
	DINT	HIOTS			Khatik.	Others.	Bakar- quesab.	Othera.
Ballia	+						8	388
Gorakhpu					166		19	1,524
Basti	,				344		1,256	248
Azamgarh					444	794	124	2,610
Thrai					414	2		000
Garhwâl					200		8	***
Lucknow						25	2,954	2,161
Unão.							297	2,390
Rád Barel	1.			20	ag muj	00/11	1,929	1,448
Stapur			16		TT-447.17	0 23	1,183	1,388
Hardoi				10	18	50	1,559	892
Kheri						1	1,183	839
FnixAbdd							570	1,105
Gonda							231	1,909
Bahrdish						0.0	918	675
Sultaupur	,						1,191	520
Partabgae	h						506	301
Bhrabanki							1,962	1,269
		To	TAL		40	9,381	23,155	1,25,861

R

Rådha: Bhagat. - A tribe found chiefly in Robilkhand and Oudh. The people returning themselves as Bhagat in the last Census returns are probably the same people. In Bareilly they have three endogamous sub-castes : the Bhatela, Khativa, and Bichauri. The rule of exogamy is that common to all tribes of this grade. According to tribal usage polygamy is forbidden; but this regulation is violated by the chief men of the tribe. They know nothing of their origin except that they are in some way connected with Rådha, the mistress of Krishna. They are perhaps, like the Kingariyas, akin to the great Nat race. They have now settled down and do not admit outsiders to their tribe. Those who can afford it practise infant marriage; the poor seldom marry till they are adult. The women are allowed no license either before or after marriage. Polyandry is prohibited as well as widow marriage. A wife detected in adultery is expelled from the house, They are Hindus and worship Parameswar, Devi, Mahadeva, the Ganges, and the Miyan of Amroba, who is honoured with a sacrifice of sweet cakes (gulgula) and goats. These offerings are received by the Madaris who attend his shrine. Men and women both worship this godling. They engage Brahmans for their religious and quasi-religious ceremonies. Such Brahmans are received on equal terms with their brethren. They burn their adult dead and The ashes are consigned to the Ganges or any of bury children. its tributaries. They perform the usual sraddha in the month of Kuar as a propitiation to the spirits of the dead.

2. Their profession, as is shown by their name, is singing and dancing, and it has been so from time immemorial. Their musical instruments are the table, or tambourine, and the edrangi, or guitar. Some of them have now turned to cultivation. They do not, like other similar tribes, prostitute their girls or married women. They abstain from intoxicating liquor, and eat no meat but that of goats.

Based on notes by the Dopmay Inspector of Schools, Barrelly.
Vot. IV.

Distribution of the Radhas and Bhagats according to the Census of 1891.

					Rår	MA.	Bn	AULT.
	DIST	MC26			Males.	Females.	Males.	Foundam
Sahāranpu	ır			,	1	800	1
Farrukhå)	båd				60	64	83	108
Mainperi					4	6	5	2
Etäwnh							2	10
Etah		+					76	51
Bareilly					29	28	19	2
Budhun					8	5	6	5
Moradaba	d				1011	2/12:		***
Shahjahan	pur			20	281	282		***
Pilibhit					64	74	***	***
Cawnpur			W.		11		10	474
Banda			1	1	8	1	1	8
Benarm	5			9	67	67	***	***
Farhi			+		7	4	1646	***
Lucknow			+		8	10	***
Sitapur					300	370	***	***
Hardoi					772	662	***	***
Kheri					313	804	***	***
Bahrdich					107	130		***
Ramper				•	18	89	248	***
		To	TAL	.1	2,036	2,029	252	233

Rådha Swämi.—A small sect, containing at the last Census only 188 adherents, mostly residents of Mathurs; is said to have been founded by Råĉ Sålig Råm, late Postmaster General of these Provinces. The tenets of the sect seem to differ little from those of the modern reformed Vaishnavas.

Rådha Vallabhi.-A Gusain order founded by Hari Vans, of whom Mr. Growse 1 says :- "His father Vyasa was a Gaur Brâhman of Devaban in the Sahāranpur District who had long been childless. He was in the service of the Emperor, and on one occasion was attending him on his march from Agra, when at last his wife Tara gave birth to a son at the little village of Bad, near Mathura, in the Sambat year 1559. In grateful recognition of their answered prayers, the parents named the child after the god they had invoked and called him Hari Vans, i.e., 'Hari's issue.' When he had grown up he took to himself a wife by name Rukmini, and had by her two sons and one daughter. After settling his daughter in marriage, he determined to the world and live the life of an ascetic. With abandon this resolution he set out alone on the road to Brindaban, and had reached Charthawal near Hodal, when there met him a Brahman, who presented him with his two daughters, and insisted on his marrying them, on the strength of a divine command which he said he had received in a vision. He further gave him an image of Krishna with the title of Radha Vallabba, which, on his arrival at Brindaban, was set up by Hari Vans in a temple that he had erected between the Jugal and the Koliya Ghats on the banks of the Jamuna. Originally he had belonged to the Madhvacharya Sampradâya, and from them and the Nimbaraks, who also claim him, his doctrine and ritual were professedly derived. But in consequence of the mysterious incident by which he had been induced to forego his intention of leading a celibate life, and to take to himself two wives, or rather in consequence of his strong natural passions which he was unable to suppress and therefore invented a fiction to excuse, his devotion was all directed, not to Krishna himself, except in a very secondary degree, but to his fabled mistress Radha, whom he deified as the goddess of lust."

2. After quoting some of his poems, Mr. Growse goes on to say: "If ever the language of the brothel was borrowed for temple use it has been so here. But, strange to say, the Gusaîns, who accept as their gospel these nanseous ravings of a diseased imagination, are for the most part highly respectable married men, who contrast rather favourably with the professors of rival sects that are based on more reputable authorities. Several of them have a very good knowledge of literary Hindi; but their proficiency in Sanskrit is not very high.

¹ Malhura, 185, 279.

3, "To indicate the fervour of his passionate love for his divine mistress, Hari Vans assumed the title of Hit Ji, and is popularly better known by this name than by the one which he received from his parents. His most famous disciple was Vyas Ji of Orehha, of whom various legends are reported. On his first visit to the Swami he found him busy cooking, but at once propounded some knotty theological problems. The sage, without any hesitation, solved the difficulty, but first threw away the whole of the food which he had prepared, with the remark that no one could attend properly to two things at once. Vyas was so struck with this precedure that he then and there enrolled himself as his disciple, and in a short space of time conceived such an affection for Brindaban that he was most reluctant to leave it, even to return to his wife and children. At last, however, he forced himsef to go, but he had not been with them long before he determined that they should themselves disown him, and accordingly he one day in their presence ate some food from a Bhangi's hand. After this act of social excommunication, he was allowed to return to Brindaban, where he spent the remainder of his life, and where his Samadh or tomb is still to be seen."

Distribution of the Radha Vollabhi Guzdins recording to the Census of 1891.

	Distaices,				Numbers.	Dian	RIC	PR.		Numbers.
M azaffi	иград	ar	4		30	Moradabad	,			2
Agra		*			70	Lalitpur	4			5
Mainpu	ri			,	5	Gorakhpur				13
Etals					13	Gonda				111
Bijnor					3	1	To	TAL	-	252
			_		ales .			100

Raghubansi.—A sept of Råjputs connected with the Nikumbh (q. v.). Those in Sultanpur 1 profess to be lineally descended from Raghu, an ancestor of Råma, and claim to have been settled in their present abode ever since the time of their eponymous ancestor. For centuries they resisted successfully the threatened encroschments of the Bachgotis; and maintained intact a frontier marked by a little nameless affluent of the Gumti. It was not till within the half century of disorder and misrule which preceded the annexation of the Province, that they succumbed, and even now, though only in a subordinate position, they retain no considerable portion of their ancient heritage. In Sitapur they have suffered much in recent times, and are gradually dying out. In their estates a tradition exists that the cultivation of sugar is fatal to the farmer, and that the tiling of a house brings down divine displeasure upon the owner; hence to this day no sugar is grown and not a tiled house is to be seen.

I Seillement Report, 123.

2. In Sultânpur they marry girls of the Bilkhariya, Tashaiya, Chandauriya, Kath Bais, Bhâlê Sultân, Chandel, and Palwâr septs; and give brides to the Tilokchandi Bais, Mainpuri Chauhânss Sûrajbansis of Mâhul, Gautams of Nâgar, Majbauli Bisens, Râj, kumâr and Bachgoti. Their gotra is Kasyapa. In Jaunpur they take brides of the Nikumbh, Gaharwâr, Chaupat Khamb, Bais Bisen, Kâkau, Singhel, Sombansi, and Ujjaini.

Distribution of the Raghubanes lidjouts according to the Course of 1891.

Distr	101	T.	Numbers.	Dur	RICI	*		Numbers
SahAranpur	+		9	Bareilly				69
Mecrut			21	Rodaun				843
Aligarh			46	Moradabad				95
Mathura			19	Sháhjahlop	ar			1,396
Адта .			83	Pillibhit			,	114
Farrukhābād			210	Campur				261
Mainpuri	+		221	Fatebpor				479
Etawah	y.		294	Bânda .				1,725
Etab .			414	Hamirpur				614

Oudl Gazetteer, III, 890.

Distribution of the Raghubansi Rajputs according to the Consus of 1891-usuald.

Dra	TRIC	ra.		Numbers.	Dist	rnio	ти.	Numbers.
Allahábád		14		403	Lucknow			200
Jhānsi .	4			57	Unão .			324
Jalaun .				33	Rãô Bareli			797
Lalitpur				10	Sitaper			611
Benares				15,197	Hardol	•		158
Miczapur				2,935	Kheri .			431
Jaunpur				17,413	Faisabad			2,921
GhAzipur		×		2,958	Gonda	+		11
Ballia .				151	Bahraish		4.	175
Gorakhpur		+		1,445	Sultanpar		6	3,687
Basti .		16	ĸ,	997	Partabgarh	1		90
Azamgarh		1.0		2,477	Bårnbanki			1,240
Tarài .				20	1500	To	LL	61,216

Rahwāri 1 (rahwār, "quickpaced, active").—A caste of camel owners and drivers, also known as Riwāri, Rādwāri. Of these people Abūl Fazl writes 2:—"Raibāri is the name given to a class of Hindus who are acquainted with the habits of the camel. They teach the country-bred lok camel so to step as to pass over great distances in a short time. Although from the capital to the frontiers of the Empire, into every direction, relay horses are stationed, and swift runners have been posted at the distance of every five kos, a few of these camel riders are kept at the palace in readiness. Each Raibāri is put in charge of fifty stud armānahs, to which, for the purpose of breeding, one bughur and two loks are attached." Colonel Tod, 3 writing of the Raibāris, says:—"This term is known throughout Hindustân only as denoting persons employed in rearing ^{*}Largely based on a note by Babu Atma Ram, Head Master, High School-Mathara.

^{*}Blockmann, Ain-t-Akhori. I, 167, sq. For a complete account of the camel, see Wast, Becommic Dictionary, s.v. *Annals/II, 207.

and tending camels, who are there always Muslims. Here they are a distinct tribe and Hindus, employed in rearing camels, or in stealing them, in which they evince a peculiar dexterity, uniting with the Bhattis in the practice as far as Daudputra. When they come upon a hord grazing, the boldest and most experienced strikes his lance into the first he reaches, then dips a cloth in the blood, which, at the end of his lance, he thrusts close to the nose of the next, and, wheeling about, sets off at speed, followed by the whole herd, lured by the scent of blood and the example of their leader." Of the Bombay branch of the tribe we are told that "in Kachchh they say they came from Marwar, and this is supported by the fact that the seat of their tribe goddess Sikotra is at Jodhpur. The story of their origin is that Siva, while performing religious penance (tap), created a camel and a man to graze it. This man had four daughters, who married Rajputs of the Chauban, Gambhir, Solanki, and Pramar tribes. These and their offspring, were all camel drivers. Tall and strongly made, with high features and an oval face, the Rahwari, like the Ahir, takes flesh and spirits, and does not soruple to eat with Musalmans. He lives for days solely on camel's milk. Except a black blanket over his shoulders, the Rahwari wears cotton clothes. This waist cloth (dhots) is worn tucked through his legs, and not wound round the hips like a Rajput's. They live much by themselves in small hamlets of six or eight grass huts. They are described as civil and obliging, honest, intelligent, contented, and kindly. They are very poor, living on the produce of their herds. Each family has a she-camel called Mâta Meri, which is never ridden, and whose milk is never given to any one but a Hindu." 1

2. They pretend to possess a complete set of gotras; but no one
The Rahwaris of the can even attempt to give a full list of them.
North-West Provinces. A man cannot marry in his mother's or grandmother's gotra. They claim to be Râjputs, but cannot designate any particular sept as that from which they have sprung. They do not admit outsiders into their tribe. Both infant and adult marriages are allowed, and no sexual license on the part of the girls is tolerated before marriage. Polyandry is prohibited, and polygamy allowed up to the extent of three wives at a time. The marriage is celebrated in the usual Hindu fashion, and the perambulations

¹ Bourbay Gasetteer, V, 80 ; see also VII, 137, su-

(bhánwar phirna) round the nuptial shed are the binding part of the ritual. A widow may marry again by the dharicha form, and the levirate is permitted, but it is not compulsory on the widow to marry the younger brother of her late husband. A wife can be expelled from the house for infidelity, and for no other cause. Such a woman may marry again in the tribe by the dharicha form.

 The Rahwäris are Vaishnavas and worship Bhagwan. worship Devi in the months of Chait and Religion and customs. Kuấr, as well as Zâhir Pîr in Bhâdon. cat the offerings themselves, which consist of sweetments and fruits. They employ Brahmans as their family priests, and such Brahmans are received on an equality with those who do the same service for other castes. They barn their dead. Poor people leave the ashes on the cremation ground; those who can afford it take them to the Ganges or Jumna. They do the staddha, and some even go to Gaya for that purpose. Their primary occupation is rearing, tending, and letting out camels for hire. Some have purchased land, others cultivate as tenants, and others are landless labourers. They eat the flesh of cloven-footed animals, fowls, and fish; but not monkeys, pork, beaf, flesh of whole footed animals, crocodiles, snakes, lizards, jackals, rats, or other vermin, or the leavings of other people. can eat pathi in the same dish with Jats, and can use their tobacco pipes, and they will also smoke with Güjars; but they will cat kachchi only with their own caste. The Rahbari, as he appears in these Provinces, has rather an evil reputation for high-handedness, and he is proverbially described and untrustworthy.

Distribution of the Rahwaris according to the Census of 1891.

Disper	ют	S.	Non	Numbers. Disputoys.					Numb
Muzaffarnagar				39	Maispuri				10	34
Meerut				18	Etah .					4
Balandshater .				88	Jhani					2
Mathora .				454	GhAzipur					4
Agra .	ď			254		To	TAL			888

Raikwar.—A sept of Rajputs who claim to be of Sûrajbansi origin. Their settlement in Bahraich I dates from about 1414 A. D., when, during the anarchy that prevailed through Hindustan on the decline of the house of Tughlaq, the two brothers, Pratap Sah and Dondi Såh, Sûrajbans Râjputs, migrated from Raika in Kashmîr, whence they profess to take their name, and finally took up their abode at Rämnagar in the Bärabanki District. His sons overcame the Bhar Râja and acquired his estate about 1450 A.D., and since then the Raikwars bave been masters of the western part of the district. In the time of Akbar, Harihar Deva, fifth in descent from Pratâp Sâh, who had been summoned to court to explain a breach of good manners in levying toll from one of the Princesses as she passed through his estate on a pilgrimage to the shrine of Sayvid Sålår, rendered such assistance to the Emperor in his campaign against the rebellious Governor of Kashmir, that he was granted nearly nine parganas. The connection of the Unito I family with the great Rajas on the banks of the Ghagra had been entirely broken off; but when they began to rise in political importance they sought to renew it, and Mitthu Sinh and Bakht Sinh went to Ramnagar and claimed brotherhood with the Raja. He heard their story and entertained them with hospitality, and sent them out food. Amongst other things he provided tooth-brushes made of the wood of the see tree. All other Rajputs place a special value on this wood; but the Raikwars alone are forbidden to use it. The rejection of these tooth-brushes by his guests proved to him that they were truly of his own kin. The brother of the founders of the families of Baundi and Ramnagar * was Bhairwanand. His nephows concocted a prophecy that their uncle should be sacrificed to secure the future greatness of the family, and he gave up his life for their sake. A platform, erected in the village of Chanda Sihali, marks the tradition that Bhairwanand fell into a well and was allowed to drown there in the hope that the prophecy would be fulfilled and their rule continue for ever. To the present day Raikwars make an annual pilgrimage to the platform of Bhairwanand.

2. In Rác Bareli their sons marry girls of the Bisen and Trans-Ghâgra Bais; their daughters marry in the Bais, Panwâr, and Amethiya septs. In Bareilly they select brides from the Bâchhal and Gautam septs; their sons marry Janghara, Bhūr and Katheriya girls. In Farrukhâhâl they claim to belong to the Vasishtha gotra; their girls marry in the Sombausi, Râthaur, and Chauhân septs; their sons, in the Katheriya, Gaur, Baisgaur, Nikumbh, Jaiswār, Chamâr Gaur, Ujjaini, and Parihār. In Unâo their daughters marry Dikhits, Gaharwārs, Janwārs, Chauhāns, and Chandels; their sons, Mahrors and Gahlots. In Unâo they say they belong to the Bhāradvāja gotra; they take brides from the Bisen, Ahban, Katheriya, Gaur, and Chandel, and give brides to the Sombausi, Chandel, Gaur, Chauhān, Tomar, and Ahban. In Hardei, during the Mutiny, they were remarkable for their lawlessness, and it was in attacking their fort at Ruiya that the lamented Adrian Hope was killed.

¹ Elliott Chronicles, 44, 89.

^{*} Manual of Titles in Ondh, 10: Ondh Gazetteer, I, 137, 120 sq., 257, 285, 288.

^{*} Settlement Report, Appendix C.

Distribution of the Raikwar Rajputs according to the Census of 1891.

		Dtsy	RICTS.	30		n.	Hindus.	Muham- madana.	TOTAL
Dehra Dûn		+10	6		Mi de	11	1	M	1
Sahāranpa	r				40			14	14
Muzaffacu	agar						146.00	606	606
Mathura				4	14		9	-	- 2
Agra						-	1	160	1
Farrakhåb	M	9					623	32	650
Maiopuri		4				-	87	no -3	87
Ethwah		+					80	San 1	80
Etah					i.		39	247	30
Harellly							255		860
Budhan	+						760	800	700
Moradálad	1						41		41
Shahjahao	par						99	10	100
Pilibhia							2	10	19
Cawnpur							261	111	261
Fatehpur							116	400	110

¹ Sattlement Report, 194.

Distribution of the Raikwar Rajputs according to the Census of 1891—coneld.

		Dier	RICTS.				Hindus.	Muham- madans.	TOTAL
Bánda					41	-	28		28
Hamîrpur							63		68
Allahûbêd							401	45	448
Jhansi							4	in	4
Jálaun							403	1	468
Lalitpur							8		3
Benares						4	1		1
Jaunpur							95		95
Ghazipar				20	120	4	228		228
Ballia	÷		00	.7	0.00	170	701	200	701
Gorakhpar							843	14	867
Basti		A			Q.		681	/	881
Azamgarh					.2	5.	1,025		1,025
Lusknow						-	407		407
Unão	è			•			2,070	431	3,501
Råå Bareli							168	89	207
Sitapur	ř.						1.165	62	1,227
Hardol							2,073	244	2,073
Kheri							306	9	315
FaizAbad							1,758		1,758
Gonda							737	914	737
Bahraich							4,247	360	4,597
BultAnpor							282	42	324
PartAbgarh							916	116	1,032
Barabanki							2,578	17	2,595
				To	TAB		23,909	1,798	25,707

RÂIN. 206

Râin .- A gardening and cultivating caste found in the Mecrut and Rohilkhand Divisions, with both a Hindu and Muhammadan branch. They are the same as the Arains of the Paujab, of whom Mr. Purser writes1: - " The Arisins say they came from Sirsa, Raniya. and Delhi, and were originally Hindu Rajputs. They claim to be descended from Rác Jaj, the grandson of Lava, founder of Lahore. Jaj was the ruler of the Sirsa territory, and on that account was called Rac; and his descendants became subsequently known as Arsin. They became Muhammadans chiefly in the time of Shahabud-din Ghori, or at the end of the twelfth century. Some three hundred years ago they came to this part of the country. Some of the Arkins of the Jalandhar Tabail say they are the descendants of Râja Bhûta, fifth is descent from Râja Karan, and were settled in Uchh. They were foreibly converted by Mahmud of Ghazni, They then migrated to Sirsa, and thence at various times come into the Panjab. They had to leave Uchh because they refused to give a lady, called Basanti, to the king. This is clearly proved by this verse, which also shows the straits they were reduced to-> Uchh na dité Bhúlian chata Basanti nár; Udna páni chuk gaya; chában moti hár.

The Bhūtas neither gave Uehh nor the lady Basanti; food and water were exhausted; they had to eat pearls."

2. "One of the chief Aritin class is called Bhutta. They are generally supposed to be converted Kambohs, and say they are legitimate, and the Kambohs the illegitimate, offspring of a common ancestor. In my enquiries they would admit no relationship. It would seem they were originally located on the lower Indus, and that one section of them settled on the Ghaggar. When this river dried up, they moved into the Jumna and Cis-Satlaj tracts; and perhaps spread along the foot of the hills and across the line of movement of their brethren, who were moving up the valleys of the great rivers. By some they are said to be the same stock as the Sainis; but this is certainly not a common tradition, and the assertion is probably based on the fact that the Arâins are called in Persian Bâghbânân, which is the translation of Māli, or gardener, and that Saini is only a local term for the Mālis. It may be noted that Mahr is a title among the Arâins, and also among the Gâjars."

I Julamilhar Sottlement Report, 82, 19.

3. From Hissar Mr. Fagan writes :- "In Hissar they are exclusively Musalman and claim Rajput descent, their ancestor having lost caste by taking to agriculture. Their gotras appear to bear Râjput names, such as Siroha, Chauhan, and Bhâti. There is however one gotra called Katma, which is said to consist of the true Arâins, who are not Râjputs. The tradition of the Sirea Râins is that they were expelled from Uchh, near Multan, by their enemies, and escaped by abandoning their military rank and taking to market gardening, the tribal occupation of their neighbours, the true Rains. They came and settled on the Ghaggar, and up to the famine of 1795 A.D. they are said to have held the whole of the Ghaggar valleyfrom Bhatner up to Tohana in Fatchabad. The famine, combined with the attacks of the marauding Bhatti Rajputs, weakened their hold on the land, and they finally broke before the Chalisa famine of 1783 A.D. (Sambat 1840) and many of them emigrated to Bareilly, Pilibhît, and Râmpur in the North-West Provinces. On the advent of British power they again expanded, principally in Sirsa. One clan deny any connection with the Musalman Kambohs, which the Sirsa Rains appear to admit."

4. Mr. Ibbetson says¹:—"The Satlaj Arâins in Sirsa say that they are, like the Arâins of Lahore and Montgomery, connected by origin with the Hindu Kambohs. Mr. Wilson thinks it probable that both classes are really Kambohs who have become Musalmāns, and that the Ghaggar Arâins emigrated in a body from Multân, while the others moved gradually up the Satlaj into their present place. He describes the Arâins of the Ghaggar as the most advanced and civilised tribe in the Sirsa District, and he considers them at least equal in social status to the Jâts, over whom they themselves claim superiority."

Distribution of Rains according to the Course of 1891.

	Dist	RICTS.		Hindus.	Musalmans.	TOTAL
Dehra Dán			4.1	4			135	186
Saharanpur						131	1,168	1,299
Mosallarnagar					+	12	2,099	2,111

RÂIN.

Distribution of the Rains according to the Course of 1891-concid.

		Dier	BICTS.		Hindos,	Musalmāns.	TOTAL
Mathura					4.		iei.	1	1
Bareilly	è		1		¥		260	1,918	1,915
Morildabl	A							1	1
Pilibbit						-	101	5,197	5,197
Jhànsi	i	•					149	8	3
Gorakhput				,			3		3
Tarki							149	4,573	4,578
Bahráich	+				i,		000	2	2
				TOTAL		1	146	15,097	15,248

Râj, Râj Mistri, Thawai (in Persian Ms'wār).—The mason and bricklayer casts. The word Râj means either a "head workman" (Hindi rāja) or is a corruption of the Persian rās; Mistri is a corruption of the Portuguese mestrs; Thawai of the Sanskrit stāa pati. The caste is a purely occupational one, and is recruited from many of the lower castes, among whom Chamārs are very numerous.

Distribution of the Rdj Mistris according to the Census of 1891.

	Dust	LIOTS.		Hindus.	Mussimans.	TOTAL
SahAcanpur					918	166	484
Munaffarnagar					890	166	560
Meerat .				+	246	77	323
Bulandshahr	+				577	4	581
Aligarh .		4			285	2	287
Mathura .					5-6	100	54
Agm .	+				8	50	64
ParrukbAbdd					16	189	205
Maiapuri .					181		181

209 rāj, rāj mistri, thawai.

Distribution of the Raj Mistris according to the Census of 1891-could.

Disculors.							Hindus.	Musalmina	TOTAL
Etáwah	4.						157	2	159
Etab							145	80	235
Bijnor								258	268
Budaun							41	827	F68
Moradabad							26	290	25.76
Shahjahan	par						12	122	184
Pilibhit							200	3	2
Cawnpur								38	38
Fatehpur								158	159
Hamîrpay	*				A.I	10	26	1	27
Allahābād			2.	200		160	21	35	50
Jhausi		41			n an		123	3	126
Jilaun			1		, n	-	10		10
Bennree					13			98	98
Janopur							111	100	109
Ghazipur					-			10	10
Gorakhpur					,		34	128	162
Basti						4	444	112	119
Axamgarh								12	19
Tarki								5	- 6
Lucknew					i.		2	5	7
Unio					4			249	240
Båå Bareli	+				*		200	184	184
Shapur								4	- 4
Hardoi							4	4	8
Khari							145	36	181
Faizábád								93	90

Distribution of the Bdj Mistris according to the Consus of 1891 -conold.

		Diar	n1078.			Hindos.	Musalmans.	TOTAL
Gneda								28	28
Bahráich							171		171
Sultanpur	ř.							238	238
Partabgar	h							21	21
Bărabanki						-	73	148	221
				To	TAL		8,185	3,468	6,633

Rāji ("the royal people").—A tribe, apparently of non-Aryan affinities, found in Askot, in Kumaun, and in small numbers along the lower Himâlayan ranges.

2. They have been identified with the Rajya Kiratas, who, in early Sanskrit literature, are joined with the Traditions of origin. Sakas and Savaras as Dasyus, and are placed by the Varaha Sanhita between Amaravana and China, or between Jagesar and Tibet; and the title will mean either "the princely Kirâtas" or the "the Kirâtas of Râjya." The Râjis have often been noticed by ethnographers whose speculations have been based on a few lines by Mr. Traill.2 It is there said that the Raji represent themselves as descendants of one of the aboriginal princes of Kumaun, "who with his family fled to the jungle to escape the destruction threatened by an usurper. Under the pretension of royal orgin, the Rawats or Rajis abstain from offering to any individual, whatever his rank, the usuai Eastern salutation." He also states that there is a total dissimilitude of language between the Rajis and Kumaunis, and that the Doms may have been descended from these Rajis, "the former being, for the most part, extremely dark, almost black, with crisp, curly hair, inclining to wool," This, until the present enquiries, is the only account that has been given on any authority regarding the Rajis; yet

¹ Maix, Ancient Sanskrit Tants, II, 865, 491; Wright, Nepčl, 89, 106, 110, 312; Journal, Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1249, pages 783, 766; 1358, page 446, quoted by Atkinson, Himskeyan Gazetteer, II, 304, 297.
³ Beport, Kumann, 19, 57; Asiatic Econorches, XVI, 150.

211 RĂJI.

Professor Ritter found in it confirmation of the opinion that a Negro race may have been among the aboriginal inhabitants of the Himâlaya and Kuen-lun. There is no foundation for the statement that the Doms have curly hair inclining to wool. Out of hundreds that have come under notice, not a single one can be said to have any Negroid characteristic, though many are of an extremely dark complexion, like the other similar servile castes in the plains. Dr. Pritchard 1 conjectured that the Rajis would be found to resemble the other numerous aboriginal tribes found along the Himālayan border, all "possessing the physical character of the Bhotiyas in general and very unlike the Doms." Dr. Latham too expresses his conviction that the Rajis are "the equivalents to the Chepang of Nepal." Captain Strackey noticed "nothing very remarkable about them, except an expression of alarm and stupidity in their faces, and they are perhaps darker and otherwise more like lowland Hindustania than the average Kumaun Pakaris." They manufacture wooden bowls for sale and "live under temperary huts, frequently moving from place to place amidst the jungles of Chipula; their principal subsistence being certain edible sorts of wild plants and what game they can catch, and they occasionly get presents of cooked food from the villagers. They have a dialect of their own, but some of them can communicate with their civilized neighbours in Pakdri Hindi," The scanty vocabulary of the Raji languages that has been collected supports the connection with the tribes of Nepal suggested by Dr. Latham.

3. The following more particular account of the Rajis has been prepared from notes by Bhawani Singh, Teacher of the Deoliya Kot School in the Almora District :-

4. They are known by two names: Rāji and Rāwat. These names are used by the people themselves as well as by outsiders. They say that they are descended from the servants of the Rāja of Kutpur, by whom they were expelled for some fault. Since then they have been wandering about in the hills and forests, living on jungle produce. At the time of their expulsion the Rāja of Kutpur was Nil Kapāl, but they cannot say how many years ago he lived. This Kutpur family, they say, reigned for thirty-eight generations-from Vikramaditya to Biram Dea, All the members of the tribe consider themselves equal and intermarry freely. Their appearance, in the opinion of this observer, suggests a doubt as to whether they are not the degraded descendants of one of the higher eastes. Their tribal deity is Bagh Nath, "the tiger lord," who has a shrine at Kutpur, supported by an endowment of villages. They practise the ordinary Hindu law of exogamy; but they are not allowed to marry two sisters. They are monogamous, but can keep concubines. The bridegroom's father or, in default of him, some near relation, arranges the marriage. If the parties are minors, the consent of the parents is essential. Some small bride-price is usually paid. Part of this is paid a few days before the marriage, and the balance when the husband brings home his bride. The greater part of it becomes the special property of the bride, and if she be divorced, which can be done if she proves unfaithful or contracts leprosy, she takes away with her her own share of the bride-price. A divorced woman, can marry again, and the offspring of regular marriages, widow marriages, and those contracted with divorced women, all inherit equally the property of their father. The levirate is allowed with the usual restriction that it is only the younger brother of the husband that can marry his widow. If the widow marries an outsider, the guardianship of her children by her first husband falls to the brother of her late husband. They succeed to the whole estate of their father; if there be no sons, his brethron succeed,

¹ Researcher, IV, 205, 281.

^{*} Ethnology of the British Colonies, 132; Atkinson, let. cit., 368.

RÅJI. 212

5. The baby is named five days after birth, and on that day the Birth coremonles. family eat specially good food. There is no trace of the convade and no custom of adoption.

6. When a boy attains majority, his father goes and arranges the price of a bride for him. He pays over something in advance to close the bargain, and is then feasted, and remains there for the night. Then a date is fixed, and the boy's father comes with his friends and relations and takes the bride home. A betrothal cannot be annulled by the friends of the girl once they have received part of the bride-price in advance. The only ceremony at the reception of the bride into the family of her husband is that his mother rubs some yellow pigment on her forchead as she enters the house.

213 RĀJI.

7. They bury their dead in any convenient place in the jungle.

The clothes of the dead person and the sheet in which the corpse is wrapped are laid over the grave and not removed by the friends. It may be conjectured that the idea is to provide clothing for the naked spirit in the next world.

8. The children of the deceased and his younger brothers get their heads, beards, and moustaches shaved, and the hair is thrown on the grave as a sacrifice to the spirit of the dead man. They appear to perform no ceremony in the nature of the erdddka, and no loss of ceremonial purity results after death, childbirth, or menstruation.

Oevi in the month of October under a large tree with an offering of cooked food and animal sacrifice. When any one gets ill, they worship the gods, ghosts, and demons of the jungle; but they erect no temples in their honour, and make no pilgrimages. They appear to have no caste initiation ceremony, and no priests. Their religious duties are performed by the eldest male member of the family. The worship of Davi is performed publicly by day; but that of the ghosts and demons, secretly by night. The special offering to Devi consists of goats; the demon and ghosts are propitiated by a sacrifice of fowls. These offerings are made on the tops of hills or under some large trees. After the offering is made, the meat is consumed by the worshippers.

10. Their festivals are the Kark Sankrant, or "passage of the sun into the sign of Cancer;" and those of Aries and Capricornus, Mekha, Mokara to Sankrant; marriage days and after childbirth. On these festivals they eat specially good food themselves and entertain their relations and friends. They believe that demons and ghosts inhabit the tops of mountains, rivers, wells, and wherever water accumulates. If, after a visit to the jungle, a person becomes ill, they attribute the attack to the wrath of the jungle demon. It is then necessary to propitiate him with appropriate sacrifices. The fields are haunted by a special demon known as Chhal, who is, as a rule, benignant. Though they keep no annual feasts in their honour, they live in excessive dread of the ghosts of their deceased relations. These ghosts are of two kinds; some are worshipped as the protectors of the household; and others because, if neglected, they bring disease and death.

RÅJT. 214

11. Their chief omens are derived from throbbing of various parts of the body. Thus the throbbing of the left eye or of any member on the left side of the body forebodes evil; the opposite is the case with the throbbing of any member on the right side of the body.

12. They are much in dread of the Evil Eye, and of demoniacal influence generally: the favourite precaution is to bestow opprobrious names of their children.

13. They are not skilled in any special form of magic or witcheraft, but certain persons occasionally fall under the influence of a demon, and in a state of cestasy pour out incoherent expressions, which are regarded as oracles. In such cases the family guardian demon is invoked to expel the malignant intruder, and he instructs them which form of worship or sacrifice should be used to bring about this result.
The name of this family demon is Baital, the Sauskrit Vetila.

14. They are not allowed to eat food which has been touched by Doms, Dhobis, and similar foul castes. Their social sales and secupation chief business is to act as the pioneers of civilization by olearing the jungle. In this secupation they believe themselves to be much exposed to the attacks of the demons of the jungle; and in order to ward them off, they bury in the earth some animal bones or hang them on a tree close to the spot where they are working. They eat the flesh of cloven-footed animals and fish. They drink spirits freely when procurable. There is no food or drink specially reserved for males. All members of the family eat together in the same plastered enclosure (chauka), within which they place the leaf vessels in which they take their food. They are said never to use any form of salutation, either to strangers or to relatives and friends; the reason of this is, that they pretend to be of royal blood, and consider themselves inferior to no man. They are very shy in their intercourse with strangers; but those who gain confidence are well received and hospitably entertained on the roots and fruits which form their ordinary food. Usually when they see a stranger approaching, they run away and hide in the jungle. They have a dialect of their own, which is not intelligible to outsiders, and this language is always spoken by the women and children. Most of the adult males are able to communicate with strangers in rude Pakari Hindi. They are constantly on the move in search of jungle produce of various kinds; and it is only recently that they have begun to settle down and have taken to a rude form of cultivation in which they burn down scrub jungle and sow the seed in the ashes. This is the dakya cultivation of the Central Indian Plateau. At present one of their chief industries is the making of rude vessels out of the wood of the genti tree; these they exchange in the villages bordering on the jungle for scraps of scarse cloth and grain. When they acquire any grain by barter in this way or by cultivation, they hide it away in caves or tie it up in leaves and hang it from the branches of trees. Meanwhile, they live on any roots and fruits they can secure, and return to their grain stores only when pressed by extreme hunger. Some roots and fruits they hide away in caves for use in time of need. Their cultivation has hitherto been of the most casual and careless kind; but in recent years they have been helped by Government to obtain cattle and implements, and the younger generation show signs of taking more steadily to cultivation than their forefathers. The bride-price is almost invariably paid in coarse earthen or wooden vessels and implements for digging jungle roots.

15. From this account they appear to be in about the same stage of culture as the Kerwas of Mirzapur.

2. Rājkumār (Sanskrit rdja kumāra, "a prince").—A sept of Rājputs in Oudh and the Eastern Districts. The term Rājkumār is commonly applied to the junior branches of all houses in which a Rāj exists, and thus there are Rājkumār Bais, Rājkumār Kānhpuriya, and Rājkumār Bachgoti. It is to the last of these that the term is most generally applied, and the only explanation suggested of their appropriation of the title is that it is to distinguish them from their brethren the Rajwārs, who could once pride themselves on their chief being a Rāja. With them alone the distinction has superseded the broader appellation of the clan. The clan to which Bariyār Sinh the common ancestor, belonged, has now five branches, from which circumstance it is likened to the five fingers of a man's hand; these are the Chauhān, the Rājkumār, the Rajwār, the

¹ Sultapper Settlement Report, 152.

Bachgoti, and the Khānzāda, The Rājkumārs, through Bariyār Sinh, claim direct descent from Rāja Kundh Rāj, brother of Prithivi Rāja of Delhi. Opinions are divided as to the birth-place of Bariyār Sinh. Some fix it at Sambhal near Morādābād; some at Sāmbhar in Ajmer. By one account his emigration was due to the defeat of the Delhi Chauhāns; by another story his father, who had already twenty-two sons, married a young bride and she insisted that her son should succeed to the title; so Bariyār Sinh and his brothers were driven to go abroad and seek their fortunes. The chief families of the sept are Dera, Meopur, Nānau, and Pāras Patti. The history and traditions of the sept have been elaborately illustrated by Mr. Carnegy. One of the carliest accounts of Rājput infanticide referred to the Rājkumārs.

2. In Sultânpur it is reported that they take brides from the Bilkhariya, Tashaiya, Chandauriya, Kath Bais, Bhâlê Sultân, Raghubansi, and Gargbansi; and give girls to the Tilokebandi Bais, Mainpuri Chauhâns, Sûrajbansi of Mâhul, Gautams of Nagar, Bisens of Majhauli, Kânhpuriya, Gahlot, and Sombansi. Their gotra is said to be Vatsya. In Jaunpur it is said that they take brides from the Raghubansi, Bais, Chaupat Khamb, Nikumbh, Dhanmast, Gautam, Gaharwâr, Bisen, Panwâr, Chaudel, Sannak, Drigbansi; and give girls to the Kalhans, Sirnet, Gautam, Sûrajbansi, Bachgoti, Rajwâr, Bisen, Kânhpuriya, Gaharwâr, Baghel, and Bais, Distribution of the Edjkumar Rajouts according to the Census of 1891.

I)táy	ntor	ñ.		Numbers.	Diar	niors.		Numbers
Mathura		+			109	Bânda .			2
Agra .		4			. 4	Allababad			216
Farrukbab	44				2	Jhansi .			11
Moradabac	1				27	Benaros .			190
Pilibhit .			,		1	Mireapur			115
Cawnpur .					12	Janupur .			5,745
Fatehpur .				4	4	Ghazipur.			38

¹ Puis Abdd Settlement Report, 129; Elliot. Chronicles of Undo, 43.

Asiatic Researches, IV, 340 : Calcutta Review, 1, 377.

Distribution of the Rajkuwar Rajputs according to the Census of 1891-concid.

Dra	PRICE	8.	Numbers.	Dier	BICTS			Numbers
Ballia .			6	Sitapur .				2
Govakhpur			285	Fairābād .			4	1,675
Baeti .			337	Conda .		41		10
Azamgarh		*	212	Pahrdich.				23
Lucknow .			29	Sultanpur				15.299
Unão .			8	Partabgarh			+	123
Rae Bareli			219	Barabanki			i	61
					To	TAL		24,764

Rājput (Sanskrit rāja-putra, "son of a king").—The warrior and land owning race of Northern India, who are also known as Thākur, "lord" (Sanskrit tāākšura), or Chhatri, the modern representative of the ancient Kshatriya. All or most of the Rājput tribes in these Provinces have legendary accounts of their origin from the country known as Rajwāra, Rajasthān or Rajputāna. As General Cunningham writes ":—"The term Rajputāna as at present restricted to the States lying between the Jumna and Narbada, of which the Jumna forms the eastern boundary; but previous to the Mahratta conquest it really extended from the Satlaj on the west to the Chhota Sindh River of Mārwār on the east.

- "Within these limits the old States of Rajputana may be conveniently divided into three large groups according to their relative positions, as Western, Eastern, and Southern.
- 3. "Western Rajputâna including the Râthaur States of Bikâner and Mârwâr; the Jâdon-Bhatti State of Jâysalmer; the Kachhwâha States of Jaypur and Shaikhāwati; and the Chauhân State of Ajmer.
- 4. "Eastern Rajputâns would include the present Narûka-Kachhwâha State of Alwar; the Jât States of Bharatpur and Dholpur; the Jâdon State of Karauli; the British Districts of Gurgâon, Mathura, and Agra; and the whole of the Northern Districts of Gwâlior, which still bear the names of their old Râjput proprietors.

I Archaelogical Reports, XX, 1, sqq.

as Jådonwati, Tomargår, Kachhwähagår, Bhadaurgår, and Khichiwåra.

5. "Southern Rajputâna including the two Chauhân States of Bundi and Kotah, with the whole of Mewar and Malwa.

6. "In ancient times the whole country lying between the Arvali Hills of Alwar and the Jumna was divided between Matsya on the west and Surasena on the east, with Dasûrana on the south and southwest border. Matsya included the whole of the present Alwar territory, with portions of Jaypur and Bharatpur. Bairst and Muchāri were both in Matsyadesa; while Karnān, Mathura, and Bayana were all in Surasena. To the east was Panchala, including the Antarveda and Robilkhand. The Surasenas were Yadavas or Yaduvansis. A large portion of their old country is still in the possession of the Jadon Raja of Karanli. Their chief towns were Methora and Kleisobaras, Mathura and Krishnapura. The Yadavas first succumbed to the great Maurya dynasty of Magadha, and were afterwards overwhelmed by the Indo-Soythians under the Satrap Rajubul and his son Saudāsa. It next fell under the Gupta dynasty, the power of which was broken by the death of Skanda Gupta in 319 A.D. At the time of Hwen Thsang's visit in 635 A.D., the King of Mathura was a Sudra, but a few centuries later the Jadon Rajputs were in full possession of both Bayana and Mathura. Nearly the whole of Eastern Rajputane, therefore, belonged to the Yaduvansi or Jadon Rajputs. They held one-half of Alwar with the whole of Bharatpur, Karauli, and Dholpur, besides the British Districts of Gurgâou, Mathura, and the greater part of Agra west of the Jumna. It seems possible also that they may have held some portions of the present Gwillior territory, lying along the Chambal River, opposite Karauli."

7. It was on the death of Harsu Vardhhana, the famous king of Kananj, who reigned from 607 to 650 A.D., that most of the Râjput families would seem to have risen to power. The Tomaras of Delhi, the Chandelas of Khajuraho, and Sisodiyas of Chithor, as well as the Kachhwâhas of Narwar and Gwâlior, all begin their genealogies from that time.¹ As far as the eastern part of the Province is concerned, Sir C. Elliott suggests that the amount of pressure from the Muhammadan invaders determined the character of the Râjput colonisation.

Archmological Esports, II, 311.

2 Obveniels of Unite, 25, eq.

The Chauhans are scattered over a wide extent of country and broken up into many small estates, while the powerful Gahlots of Chithor and Kachhwahas of Amber maintained their independence for three centuries more and threw out hardly any colonies. The Oudh Rájputs may be divided into three great classes : the Bisen, Gaharwar, and Chandel were settled in the pre-historic period; the Gautam, Janwar, Chauhan, Raikwar, Dikhit, and Sakarwar emigrated after the incursion of Shahab-ud-din Ghori at the close of the twelfth century; the Gahlot, Sengar, Panwar, Gaur, and Parihar came after the establishment of the Muhammadan power; the Rawat and Mahror are indigenous to Unão and are not found elsewhere. According to the Ghazipur traditions, only from fifteen to thirty generations have elapsed since the first advent of their forefathers. Except the Hayobans and Kinwar septs, all the tribes name places in the north, north-west, or west as the homes of their race. Malwa, Bundelkhand, the Ganges-Jumna Duab, the country beyond the Jumna from Agra to Delhi, Oudh, and the country beyond the Ghagra, all are named as the old home of tribes now found in Ghazipur.1 The Oudh septs which claim an extra-provincial origin, trace their descent to single Chhatri leaders and not to troops of Râjput invaders. Such are the Bais of Baiswâra, who elaim descent from Tilokehand, who came from the Central Provinces, and the Rajkumars, from Bariyar Sinh Chanhan of Mainpuri, through whom they claim kindred with Prithivi Raja of Delhi. With these exceptions none of the clansmen of Eastern Oudh claim Western origin.2

8. The traditions of the septs, which have been separately referred to, exemplify the fact that many of them are probably connected closely with the aboriginal races, and that there are grave grounds for suspecting the purity of their descent. Thus the Känhpuriya and Bandhilgoti septs are traditionally descended from misalliances between two Brähman brothers and women of the Ahîr and Dharkër castes. The Chamar Gaur are supposed to be descended from a Chamër father and a Gaur woman. Within the memory of man an Amethiya chieftain has, according to General Sleeman, taken to wife the daughter of an ex-Pâsi village watchman and raised up orthodox seed unto himself. The Râctârs, another

Oldham, Memo., I, 45.

Carnegy, Journal, Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1876.

RÂJPUT. 220

numerous clan, have the same traditional parentage (Bråhman-Ahîr) as the Kânhpuriyas. They are said to take their name from Rāwat, an Ahîr chief. The Palwars are alleged to be descended from a common ancester who had four wives, of whom only one was of his own status, the others being of the Bhar, Ahîr, or other lower castes. The Bhâlê Sultân are in some way akin to Ahîrs, and there is a lower grade of the Bais with whom the real Tilokchandi branch will not intermarry. The same process of the adoption into the Râjput body is still going on in the case of the Khasiyas of the lower Himalayan range and along the Vindhyas, as in the case of the Singrauli Râja in South Mirzapur, who has in quite modern times developed from a Dravidian Kharwâr into a Benbans Chhatri. Under the head of Jût will be found some considerations which lead to the helief that they are ethnologically identical with the Râjputs.

9. This process of corruption is aided by the results of infanticide. The difficulty among some septs of procuring wives has led to the introduction of low easte girls in the guise of high-born brides into many Rajput families. In many places a regular trade has arisen with the object of supplying girls of this kind. In some cases doubtless the husband is the victim of a deliberate fraud on the part of the match-maker or go-between; but in numerous instances there seems little doubt that the arrangement has the sanction of tribal custom; and even when a man finds that he has been induced to receive a low-born girl as his wife, the dread of a scandal prevents him from giving publicity to the matter.

10. Rājputs are endogamous and the septs are exogamous. As will be seen from the rules of intermarriage given in the separate articles on these septs, they practice what Mr. Ibbetson calls hypergamy, by which he means the rule according to which a Rājput prefers, if possible, to marry his daughter in a sept of higher rank than his own, while he will take a bride for his son from a sept of inferior social status. One form of this is embodied in the formula—Beti pārab, larko pachehbam, that is to say, a girl may be married to the eastern or inferior septs, while the son must seek a bride among the blue-blooded septs of the west; like the Mainpuri Chauhāns or the Rāthaurs. Many Rājput youths, owing to the searcity of girls, the result of infanticide, do not marry at all, and form temporary connections with women of the low wandering tribes, such as Nâts, Kanjars, Beriyas, and the like. There has thus grown up in many of the septs two classes of different social rank: one the offspring of wives of legitimate descent, married in the orthodox way; the other the descendants of irregular connections with low caste women. Such people, as a rule, if they marry at all, marry in their own grade, and, unless they are wealthy, find it impossible to procure brides of unequivocal ancestry. It is needless to say that this connection of Râjput youths with women of these criminal races is a fertile source of crime. Gypsy gangs hang round Râjput villages and are supported and protected. During recent spidemics of violent crime in these Provinces, it has always been found that the dacoit bands were largely recruited from these half-bred Râjputs and their criminal associates.

Carnegy, Ioc. eft.

11. The country legends abound with instances of the conflict between the Rājput and the Brāhman in pre-historic times. As a survival of this it may be noted that, in Bundelkhand, Brāhmans will not allow the navel string (adva) of Rājput children to be buried in their villages lest the latter tribe may some day supplant and dispossess them.¹

Distribution of Edjputs according to the Census of 1891.

Districts.	Bindus.	Muham- madans.	Aryas,	Jaines	Silchs.	Torat.
Dehra Dûn .	46,065	677	131		8	46,876
Sahûranpur .	37,806	21,089	59		56	59,010
Muzadhrnagar	21,911	20,528	82			43,516
Meerut .	60,954	30,686	215	1	13	91,880
Bulandehalir	84,351	81,406	1,585	100		117,345
Aligarh .	77,856	508	188		9	18,854
Mathum .	59,005	8,040	31	355	14	67,448
Agra	93,232	5,501	82	73	67	08,958
Farralch&b&d	68,802	1,697	92			59,5(/)

¹ Elliot, Supplemental Glassary, s.v. Athmana.

D187 81	C78.		Hindus.	Mubam- madana,	Aryos.	Jaines.	Sikha.	TOTAL.
Mainpuri			53,176	329	46	100		53,550
Etāwah	î		54,743	532	53		3	55,320
Etah .			60,036	4,911	236			65.183
Bareilly			35,013	6,358	5		94	41,400
Bijnov	0		84,183	3,265	79			87,627
Budânu			60,939	5,686	152		5	66,793
Moradabad			59,065	8,194	182		6	77,447
Shahjahanp	ar		64,503	8,596	59	1		68,158
Pilibhit		1	10,078	950	159			111,187
Cawnpur	•	•	88,031	785	121			88,937
	•	1	44,830	6,141	1 3/	35.		50,971
Fatehpur Banda	•	1	51,926	1,653		2	8	58,589
		1	100	457		(19)	0	200
Hamirpur		1	35,085	2,173		242		35,542
Allahabad		1	68,131		err .			55,304
Jhhnsi	*	1	18,075	146	23		18	18,262
Jalaun			35,155	328	194			35,483
Lalitpur			15,887	39			699	15,926
Benares			51,203	1,146				52,669
Mirzapur			63,171	210	111		147	63,528
Jaunpur			112,242	8,903	Pete.			116,146
Ghazipur			85,406	18,746	43		2	99,197
Ballia .			139,194	1,085			194	140,579
Gorakhpur			97,487	10,883			1	98,321
Basti .			50,938	39,465				80,408
Azamgarh			130,165	15,405		140		145,673
Kumana			255,536					255,536
Garhwal'			231,953					291,953

Distribution of Rajputs according to the Course of 1891-contli-

Distrate	278.		Hindas.	Muham- madans.	Aryna.	Jainas.	Sikha.	TOTAL.
Tarâi .			16,557	536	5			17,008
Lucknow			20,565	1,308	28	444	119	28,020
UnAo .	÷		60,766	2,028	26		28	62,849
Rae Bareli			69,664	7,757	10-	641	6	77,427
Stapur		+	37,093	9,057			10	37,700
Hardoi			79,365	9,283		200		81,648
Kheri .			26,361	11,887	23			38,271
Paizābād			68,880	11,662			10	80,552
Gonda			61,361	27,431			-	88,792
Bahraich	÷		23,462	11,819	6		250	35,570
Sultanpur			88,547	25,407	1	144	997	114,044
Partabgarh			61,487	4,795	16			66,282
Bacabanki		- 3	40,515	7,504		in	17	48,036
Tota	L		3,251,418	375,833	3,710	431	849	3,682,241

Ramaiya ¹ (Sanskrit ram, Hindi ramna, "to wander").—A pedlar class found in small numbers to the west of the Province. The Ramaiya of the east of the Panjāb is the Bhātra, under another name. "The Bhātra claims Brāhman origin, and his claim would appear to be good, for he wears the sacred thread, applies the tilak, or forehead mark, and receives offerings at colless in that capacity. He is probably a low class of Gujarāti or Daknut Brāhman, and, like them, practises as an astrologer in a small way. The Bhātras of Gujarāt are said to trace their origin to the south beyond Multān. The Bhātras hawk small hardware for sale, tell fortunes, and play on the native guitar, but do not beg for alms." The Ramaiya of these Provinces, who is a pedlar and beggar, is properly a Sikh; but he is now so thoroughly domiciled here that it is difficult to Mainly based on notes by Fandit Janardan Dut Jeaki, Deputy Collector, Bareilly.

b libotana, Panjab Ethnography, para 552.

distinguish him from other Hindus. Begging is recognized by him as an honourable profession, and a Ramaiya who is rich will have no hesitation in marrying his daughter to another Ramaiya who gains his living by begging. They trace their origin to Amritsar, and say they first began to come into these Provinces about four generations ago. Some of the wealthier members of the caste in Bijnor still draw their Brâhmans, their priests, or barbers, from the Panjâb. Some of them say that they are the direct descendants of the Guru Govind Sinh.

2. Their sections, as given in the Census returns, indicate that they are a very mixed race and made up of elements foreign to the races of these Provinces. Of the Hindu branch we find Bamra, Bank, Barsari, Bhalira, Bhât, Bhatti, Bisâti, Dargal, Gajra, Gaur, Gûjar, Gujarân, Hardoiri, Kathak, Nomâin, Râdi, Râê, Rânipâri, Râthaur, Sinha, and Siphmatua; of the Muhammadan branch, Banjâra, Rêjput, Ramai.

3. The tribal council (pawe#doat) includes representatives from every family in the village, and is under a headman (chaudhars). The office is permanent and is conferred on the richest and most influential man in the community.

4. The rule of exogamy is that a man must marry in a gotra different from his own, and avoid connections Marriage rules. with near relatives on the female side, such as the daughter of his sister or aunt. He may not have two sisters to wife at the same time, but there is no rule against his marrying the younger sister of his late wife. They very soldom marry more than one wife, and then only with the object of getting an heir. Girls are married from five to ten years of age; it is exceptional for a girl not to be married till fifteen, and the richer the family is the greater tendency there is towards infant marriage. The bride gets presents of jewelry from both sides, but there is no bride price paid. There is no formal divorce, but a wife detected in adultery is turned out of the house. Widows are married by the form known as kdj, kdrao, of which the feast to the clansmen is the most important part. The levirate is allowed if the younger brother of the late husband is himself unmarried. She has power to marry an outsider if her brother-in-law does not claim her,

5. The woman is attended by some elderly woman of the family, or by a ddi, or professional midwife, if she be promurable. At the birth of a son, charity is distributed to Brâhmans and to the poor, and the child is named by the Brâhman on the eleventh day.

6. The betrothal is marked by the distribution of some coarse sugar to the clausmen by the father of the Marriage corements. bridegroom, and then the engagement is announced. The binding portion of the marriage coremony is the walking of the pair seven times round the sacred fire.

7. They burn their dead. The ashes are thrown into some river and some of the fragments of the bone are kept Death ceremonies. to be consigned to the Ganges. The corpse is tied on a bier, a pinda is offered, some gold is put in the mouth, and with an appeal for aid to Guru Govind and the words Ram ! Ram / it is cremated. They do not perform the regular ardddka; on the third day (!!ja), the clansmen bathe and eat at the house of the deceased; they are regarded as impure by their neighbours until this ceremony is done. On the tenth day, the Brahman is given food, clothes, bedding, and other necessaries for the use of the spirit in the other world. This ceremony is repeated on the first anniversary of the death, and after this nothing more is done. On the last day of the Kanagat fortnight, they place food on the house roof for the use of the deceased ancestors. A little water is then sprinkled, and the Ramaiya with folded hands invokes the spirits of the departed, and first of all that of Guru Govind. Those who make the pilgrimage to Gaya, even once in their lives, omit this ceremony. The invocation and all the prayers are in Hindustani. They call this the eraddha; but of course it does not conform to the regular ritual. They employ Brahmans as their priests, but consider it more meritorious to give charity to the son of a sister or daughter than to a Brahman.

8. By religion they are Sikhs, and particularly respect the Guru and the Grantha. But they also worship the ordinary Hindu deities, such as Ganesa, Devi, Siva, and Bhûmiya. They visit the Sikh temples at Patna, Amritsar, Dehra Dûn, and Nânakmatha, of which the last is the favourite. The married pair after the ceremony go to the temple of Bhûmiya and make an obeisance. They also worship snakes, like ordinary Hindus, and respect the pipal tree. Some visit the temb of Guru Râm Râd in the fair during the month of Bhâdon. Their temple is known as Dharmsâls or Nânakshâhi Dharmsâls. It bears the flag of the Guru, and contains the holy book known as the Granth Sâhib. During the Dasahra they hold a festival known as the Parva, when they assemble at the Dharmsåla to hear the Grantis Sähib read. The praises of the Guru are recited, and some kalwa if purchased with the contributions of those present, is distributed. The most binding oath is by the Granth Sähib, and then by the Guru; in ordinary cases the oath is taken by Ganesa or one of the ordinary Hindu deities. Women are not allowed to visit the Dharmsåla.

Vot. IV.

9. They eat no food forbidden to ordinary high caste Hindus.

When they eat they throw a little food into the fire in the name of the Guru. Their salutation is Wah Guruji ki fatch, "Victory to the Guru." When inferiors salute superiors, they say Matha take, "I lay my forehead at your feet." They will not eat kachehi prepared by any one but a casteman, not even by a Brahman. Pakki can be exten if cooked by any Hindu of respectable caste.

10. They live by petty trading and begging. Those who are pedlars sell coral beads and medicines. Those who beg, have a sort of picture (patta) representing the gods and the various hells. One important part of it is a drawing of a miser dragging a chain in hell, which they show to people to stimulate them to give alms. They do not appear to rob or steal at home, but in more distant parts of the country their conduct is not free from suspicion, and some are notorious swindlers.

11. To this may be added the following account of the tribe by Mr. P. S. Bullock, C. S.: '—" The Ramsiyas have been for years past settled down in the Bijnor District in the Chândpur and Dhâmpur Tahsîls. Altogether they are found in thirty-five or forty villages, but chiefly in large groups in the villages of Nûrpur, Rohunagli, Nahilpur, and Harupur. I believe this to be the only district in India in which they have settled down in any number; but they live in a few villages in the Panjâb, viz., in Delhi, Amritsar, and Patiyâla, one village (Chikhâna) in Sahâranpur, two villages (Chând pur and Soron) in Aligarh, and Bettiah and Bhâgalpur in Bengal. They are pedlars by profession, and sell precious stones and besudla goods, such as mirrors, combs, soap, candles, and stones. They call themselves Sikhs by religion, and they worship Guru Nânak, and say they came from the Panjab. Some shave their heads, and some do not. In fact they seem to have two seets, and account for it thus:—Guru Nanak had two sons: Srichard, who founded the Sadhu Branch; and Lakshmi Das, who founded the Sikh Branch. The descendants of Srichard shave and look like Hindus, but they are a drunken lot, cat meat, but do not worship the cow. They travelall over India, chiefly in the Dakkhin, while the Sikhs travel chiefly in the Panjab. The small number of males as compared with females in Bijnor is accounted for by the fact that the males travel about and carn their living, while the women stay at home. They do not cultivate, but are well off and carn large sums by peddling goods."

¹ Morth-West Provinces Consus Report, 1801, I, 322.

Distribution of the Kamaiyas according to the Census of 1891.

	I	DISTR	tore.				Hindas.	Muham- madana.	TOTAL.
Dehra Dür				1.0	121	Te.	mil 4	911	4
Baharanpur			3,5	27			156	· m	156
Muzaffarns	gar	.0	4				95	158	253
Moerat					-0	- +	308	() and	309
Bulandshal	hr		4				4	/	4
Bareilly				Q.		3	53		53
Bljnor							2,980	141	2,980
Moradabad	ď.					-	58		58
Phibhs					1		21		21
Tàrai	+				*		96	211	86
				To	TAL		3.766	158	3,693

Rånghar, Rångar.—A sept of Muhammadan Råjputs principally found in the Upper Ganges-Jumna Duâb. According to Colonel Ted¹ the word is derived from resa, "strife," in the sense of "turbulent;" but this is very doubtful. Mr. Ibbetson says:—

⁴ Annala, I, 487.

² Panjab Ethnography, para. 446; Census Report, North-Western Provinces, 1865, I. Appendix 8

Vor. IV.

"Rångar is a term sometimes contemptuously applied in the Eastern and South-Eastern Districts of the Panjäb to any Musalmân Râjput. I am told, however, that in Fîrozpur and Gurdâspur, there are small Râjput colonies known only by this name; and, if so, it is probable that they have emigrated from the Delhi territory. If a Hindu Chauhân Râjput become a Musalmân tomorrow, he would be called a Chauhân Râjput by both himself and his neighbours of both religions; but his Hindu brethren would call him Rânghar, which he would resent as only slightly less abusive than choticat, a term of contempt applied to those who have, on conversion to Islâm, cut off the choti or Hindu scalp lock."

- 2. The Bhatti or Jaiswar Rajputs of Bulandshahr claim descent from Raja Dalip, son of Jaswant Rao, of Nanamau near Bithur in the Cawnpur District. He is said to have had two sons named Bhatti and Ranghar. The descendants of the latter were converted in the time of the Sultan Qutb-ud-din and Ala-ud-din, and were called Ranghars after their eponymous ancestor.¹
- 3. Again, according to Sir H. M. Elliot, many of the Kankauriya and Naiganiya Ahirs have been converted to Islam and are known as Ranghars. In the Dan they are said to be descendants of strangers of Pundir extraction from Saharanpur, who gained a footing during the decline of the Garhwal kingdom. There are very few of them, and they are being gradually absorbed by marriage with hill women. In Hariyana their sections are said to be Jat, Satrola, and Raghu. The sept, in fact, seems to be a sort of cave of Adullam for out-castes of various tribes.
- 4. The Rånghars have always borne an evil reputation for turbulence. This is shown by the many proverbs concerning them:—Gujar, Ranghar, do; katta, billi, do; ye chár na ho; to khulé kiwáré so: "The Güjar and the Rånghar are a pair; so are the dog and the cat; if it were not for these four, you might sleep with open doors." Another says:—Yar Dom ne kiya Rångharya; ans-na dekha aisa harşa: "A minstrel made friends with a Rånghar and found no worse thief than he."

¹ Census Report, North-Western Provinces, 1865, I, Appendix 16.

² Supplemental Glossary, s. v. Akir.

t Williams, Memo., 27.

Indian, Antiquary, VI, 341; Journal Asiatic Society, Bengal, 1869.

Distribution of the Ranghars according to the Cennus of 1891.

Draz	RIC	Tit.	Numbers.	Dn	TRIC	rn.		Numbers.
Dehra Dûn			138	Bijnor	+			2,256
Saharanpur			368	Pilibhit				168
Muzaffarnaga	ř		1,174	Campor	,		-	2
Meerut	٠.	+	2	Jhansi	ā.			7
Bulandshahr			21	Lalitpur	2			5
Mathera .			5	Tarái				166
Agra			44	Lucknow				23
Mainperi			16	Unão			-	9
Etah			4
			200,00	Aug.	Ton	342		4,401

Rangrez 1 (Rang = "colonr;" res, rekliau = "pouring") .-The dyer caste. The Census returns show in the Hindu Branch, which is very scantily represented in the Provinces, as one subcaste-Haral. There are 81 sections of the Muhammadan Branch, which are of the usual type, -some territorial, like Desi, Deswala, Gaur, Multani; others occupational or connected with other tribes or castes, such as Bhât, Chandelwâl, Chauhân, Ghosi, Guâl Pathân, Kamangar, Khatri, Quraishi, Nilgar, Pathan, Shaikh, Sadiqi, and Usmāni. In Mirzapur there are three endogamous sub-divisions : Rangrez, Manala (who take their name from the town of Man in Azamgarh), and Marwari Rangrez. Each of these again is broken up into a Pathan and Shaikh sept, which are also endogamous. They appear to aim at the full prohibited degree of Islam," but practically only sisters' daughters are excluded. Religious differences are so far regarded that a Sunni cannot marry a Shiah. All marriages are local, and are contracted with those families with which they have been accustomed to eas and smoke. They believe themselves to be descendants of one Khwilja Bali, who was a very pious man, about whom the following verse is current :- Khudja

It is really a Hindustani corruption of Persian Rangras—Atn-i-Abbari, Blackmann, I, 307.
2 Qurda, Strah, IV, 25, 27.

Bali Rangrez Rangé Khuda ki sez: "Khwaja Bali dyes the

- 2. They do not admit outsiders into the caste; if any one happen to be admitted, he cannot be married in the Marriago valos. caste. Marriage takes place at the age of ten or twelve; and polygamy is allowed. Marriage is by three forms : Charhauna, when the bridegroom goes in procession and marries the bride at her house; Dola, used by poor people, when the bride is brought home quietly and married at the house of the bridegroom; Sagai, for widows. The binding portion of the ceremony is, in all cases, the recital of the Sharah. A widow can marry ber deceased husband's younger brother or an outsider; the levirate does not seem to be enforced. A man can divorce his wife for adultery, and a wife, her husband, if he is converted to another religion. All divorce is by leave of the tribal council. Divorced women can remarry, but there is a prejudice against it, and the friends of such a woman have to make it worth the man's while to take her over.
- deities are Ghâzi Miyân and the Pânchon Pîr.

 They are worshipped jointly on the first Sunday in Jeth with offerings of parched barley flour (sattu), encumber (kakri), melon (kharbūza), and awestmeats. Ghâzi Miyân is also worshipped after marriages with an offering of boiled rice, curds, and a fowl. This offering is known as kandūri. With Ghâzi Miyân the Pânchon Pîr are also worshipped with an offering of sweetmeats and garlands of flowers. They bury their dead in a graveyard in the usual Muhammadan fashion, and at the festivals of the 'Id and Shab-i-bârât make offerings of vermicelli (simaiyan, senwai), milk, and šalwa sweetmeats to the spirits of deceased ancestors. They also offer them bread and meat at the festival of the Bagar-'Id.
 - 4. Their trade is dycing cloth; the process has been very fully described by Mr. Hoey. Owing to foreign competition the trade has become much reduced in recent years, and many of them t Kandéri or anhack is properly the term used for a special weeship of Fatima, the daughter of the Prophet, by the most virtuous women. No male is ever allowed to see the food packed as an offering on this constion.

2 Monograph on Trades and Manufactures, 165, ang.

have now taken to agriculture and potty shopkeeping. Their women are reputed chaste. They indulge in liquor, but secretly, and the practice is reprobated. They cat the flesh of goats, sheep, cows, buffaloes, camels, and fowls, and all fish except the fresh water shark (géncé). All Muhammadane eat and smoke with them. The women will not eat food touched by Hindus. Only Chamárs and Doms eat their leavings. Their social status is low, and they rank about on a level with Julábas and other low Musalmán castes.

Distribution of the Rangrez according to the Census of 1891.

		Draz	nicta.				Hindus.	Mulam- madans.	Total.
Delma Důu			-					48	48
Sahdranpur			,		4	-2	331	1,681	1,581
Muzsffarna	gar		10	3	1921	W	Dian.	4,239	4,239
Meerut			OC.		0.00	13	2 2	4,019	4,019
Bulandshah	r	W	10	9			444	1,679	1,679
Aligarh		-7			녞			502	503
Mathura					.2	5.	-01	616	616
Agra							371	878	878
Fartukhabi	ld				+			607	667
Malapuri								193	193
Bthwalt	٠							519	519
Etah							111	498	488
Bareilly								1,399	1,892
Bijner	٠				×	4		2,566	2,555
Budann	٠					+	141	515	515
Merhdabad							1	1,176	1,177
Shahjahan	ar							905	805
Pilibhit							364	495	498
Camapar						4	9	382	385
Fatehpur								356	956

Distribution of the Rangrez according to the Consus of 1891-concld.

	Dist	arous				Hindus.	Mulam- malans.	TOTAL.
Banda							20	20
Hamirpur						100	581	581
Allahabad.	:					5	311	316
Jhansi							133	188
Jálaun					-2	241	123	123
Lalitpur							81	81
Benarus					-		304	304
Miraspur							86	86
Taunpur							481	481
3hAzipur				34.7	nil.		548	543
Ballia			30	10		10/10/	762	. 762
Jorakhpur	20	6		men	13,3	11 3	1,131	1,131
Bastl		40		40	-		231	231
Azamgarh							1,136	1,136
Tarki				J.	3		573	678
Lacknow				7		par.	467	467
Unão					- {		244	244
RAS Bareli							680	680
Shapur							136	136
Hardol					ь		193	193
Kheri							467	467
Fairábad	,						648	648
Gonda							320	320
Bahraich							198	198
Sultanpur							531	531
Partabgarh							163	163
Barabanki							586	586
			To	TAL		8	85,126	35,143

Rangeaz (Rang, "colour," sate, sathhan, "making").—The caste of painters and varnishers. With the almost entire disappearance of the palanquin their business has reduced; but there is a considerable trade in carriage painting and house painting in the larger cities and towns.

Distribution of the Ranged's according to the Census of 1891.

		Dier	RICTS				Hindus.	Muham- mačans.	TOYAL.
Bahkranpur								245	245
Muzaffarns	gar						1	240	241
Meerut	٠,							452	463
Bulandshah	r							25	28
Mathura					2		100	1	1
Farrukhábá	đ			30	10	W	17		17
Mainpurl			25	10	0.10	112	29	15	44
Etdwah					4		1881	22	22
Etah					4		141	36	36
Budhun					.2	5	m	- 6	6
Moradabad					5	-2		39	28
Shahjahanp	ar		,				4	22	26
Campur							1	12	13
Fatehpur					4			18	18
Hamirpor							tes	39	20
hédādallA								3	8
Jhànsi								11	11
Jälann								87	87
Gorakhpur						- 1		24	24
Azamgarh							7	14	21
Unão							100	8	8
BAS Bareli								12	12
Shapur							343	7

Distribution of the Rangedz according to the Census of 1891-concid.

234

	DIST	alors.		Hindus.	Muham- madans.	TOTAL
Hardol				4	10	19	20
Gonda						15	15
Bahraich					100	8	8
Sultanpur					17	18	35
Partabgarb			4		1		1
			To	TAL	87	1,400	1,487

Rastaogi, Rastaugi,-A sub-caste of Banyas found nearly all over the Province. Those in Oudh have, according to Mr. Carnegy, one peculiarity, that their women will not eat food cooked by their husbands. There they are said to have come originally from Amethi, and have three endogamous sub-divisions : Amethi, Indrapati, and Manhariya. In Mirzapur they name two subdivisions : Purbiha or Purbiya, "Eastern," and Pachhiwaba, or "Western," which have their boundary at Allahabad. It has been found impossible to obtain a complete list of their gotras and sections at Mirzapur. Religious differences are a bar to marriage. Thus, those who worship Hardina Deva or Hardeur Lala, do not intermarry with the votaries of Mahabir or the Panchon Pir. The Mirzapur Rustaugis say they came here from Dolhi about the time of the Mutiny. They marry between the ages of eight and twelve. Widow marriage is forbidden. They can marry two wives. They are generally initiated into the Ramanandi sect, and their priests are Gaur Brahmans, who have come with them from the West. The use of meat and spirits is forbidden.

2. In Mirzapur they generally keep shops for the sale of cloth (bazzdzi) and brass vessels. "In Lucknow," according to Mr. Hoey, "there are two special classes of money-lending by the account-book (baki), practised chiefly by Rastaugis: augabi and rozaki. Augabi is lending of money to be repaid with interest at 20 per cent, in monthly instalments. Thus, if a Rastaugi lends on the 1st January #10, he receives one rupes on the first of each month for twelve months, and thereby realises #12, of which #2 are interest. A Rastaugi's angahi bahi is a curiosity. It is ruled like a chess-board, but has twelve columns. As each month's instalment is realized, it is entered in a square until the twelve squares are filled. He generally also keeps a separate bahi in which the principal is noted when lent. It may, however, he noted in the margin of his check-pattern account. Rosahi is money lent to be realized in daily instalments with interest at 25 per cent. Thus, if a rupee be lent, one half anna (taka ros) will be realized daily. The account of this money is kept in a similar way, but the account-book will be ruled in lines of forty squares. A Rastaugi keeps his accounts by locality; that is, he has several fields (thet). Debtors are called asami, and the amount to be collected is 'rent' (tagds). A separate set of account-books is kept up for each thet, and a servant (generally a Brahman) is employed to collect at each thet."

Distribution of Rastdogi Bangas according to the Census of 1891.

Distr	icis	-	Ų,	Numbers.	Dis	TRICE	R-		Numbers
Saharanpur	į.			8	Jhand .		,		1
Mazaffarnagar				107	Jalaun .				9
Meerut .		7		3,100	Benares .	16			888
Bulandahahy				799	Mirzspar				97
Agra .		+		22	Glazipur				442
Farralchábád				814	Ballin .				1
Rtawah .			ò	1	Gomkhpur				167
Etah .				37	Basti .				496
Bijnor .				554	Azamgarh	ů.			420
Budhun .				892	Tarái .				100
Moradabad	,			1,679	Lucknow				1,966
Pilibbit .				9	Unão .			4	1
Cawnpnr				202	Ráé Bareli				35
Fatehpur				488	Faizābād.				56
Bànda .				91	Gonda .				81
Hamirpur				3	Bahraich				21
AllahAbAd				453		To	TAL		14,133

Rathaur (Sanskrit rashtrakata, "royal house") .- A famous sept of Rajputs. Besides that already given, which is probably correct, there are various explanations of their name. According to the tradition current in Marwar, the family deity of its rulers wae, in the Krita Yuga, or first epoch, Mansa Devi; in the Treta Yuga, Råshtra Sena; in the Dwapara Yuga, Pankhani; and in the present or Kali Yuga, Naganechi. The legend runs that the authors of the human race were Maya and Brahma, In the first epoch the female deity was called Mansa as at her desire (manas) the world was formed. Then she successively took the names of Pankhani, "the winged one," and Rashtra Sens, " the falcon of the State." The name arose because the goddess Råshtra Sena gave her blessing (vara) on the present Råthaur race. In the present epoch the name of the deity was again changed to Naganechi, because when Duhar, the grandson of Sivaji (the original founder of the Rathaur dynasty in Marwar), succeeded his father as ruler, he went to the Karnatak, where the Rathaurs ruled previous to becoming kings of Marwar, for the purpose of bringing the image of the goddess to his own land. When the cart containing the image came to the village of Nagana of Marwar, the vehicle came to a standstill. Upon this he built a temple for her there, and she took her present name, which means "resident of Nagana." The same story is told at Mathura of the image of Kesava Deva. Another derivation of the name of the sopt is that they sprang from the spine (rakt) of Indra. They are the Orature of Pliny's lists. He notes of them that their king had only ten elephants, though he possessed a strong force of infantry.

2. The history of the sept begins in 1050 A.D., when they expelled the Tomars from Kanauj, which once more became a famous kingdom and the rival of Delhi both in extent and magnificence. Here Jay Chand, the last of the dynasty, celebrated the Aswamedha, or horse sacrifice, and here in open day did Prithivi Râja, the daring Chief of the Chauhans, carry off the willing daughter of the Râthaur king in spite of the gallant resistance of the Banaphar heroes, Alha and Udal. The war that ensued between Delhi and Kanauj paved the way to the Muhammadan invasion; until finally, in 1191 A.D., Muhammad Ghori, after the fall of Delhi, marched on Kanauj and defeated Jay Chand at Benares, where he was drowned in the Ganges. Thus ended the Rathaur kingdom in the Ganges-Jumna Duab.¹

¹ Rajputana Guartteer, II, 246.

Groves, Mathura, 120.

Indian Antiquary, VI, 841.

3. Subsequent to these events, Sivaji, who was by one account the grandson, and by another the nephew, of Jay Chand, entered Mårwår on a pilgrimage to Dwårika, and halting at the town of Pali, displayed his valour by routing a body of maranders. The Bråhmans requested his protection, and he established himself there and became the founder of the Rathaur dynasty of Marwar. In less than three centuries after their migration from Kanaci the Rathaurs occupied an area of $0,000 square miles. Colonel Tod * estimated their numbers in his time, in spite of the ravages of war and pestilence, at half a million of souls. This estimate must have been much too high. The Census of 1891 shows the total Råthaur population of Rajputana to be 173,909, of whom 86,858 are in Marwar. The Mughal Emperors owed half their conquests to the one hundred thousand Rathaurs (takk talwar Rathauran) who served under them. In Bikiner they have fewer prejudices than their more Eastern brethren; they will eat food without enquiring by whom it was dressed, and will drink either wine or water without asking to whom the cup belonged. The opium draught (psydla) is a favourite with every one who can afford it.

4. According to Dr. Hoernle the so-called Råthaurs were a branch of the Gaharwârs, and it may well be North-Western Provinces and Oodh.

The Rathaurs of the North-Western Provinces and Oodh.

The Gaharwârs, and it may well be that about the time of Mahipâla a separation occurred in the Gaharwâr clan, possibly on religious grounds. For the Pâlas professed Buddhism, while the Chandras were Brâhmanists. The secession was marked by the departure of the latter to Kanauj, and by a change in nomenclature—Chandra and Râthaur for Pâla and Gaharwâr. The contempt for the Gaharwârs, alluded to by Colonel Tod, may perhaps be accounted for by their heretical faith in the time of the Pâlas. The head of the family in these Provinces is the Râja of Râmpur in the Etah

¹ Canningham, Archwological Reports, I, 283.

² Annals, II, 24.

^{*} Ibid, II, 218.

Indian Antiquary, XIV, 98,sq.

District, who claims to be thirty-ninth in descent from Jay Chand. Besides these there are two other families of the genuine Råthaure in the Central Dußb, those known as the Dhir Sâh ki Sâkha and the Khimsipur Råo family; of the former the Råja of Kurāoli is the head, but he acknowledges fealty to the Chief of Râmpur. In Mathura they are represented by the Rûja of Kishugarh, and the Farrukhâbâd branch claim descent from Parjan Pâl, and through him to Jay Chand. Of the same stock is the Usait family in Budâun. The Eastern branch is of much lower status. In Gorakhpur they do not marry in the higher tribes, and the Azamgarh family allege that they conquered the Râjbhars some nineteen or twenty generations ago.¹

5. In Farrukhâbâd they olaim to belong to the Kasyapa gotra. They give girls in marriage to the Bhadamiya, Kachhwâha, and Chaubân, and receive brides from the same septs. In Aligarh they marry Chauhân, Gahlot, Sakarwâr, Jangâra, Chaudel, Bundela, Dhâkrê, Tomar, Pundîr, and Solankhi girls, and give brides to the Gahlot, Pandîr, Sakarwâr, Chauhân, and Jangâra septs.

Distribution of the Rathaur Rajputs according to the Census of 1891.

	1	Disti	stora.	œ.	5		Rindua.	Muhamma- dans	TOTAL,
Dehra Dûn						,	9		9
Saharanpu	r	4.					195	16	211
Muzaffarns	gar				4	- 4	89	213	302
Meerut							152		159
Bulandsha	hr					٠,	242	29	201
Aligarh							1,975		1,975
Mathura	è	4.					830	1	340
Agra							1,520	2	1,531
Farrukháb	àd						6,815	3	6,818
Maiupuri		•			+		3,098	5	9,103
Ethwah							2,025		2,025

¹ Mainpuri Settlement Report, 20; Mathura Settlement Report, 35; Parrukhabidal Settlement Report, 13; Buckunan, Bastern India, 11, 458.

239

RATHAUR,

Distribution of the Rathaur Rajputs according to the Census of 1891-contd.

		Dist	Riors	_	_		Hindug.	Muhamma- dans.	TOTAL
Etah				,			6,537	19	6,856
Bareilly		4					3,002		8,002
Bijnor							31		81
Budáun			4.				4,215	101	4,310
Moradaba	d				i		705		795
Shābjahā	приг					-	5,774	8	5,777
Pilibhit							928	,,,,,	928
Cawapur				4			2,417	1	2,418
Fatehpur			9.		12	n d	328	31	359
Bânda			12	W	320		170	25	195
Hamirpur			4		mçı	110	233		233
Allahábád			1				102		169
Jhānei					7		148	V	143
Jálann		4		6	1	-	1,180		1,180
Lelitpur					7	-	181		181
Benares							46	14	60
Mirzapur				٠			48	· · · ·	48
Jannpur							1		1
GMzipur							121	4	125
Ballia							1,699		1,699
Gorakhpu	r						1.691	616	1,691
Easti				4			1,135	127	1,202
Ammgarh	1						8,137	82	3,219
Tarûi							129		129
Lucknow							204	3	207
Unão							598		598
Rãô Barol	li						1,151	1	1,155

Distribution of the Edihaur Rajputs according to the Census of 1891-coneld.

240

		Dist	nore.				Hindas.	Mulmenma- dans.	TOTAL.
Sitapur							1,993	103	2,095
Hardoi	4						3,114	2	3,116
Kheri				4			3,117	222	3,339
Faizhbad							50		50
Gonda				4:	÷		438		438
Bahraleh							395	88	483
SultAnpur						+	114		114
Partábgar	h						131		131
Barabanki		•			di.	ni	682	310	682
			Zª	To	246	117	62,657	1,038	63,595

Rauniyar, Roniyar.—A sub-easte of Banyas confined to the Benares and Gorakhpur Divisions. Mr. Neafield derives the word from rawas in the sense of "crying or hawking wares for sale." Others derive it from rawas, to "shout;" but having regard to the special occupation which they follow, the word may possibly be a corruption of lawaskara, or "a person engaged in the salt trade."

2. In Mirzapur the Rauniyars have two endogamous sub-divisions: Khariha and Samariha or Sambhariya. These they say are descended from two brothers, one of whom dealt in khāra, or alkaline salt, and the other in Sāmbhar, or the salt which comes from the lake of that name in Rajputāna. A man must marry in his own sub-division, and their rule of exogamy is that a man cannot marry in the family of his maternal uncle, father's sister, his own family or that of his sister, as long as any recollection of relationship exists. In Mirzapur they say that they are emigrants from Patna, whence they came some four or five centuries ago. On the contrary the Rauniyars of Bihār say that they have come from these Provinces.\(^1\) In Champāran they have broken up into two endogamous groups: Chhatri and Samri (who are probably skin to the Samarihas of Mirzapur): the former of whom claim to be Råjputs from the North-West Provinces, who were degarded for intermarrying with women of the Banya caste.

- 3. Rauniyars marry at the age of nine or ten. They cannot take a second wife in the lifetime of the first unless she be barren. As in Bengal they make no concealment of the fact that they allow widow marriage.
- 4. Some of them are Saivas, but they appear to prefer the Vaishnava sect. In Mirzapur they employ Sarwariya Brahmans as their priests, but in Bibar they say that they are usually served by those of the Sakadwipi tribe.

- 5. In these Provinces they say that their real business was selling salt, whence they derive their own name and that of their two endogamous groups. But they are very often what is known as pheriwalas or ladahas and wander about with bullocks from village to village, collecting grain and other country produce, which they exchange for salt, sugar, etc. They are generally men of small capital.
- 6. Those who are not initiated into any particular seet use meat and spirits; but there is no drinking allowed at meetings of the tribal council, and if a man is found drunk at such occasions, he is put out of caste. Brahmans and Kshatriyas in Bihar are said to eat pakki from their hands; but this is not the ease in Mirzapur. They will eat kackaki cooked by Brahmans and pakki cooked by Halwais, Brahmans, and Kshatriyas.

Distribution of the Ranniyar Banyar according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	PRIOT	s	Ľ	Numbers.	Dist	Numbers.
Farrokhābi	d			1	Gorakhpur				4,821
Mirapoz				649	Ammgarb				14
Gharipur				474	Gooda			4	2
Ballia .				2,708		To	PAL		8,164

O' Donnel, Bengul Cousus Report, 204.

Rawa.—A caste confined to the Western Districts, who call themselves low Rajputs, and say they came into this part of the country in the time of the Emperor Shahjahan. The women of this caste procure divorce in a peculiar way. All they have to do is to throw a cowdung cake (upla) from outside into the house. Seeing this done, the husband separates finally from his wife without any further formality. They rarely rise above the grade of farm servants.

Distribution of the Rawas according to the Census of 1891.

	Numbers.
Muzadaena	gar	i.			12			6,042
Mearut .								8,270
Bijnor .			20	da.				11,189
		× 0	d gal	JILD	Tor	A.L		25,451

Rohtaki.—A sub-caste of Banyas who claim descent from a certain Rāja Rahat, the founder of Rohtāsgarh. The foundation of it is, however, more usually ascribed to Rāja Rohitaswa, the son of Harischandra. They are more probably a local sub-caste deriving their name from the Rohtak District in the Panjāb. They are said to be very careful in religious observances. Rāja Lachhman Sinh¹ says they are numerous in Sayāna in the Bulandshahr District; but the last Census shows none of them in that District.

Distribution of Robbaki Banyos according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	nio	Ts.		Numbers.	Dies	RIO	78.	Numbers.
Shabjabanp	ш		Į,	1	Bijnor			835
Muzasfarna	fur			118	Moradabad			460
Meerat				4	Pilibhit			1
Agra .				29	Lucknow			10
Bareilly	6	٠		28		To	DAT	1,486

¹ Moneo. of Bulandshahr, 188.

243 ROR.

Ror.-A small easte of cultivators in the Western Districts. Of their kinsmen in the Panjab Mr. Ibbetson writes: "-"The real seat of the Panjah Rors is in the great dhak jungles south of Thunesar on the borders of the Karnal and Ambala Districts, where they hold a Chaurdsi, nominally of eighty-four villages, of which the village of Amin, where the Pandavas arranged their forces before their last fight with the Kauravas, is their head village. But the Rors have spread down the Western Jumna Canal into the lower parts of Karnal and into Jind in considerable numbers. They are fine stalwart men of very much the same type as the Jats, whom they almost equal as husbandmen; their women also working in the fields. They are more peaceful and less grasping in their habits than the Jate, and are consequently readily admitted as tenants, where the latter would be kept at arm's length. Of their origin I can say nothing certain. They have the same story as the Aroras, of their having been Rájputs, who escaped the fury of Parasurāma by stating that their caste was anr, or 'another.' The Aroras are often called Roras in the east of the Panjah; yet I can hardly believe that the frank and stalwart Ror is of the same origin as the Arora. The Amin men say that they came from Sambhal in Moradabad; but this may be only to connect themselves with their neighbours the Chauhan Rajputs, who certainly came from there. But almost all the Rors seem alike to point to Badli in the Jhajjar Tabail of Rohtak as their immediate place of origin, though some of them say they came from Rajputana. Their social status is identical with that of the Jats; and they practise karena, or 'widow marriage,' though only, they say, within the caste. Their divisions appear to be exceedingly numerous; some of them are Sagwal, Maiple, Khichi, and Jogran."

- 2. In Sahāranpur the Rors claim to have been created at Kaithal by Sri Krishna in the war of the Mahābhārata. Their marriage coremonies resemble those of Jāts and Gūjars; they permit widow marriage; and the levirate is practically compulsory. They cat mutton, fish, pork, and venison, and drink spirits. It is said that they will cat kackeki and pakki and drink and smoke with Jāts and Gūjars.
- From an account of the Rurs of Bijnor supplied by the District Officer, it appears that the tribal tradition of their origin is that when Râma Chandra severed his connection with Sîta, she was pregnant, and went into the jungle under the protection of the Rishi Vâlmîki. She bore a son there, who was named Lawa, and one day, when she was leaving the house, she put the child in charge of the Rishi. The child followed his mother, and the Rishi missing him, and supposing him to be dead, constructed another child out of a wisp of kasa grass. When Sîta returned and saw the other child, she asked what it all meant. The Rishi said, "roraphora" (apparently meaning 'this useless thing') "is also your son." Hence they were called Rora.

ROR. 244

- 4. They are supposed to have emigrated to Bijnor some four centuries ago from a place called Fatchpur Pundri in the Karnâl District. Half this village was owned by the Rors, and half by a colony of Sayyids. The Sayyids quarrelled with the Rors, who were forced to emigrate under their leader Mahi Chand. By another story they were originally Tomar Râjputs of Deihi, which they were forced to leave after the conquest of their tribe. By a third account, their emigration from Deihi took place in the time of Aurangzeb.
- 5. They marry and perform their other family ceremonies in the usual manner common to respectable Hindus. Widows can marry again, and the levirate, though permissible, is not compulsory on the widow. There is no regular form of divorce, but a wife detected in adultery is expelled from the tribs by the decree of the tribal council, and cannot subsequently on payment of a penalty be readmitted to caste rights.

6. Their chief occupation is agriculture, to which they add the making of hemp matting and twine (tds, sutli).

7. They eat mutton, goats' flesh, and fowls. They will not eat beef, monkeys, or vermin. They will not eat kackeki cooked by any caste but their own. They will smoke with Jats and Güjars, and eat pakki cooked by them or any superior caste.

Distribution of Rors according to the Census of 1891.

District	n.		Numbers.	Dr	Districts.
Dehra Důn		4	3	Ethwah	*			5
Saharanpur			3,320	Bijnor				614
Muzaffarnegar			475	Bonares				41
Mathura .		+	1		To	TAL	-	4,459

8

Sadgop, Satgop (also known as Chasa).—A cultivating caste of Bengal Proper, who are supposed to have separated themselves from the Guâlas by abandoning pastoral pursuits and taking exclusively to agriculture. Mr. Risley has given a full account of the tribe. Those found in these Provinces are only Bengal pilgrims.

Distribution of the Sadgops according to the Census of 1891.

Die	TRIC	ra.	Numbers.	Dis	Districts.
Sabāranpur			6	Allahábád				23
Mathura			144	Gorakper				2
Ethwah			3		1.9	TOTAL		177

Sådh-(Sanskrit sådån, "pure, saintlike"),-The word Sådh ordinarily means nothing more than a Hindu assetic or devotee; but it is applied in a special sense to a sect of Hindu Unitarians, which had its origin in the Panjab, but has now widely spread into these Provinces. In the Sambet year 1600 (1543 A.D.) Birbhan of Bijesar, near Narnaul, is said to have received a mysterious communication from Udho Das, who was a pupil of Rae Das, the founder of the Satnami sect, of which some account has been given in connec-To Bîrbhân was communicated the present tion with the Chamars. creed of the Sådhs. Udho Dås gave at the same time to Bîrbhan sundry marks by which he might know him at his re-appearance-First, that whatever he foretold should happen; second, that no shadow should be cast by his figure; third, that he would tell him the thoughts of his heart; fourth, that he would be suspended between heaven and earth; fifth, that he would bring the dead to life.

2. The Sâdhs of these Provinces are known by that name to outsiders, but they generally use the name Satnâmi among themselves. Adults are required to wear a white dress; and ornament and the use of rich apparel of every kind are prohibited. They never wear a cap, but use instead a turban of a peculiar shape. They are enjoined by their religion never to tell a lie and never to take an oath. They are in the same way prohibited from using any kind of intoxicant or any article which borders upon luxury, Wine, opium, ganja, bhang, betel and tobacco are abominations to them. They have an intense respect for animal life, which extends to even the smallest insect, and the use of any kind of animal food is strictly denounced. They will salute no one but the Divine principle, which they term Sat or "The Truth;" and when they meet a European or any superior they salute merely by raising the hands to the level of the breast. They detest idolatry and all outward forms of religious belief. They are very reticent about their beliefs, and it is only with the greatest difficulty that it has been possible to obtain a copy, which is probably incomplete, of the book of religious songs (bdmi) which embody the principles of their faith. All controversy or argument on religious matters with strangers to the sect is reprobated. Their religious books, known as pothi, are written in Bhasha, or ordinary Hindi, and are not the work of any single author, but contain a number of songs, many of which are taken from the writings of Nanak and Kabir. These books are read almost daily in their chapel or meeting-house, which is known as jumlaghar, or "house of assembly," or chanki, " station." The service takes place in the evening, when all members of the sect, male and female, attend. This is their only form of worship.

sâdh. 246

3. It has been held judicially that the ordinary Hindu law of succession applies to them. The principal seats of the sect in this part of India are Delhi, Regulations of the sect. Agra, Jaypur, and Farrukhabad. is a small colony of them in Mirzapur, who do not appear in the Census returns. They live by calico printing. They deny that there are any caste divisions among them. They are endogamous, and in arranging their marriages they pay no regard to wealth or station. To recognise any distinctions of rank is forbidden, and the only disqualification is the violation of the rules of the sect and the practising of any degrading or sinful occupation. They all eat and drink together, and any jealousy, hatred, or quarrels between the members are considered disgraceful. They appear to have no regular formula of exogamy; marriage with near relations is forbidden, and they will not marry in a family with which any previous connection by marriage is remembered. They all live together in the same mukalla, or "quarter," and are always ready to assist each other and provide for the poor, widows, and orphans of the scot. They are hard-working and industrious; it is considered disgraceful to be dependent for support on another; beggary is unknown among them.

247 sádu.

4. Children are betrothed in infancy, and marriage is solemnised at the age of twelve, fourteen, or sixteen. Marriage. No bride-price is given, but the bride usually receives a dowry. Polygamy is not approved and polyandry is unknown, and the very idea of such an institution is most abhorrent to them. As they all live close together, their betrothals are arranged privately among themselves. When the father of the youth contemplates his marriage with a certain girl, he sends a man or woman of his family as an envoy to the father of the girl. As they have no horoscopes there is none of the almost endless bother which accompanies the preliminaries of a betrothal among respectable Hindus, in order to ascertain if the match is unobjectionable from the astrologer's point of view. If the father of the girl agrees to the proposal of the marriage, he feeds the envoy with sweetments or makes him drink some milk, and gives him money. This settles the engagement (mangui pakki).

5. When the pair reach puberty the marriage day is fixed. The notice of the appointed date is sent by the father of the girl, and on receipt of the message the father of the youth calls a meeting of the members of the sect, to whom the approaching marriage is announced. The envoy is fed and is given a present of a turban and a sheet. During all this time the songs known as Mangal or "rejoicing," of which examples are given below, are sung. From that day begins the usual anointing (ubtanus) of the bride and bridegroom. Every day the members of the sect assemble at the meeting-room (chauki), and the Mangal is recited. On the wedding day the father of the bride gives a feast to the members of the sect at noon. In the evening the bridegroom, accompanied by his father and friends. goes to the house of the bride, where they are all seated on a white floor-cloth. Opposite them the pair are seated on two cushions. After sitting in this way for a short time, the garments of the bride and bridegroom are knotted together, and both of them move four times round the cushions, while some member of the sect reads the Mangal verses. This constitutes the whole of the marriage service. The binding portion of the service is the revolutions round the cushions of the bride and bridegroom. All then return to the house of the bridegroom, and the bride stays for a short time at the house of the bridegroom; she is then escorted home by her brother, and, when it is so arranged, she comes permanently to live with him; but there is no further ceremony like the Hindu gassa.

- 6. They divorce their wives only when they have committed some offence which renders them liable to excommunication from the sect. In this case all that is done is to announce the fact before a meeting of the members of the sect. They arrange most of their affairs before a council of the caste, and they very seldom have recourse to the Courts.
- 7. As already stated, the Sådhs are Unitarians and worship one God, the Author of the universe, under the name of Satya Guru or Satya Nâm.

 There is no material representation of Him of any kind. By meditation on Him, and the practice of virtue, they believe that they attain ultimately absorption into the Divinity. Their religion teaches them that they should give alms only in secret, and not to strive after riches or the hearding of wealth. The following are the rules of the faith:—
- (1) "Worship one God, Who is the Creator of all and has power to destroy. None is higher or leftler than He; and man should not in wantonness worship any stone, metal, wood or tree, or other created thing. Rather, all honour and renown are due to Him. He is the only God and His the only word. Whoever fixes his thoughts on anything near him, errs and sins; and whoever sins goes to Hell.
- (2) Preserve a modest and humble demeanour and fix not your heart on things of this world; and perfectly carry out the principles of your faith. Do not practise what is contrary to your faith, and this some Sådhus deny, saying that the order is—" First foed one's own people; feed no stranger."
- (3) Never speak falsely, and curse not the earth, the water, the trees, nor the beasts. Use your tongue only in praise of God, and never spoil any one of his land, wealth, or beasts. Steal not their goods; be not critical of them or their possessions; and be content with what you have. Think not upon what is evil; and cast not your eye upon what is shameless or unlawful, be it man or woman, dance or pastime.
 - (4) Think not on evil words, but employ yourselves in the praise and glory of God; and amuse not yourselves with stories, nor fables, nor singing, nor music, but only with hymns.

249 sâdh.

- (5) Do not greedily desire anything, whether wealth or beauty, and take not what belongs to another. God is the giver of all; and as you put your trust in Him, so you will receive.
- (6) When you are asked "Who are you?" say, "I am a Sâdh." Make no mention of caste, and enter not into controversy. Rely firmly on the strength of your religion; rest not your pride and hopes on man.
- (7) Wear white clothes; use not antimony, nor belladonna, nor henna. Wear not caste marks, either on the body or forehead. Put on no chaplet, nor Brähmanical thread, nor jewels.
- (8) Est vegetables, not flesh, nor certain kinds of fish. Est no betel. Snuff not up sweet perfumes, smoke not, and make no use of opium. Lift not up your hand and bow not your head before any idol or man.
- (9) Slay not; tyrannise over no one; give no evidence on oath; take nothing by force.
- (10) Let each man have one wife; and each wife have one husband. A married man should not eat the leavings of his wife; but a wife should eat what is saved from her husband's food, as is customary; and the wife should obey her husband.
- (11) Assume not the guise of faqirs and ask not for alms; take no presents; fear not magic; before you trust in anything, test it well. The assembly of good men is your place of pilgrimage. Recognise good people before they salute you.
- (12) The Sådh should observe no particular days. Pay no attention to the intercalary months, nor the mouths themselves. Do not look upon as your own the voice of any bird or beast. Seek only the word of God, and be content therewith."

Writing from Fatehgarh Mr. Steel says:—"In spite of the injunction to say, when asked who they are, 'I am Sådh', there was a marked tendency in the recent Census operations to put down the Sådhs as Hindus. Also the order to wear plain clothes is more honoured in the breach than the observance, the wealthy Sådhs of Farrukhåbåd being very gorgeous in their attire. A story is told (perhaps by their enemies), but denied by the Sådhs themselves, that in Nawâhi times their funeral ceremony consisted in tying the corpse in a standing position to a tree with its face to the wind and leaving it so. This used to take place north of the city of Farrukhâbâd. It is said that the practice was interdicted in consequence of the remonstrances of the English Officers at the Fatehgarh Cantonment. The whole story is probably a Brâhmanical invention."

8. Mariage songs of the Sadhs:—
Darshan de Guru! param sanehi!
Tum bina dukh pdwai mori dehin!
Nind na dwe, ann na bhawai!
Bar bar mohin birah satawai;
Ghar angana mohin kachhu na suhae;
Fujar bhai par birah na jae.
Nainan chhatai salhal dhara;
Nis din panth niharan tumhara,
Jaise miu marai bina nira,
Aise tun bina dukhat sharira.

"O most beloved preceptor! Let me see thee!

My frame aches without thee! I feel no desire for sleep or food!

Again and again, I grieve for separation from thee;

I feel no pleasure in my house or courtyard;

When the morn dawns the pain of separation does not leave me.

Floods of tears flow from mine eyes;

I consider thy doctrine night and day.

As a fish without water, so does my frame ache without thee,"

Dukhat tum bina; rotat dudré; pargat darehan díjiyé. Binti karda meré edwiya bali jdún, bilam na kljiyé! Bibid bibid kar bhaydún bydkul bina dekhen chit na rahai. Tapat judla uthat tan men, kathin dukh mero ko sahdi. Angun aprádhi dáya kljai angun kachku na bichdriyo. Patil panwan rakhu pati ab pol chhin na bicáriyo. Dáya kljo, dares díjo, ab ki badi ko chhoriyo. Bhar bhar nayanan nírkhi dekhon nij taneh na toriyo.

"My frame aches without thee! I am wailing at thy door! Now appear and let me see thee.

O my Lord! I pray thee make no delay!

I have become restless through weeping and wailing.

I cannot live without the sight of thee.

Flames rise within me and consume my frame. Who can' endure my pain? I am full of faults and sin; do thou have mercy upon me.

Take not my faults and failings into thy regard!

O thou that freest the soul from sin! maintain my honour!

Forget me not even for a moment, and have mercy upon me!

Show me thy form and forget my sins of the present!

Cast thine eyes full upon me, and sever not thy love from me!"

9. Death song of the Sådhs:—

Tujhé binána kiya pari tu opna niber?

Bájai tál bajant re wan báwaré! Sutari na chher?

Par haqq chháro baqq pichháro. Samajhwála pher.

Jhútha bási jagat ka, man báwaré! San shahd ki ter.

Káya to nagri sohal bhamari pánch jamen ter.

Guru gyán kharag san bhal lé, man báwaré!

Yam karai na ser.

Tera jśwana chhin pal ek, jag men phir na aisi ber.

Tera para jahás samndra men, man báwaré! phir sakai pher.

Sabhi musáfir ráh ké sab kharé kamar karé.

Lená had so líjiyé, man báwaré, bíti ját ober,

Kar sumaran Sát Guru chháro dund duhel.

Tijé bhám milain Sát nám sé, man báwaré! man báwaré, j syat ki na ser.

"What hast thou to do with others? Guard against the danger that awaits thee!

Why needest thou awake the sleeper ?

Abandon what is unreal. Recognise what is real,

This is only the perversion of the understanding.

O foolish mind! The things of this world are false; so saith the Voice of Truth.

The body is like a city; in it are five lions.

Gird on the sword of the knowledge of the Preceptor, and then, O foolish mind! thou needest not fear the Lord of Death!

Thou livest for a moment, yea for the twinkling of an eye.

Thou shalt never have such time at thy disposal.

Thy bark has sailed into the deep; O foolish mind | If thou canst steer it safe to the yorder shore:

All thy fellow-passenger stand ready with their loins girt.

Take what thou desirest to take, O foolish mind ! The time is fast passing away.

Leave the noise and tumult of the world. Repeat the True Name,

Then shalt thou gain the third virtue (God) through the True Name; and then, O foolish heart! thou shalt have no longer to endure the labour of this world!"

Distribution of the Sadha according to the Census of 1891.

	I	INTRI	C78.					Numbers.
Farvukbåbåd				,				1,866
Cawnpur .			*	*	3.	÷		4
							TOTAL	1,870

Sahariya. —A tribe, which is apparently of Dravidian origin, found in Lalitpur and some of the adjoining parts of Bundelkhand. They do not appear in the returns of the last Census, having apparently been included with the Sciri. The name of the tribe is usually derived from the Arabic sahara, "a wilderness," which is familiar as the name of the great desert of Northern Africa; but this, of course, is out of the question. It may perhaps be conjectured that the name is connected with that of the Savaras, the name in Sanskrit writers of the aggregate of the Kolarian or Dravidian tribes who dwelt in the highlands of Central India, and included races like the Kols, Mundas, Kurkus, Bhils, Bhuiyas, and their kinsfolk. Some account of them will be found in connection with the Soiris. Another name for these Sahariyas of Bundelkhand is Rāwat, which comes from the Sanskrit Rāja-dāta, "King's messenger," or Rāja-putra, "King's Sou."

2. The Sabariyas of Lelitpur are divided into a number of exogamous sections (gotra), such as the Sirausiya, Kodoriya, Thegotiya, Sanauliya, Rajauriya, Jachoriya, Kusmorwa, Sarosawa, Chakardiya, Chirauncha, Kurwariya, Bagauliya, Sanhauriya. Of the origin of these names the tribe can give no account. Further enquiry will probably show that some of them at least are of totemistic origin. These sections are, as has been already said, exogamous. But as is usual, the rule of exogamy is reinforced by the prohibition of intermarriage between at least first and second cousins. Of their origin and history they can give no account. In Lalitpur they profess to be indigenous to the district.

Principally hased on a note by Mr. H. C. Ferard, C. S.

3. When the bride is admitted into the family of her husband, she has to perform the rite of confarreatio, Marvingo rules. which is known among them as dudka bhati, or " the eating of boiled rice with milk." A man may marry as many wives as he pleases, but he cannot take a second wife in the lifetime of the first, unless she is barren or suffering from some serious disease. Concubinage, with the leave of the tribal council, is permitted. Unmarried girls are obliged to be chaste. If an unmarried girl is detected in an intrigue with a man of the tribe, she and her relations are put out of easte, until they feed the brethren ; she can then be married, usually to her paramour. As far as possible infant marriage is the rule, and a girl should not remain unmarried after the age of ten. There is no regular bride-price, but by tribal custom the father of the bridegroom pays eight rupees to defray the expenses of the marriage. If a married woman is found intriguing with an outsider, she is permanently expelled, and this, being done with the sanction of the tribal council, operates as an absolute divorce, and such a woman cannot be remarried or taken as a concubine by a member of the tribe, on pain of the man she lives with being also excommunicated. But if her paramour be a member of the tribe, the matter is brought before the council, and on giving the necessary dinner to the brethren, her husband can take her back, if he be so disposed; if he refuse, she is made over as a concubine to the man who seduced her. Children, the offspring of an adulterous connection with a stranger to the tribe, are not admitted to full caste rights, and, being considered as of a lower grade, find husbands and wives for themselves as best they can among persons of their own rank. Widow marriage and the levirate are allowed under the usual restrictions. If the deceased husband leave a brother who has no wife, and is of the suitable age, he generally takes over the widow of his brother; but under no circumstances can an elder brother take the widow of his younger brother. If a widow marry an outsider, she loses all right to the custody of her children and to a share in the goods of her late husband. The heirs of a man are his sons, and there is no trace of the fiction by which the children of the levir are attributed to his dead brother.

- 4. There is no ceremony during pregnancy. The mother is attended by a midwife of the Basor tribe, and on the tenth day the birth impurity is removed by the daswan rite, when the brethren are feasted; or, if the family is very poor, some beiled gram (ghngkuri) is distributed among them. There is no trace of the convade and no rule of adoption.
- 5. When the match has been arranged by the parents of the parties and their friends, the father of the boy, accompanied by a few of his brethren, goes to the house of the bride, and taking her in his lap puts a rupec and some sweetments in her hand. The party are then entertained, and next morning, as he is going away, the father of the girl gives a rupec to the father of the boy, which fixes the betrothal. On the wedding day, the bridegroom and his relatives go to the house of the bride, and a mark (cilat) is made on his forehead. Next day the pair walk five times round the shed in the presence of the brethren, and this concludes the marriage. No Brähman is employed, and the ceremony is carried out by an old man of the tribe or the brother-in-law of the bride.
 - 6. The dead are cremated, except those who are unmarried or those who die of some epidemic disease. The ashes are thrown into some neighbouring stream, and the mourners have their heads shaved. There is no rite of the nature of the Schidha, and no funeral priest is employed. The man who fires the pyre is impure for three days. A woman is impure for three days after her confinement. The impurity after the menstrual period is removed by bathing.
 - 7. They are chiefly worshippers of Bhawani, but they also reverence Râma and Krishna. They have no special ancestor worship, and do not employ Brahmans in any of their domestic rites, which are conducted by the sister's son or by some old man of the tribe. They propitiate demons and evil spirits with the sacrifice of a gout; sometimes the ear of the victim only is offered. When an animal is sacrificed, the worshippers consume the flesh themselves. They have also various local deities, such as Gour, Narasinha, Sânwar, Goraiya, Katiya, Tholiya, Somiya, and Ahay Pâl,—most of which appear to be deified worthies of the tribe. They swear standing in water or with a piece of hot iron in the right hand. They have the usual belief in the demoniacal theory of disease, witcheraft, and the Evil Eye.

8. They eat mutton, goats' flesh, and pork, and drink spirits.

Social rules.

Rám / Sitarám / Rádha Krishna / Their

mede of life is the collection of various kinds of jungle produce and cultivating on the edge of the forest. They are classed generally as a criminal tribe, but it has not been as yet found necessary to take any special coercive measures against them. The chief offences to which they seem to be addicted resemble those of the Sanaurhiyas—burglary, petty theft, and an occasional robbery or dakâiti.

Saîn, Sanîn, Sani.—(Sanskrit sydwika, svdwi, "lord, master")
—An order of Muhammadan ascetics. The term is very usually employed in a general sense to designate any religious Muhammadan mendicant. In the Panjāb, the Saîns or Gulābdāsis are a Sikh seet, who, according to Mr. Ibbetson, are chiefly interesting in the near approach of their doctrines to Epicurianism. They disbelieve in the existence of God, and venerate only living persons of their own persuasion. They are profligate both in profession and practice—esteeming wine, women, and personal enjoyment, and all that life offers which is worth having, and seeing no wrong in adultery and incest. These have, of course, no connection with the Muhammadan order of the same name in these Provinces.

Distribution of the Salas according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	BIOT	8-	Numbers.	Duri	11019	8.		Numbers.
Saharaopur	0-		525	PAnda				12
Muzaffarvag	ar		1	Hamirpur			÷	8
Farruk hábás			2	Jhānai	į.			8
Bijnor .			4,131	Ghāzipur			3	78
Pilibht			68	Gorakhpur				167
Fatehpur			20	Fasti .				92

Penjdb Ethnography, para. 208.

Distribution of the Stine according to the Census of 1891 -concid.

Dn	PERIO	.2.		Numbers.	Dia	PRI	CTS.		Numbers.
Tarai .	4.			7	Gonda			ě.	34
Locknow	4			34	Babrâich	+			116
Unão .				19	Bărabanki				204
Sitapur			٠	489			TOTAL
Kheri				645			TOTAL		6,655

Saini .- A gardening and cultivating tribe found only in the Meerut Division and Bijnor. As is shown by their sub-castes, they are very closely allied with the Mali, if not identical. From Jalandhar Mr. Purser writes 1: - "According to their own account the Sainis were originally Malis and lived principally in the Mathura District, When Mahmud of Ghazni invaded India, the ancestors of the Sainis came into these parts, and, finding the land suitable for cultivation, settled down here and went not back to their homes. The explanation of the name Saini is that they were such good agriculturists and did such wonders with the land that the natives called them the Rasaini tribe (from rasdi, "oleverness, skill"), and in course of time the first syllable was lost and the present name Saini left. They are admirable cultivators, and surpassed by none in industry and skill. They do more market gardening than the Jats, and perhaps even than the Arkins, but this is in addition to, and not in place of, ordinary farming. They have no bad qualities to distinguish them which call for special notice. The Sikhs among them pay much respect to the Granth Sahib, and in every village have a copy of it, which is read diligently in the audience of the people. Men of this tribe not soldom take service and especially in the cavalry." In Jalandhar. according to another account," they claim Rajput origin, and say they are connected with the Arâins, though the latter know nothing of the relationship. In Ambala they are described as an ill-conditioned set, first-rate cultivators, but refractory and intriguing. Another derivation of their name current in these Provinces is that it is taken from sana, which is the technical word for mixtug up the chopped millet fodder with chaff and water for farm cattle. In their customs and manners they are identical with the Måli.

¹ Soltisment Report, St.

^{2 1}bbotson, Panj4b Ethnography, 267.

In Sahāranpur many of them breed ducks for the markets in the adjoining hill stations.

Distribution of the Sainis according to the Consum of 1891.

Di	STRI	OTS.		Baheniya.	Bhigi- rathi.	Golf.	Phůl- máli.	Others.	TOTAL.
Dehra D	ûn		,					97	97
Saharanp	HEE	4		2,265	2,998	7,191		7,910	20,264
Muzaffar	uagu	er .		1,816	19,022	678	47	1,714	23,177
Мезгиф				221	4,265			3,022	7,508
Agm	÷			. int		111	200	1	1
Bijnor				7,184	37,663	120	100	3,366	48,349
Вепатея				F. Carre		257	Aug.	18	18
Tarki	•	.1	ú		2011			1	1
		TOTAL	W	11,486	63,848	7,895	47	16,149	99,425

Saiqalgar, Siqligar, Sikligar-(Arabic saiqui, "a polisher") -The caste of armourers and polishers of metals. known as Báriya (bdr, " the edge of a weapon", Sanskrit páli) or Sánwála, Sándhara (són, " a grindstone "), but these are especially cutlers and razor setters. In Mirzapur some call themselves Shaikh and others Pathan, and these do not intermarry. In Benares they say that they were originally Rajputs from Marwar. At Mirzapur they trace their origin to Partabgarh, and call themselves the descendants of Daud or David, probably in reference to the passage in the Quran which says (Surah XXI, 79-80): "We taught him (David) the arts of making coats of mail (for before his time plates of metal were used) for you among mankind in general, that they might defend you from your suffering in warring with your enemies." They follow the ordinary Musalman rules of exogamy, marriage, and inheritance. Widow marriage and the levirate are recognised, ¹ Shorring, Hindu Tribes and Castes, I, 317.

- 2. They pay special reference to the Pânchon Pîr, Shaikh Saddu, Kâli Bhawâni, and Ghāzi Miyān. To the Pânchon Pîr and Ghāzi Miyān the offerings consist of melous, mangoes, parched gram, pulse, cakes (bari), boiled rice, sugar, curds, and clarified butter. When cholera rages, they sacrifice a goat to Kâli Bhawâni. Shaikh Saddu is more specially venerated in Oudh. His visitations cause melancholy and hypochondria. He is worshipped by the distribution of sweets to the poor and the sacrifice of a black goat. He once found a magic lamp, the powers of which he abused, and was torn in pieces by the Jinn.¹ By the Saiqalgars he is worshipped with an offering of sweet cakes (gulgnla) and the sacrifice of a goat.

- 3. Since the disarming of the country the trade of the armourer and cottal and entler has become depressed. The ordinary Siqligar seen in towns is a trader of no worth, and his whole stock-in-trade is a circular whetstone (sdn) worked by a strap between two posts fixed in the ground. He sharpens a four-bladed knife, a pair of seissors or two razors for a pice (three pics). Their status is that of ordinary Muhammadans of the lower artizan class.

Distribution of the Saigalgars according to the Census of 1891.

	Dn	rnics	u.			Hindus.	Mulam- madans.	TOTAL,
Dehra Dun					,	45	her	45
Sabaranpur						13	819	324
Meerut				4		18	33	51
Bulandshahr							23	23
Aligarh							74	74
Mathura				÷		8	49	- 60
Agra .						49	43	92
FarrukhAbdd						8		8
Mainpuri						3	70	73

¹ For a full account of this worthy, see Mrs. Mir Hasan Ali's Observations on the Muhammadans of India, II, 324, sqq.

Distribution of the Suigalgars according to the Census of 1891-continued.

		Di	svalo	ru.				Rindpa.	Muham- madans.	TOTAL.
Ethwah				,				2	39	41
Etak .									7	7
Bareilly								2	18	20
Budāan								23	9	32
Moradabad						+			17	17
Shāhjahāup	ur							88	113	200
Piliblift				r	,			23	11	34
Campur								53	14	67
Fatchpur				10	i in	4	d		4	4
Hamirpuv			4	100	9,11	7	40		12	-12
Listaball		1		4	400				65	66
Jhansi					10			1		1
Jalaan .		10	100						53.	53
Lalitpur				De.	P	1	3		1	1
Jaunpar					-	Ξ,			108	103
Ghlaigar								in	73	72
Gomkhpur								-60	805	305
Basti .									107	107
Azamgarh								. see	234	234
ľarši .								148		148
Lucknow							- 5	88	7	93
Unio .			*					1	311	1
Rāš Bareli									89	80
Sitapar								12	230	242
Hardoi								1	116	117
Kheri .								66	181	247
Paizabld									130	130

Distribution of the Saigalgars according to the Census of 1891-concluded.

	Di	state	TB.			Hindus.	Muham- madans.	Tovat.
Gonda .							265	265
Bahraioh			4			54	260	314
Sultänpur				4			190	190
Partabgarh						1	85	86
Bå-abanki							113	113
				To	TAL	704	3,446	4,150

Sâkadwîpi, Sâkaldwîpi.-A tribe of Brâhmans who take their name from the land of Säkadwipa, which has been identified with the Kâbul Valley which was occupied by the Sâkas in the first century before Christ. In the Mahabharata the Sakas are associated with the other Dasyu races of the North-Western Frontier, and we are told that Saineya, the charioteer of Krishna, "made the beautiful earth a mass of mud with the fiesh and blood of thousands of Kambojas, Sakas, Savaras, Kiratas, Varvaras, destroying thy host;" and the same record affirms their connection with the Aryas in the verses :- "These tribes of Kehatriyas, vig., Sākas, Yavanas, Kambojas, and Drāviras have become Vrishalas from seeing no Brahmans," How it came to pass that these Kahakriyas lost their Aryan status is thus related:- "Satyavrata was degraded to the condition of a Chandâla, or outcast, and called Trisanku on account of three sins (fri sanku), -of killing a cow, displeasing his father, and eating flesh not properly consecrated. But on his repentance and feeding the family of Visvamitra during a twelve years' drought, he was transported to Heaven. His descendant Bahu was vanquished by the tribes of Haihayas and Talajhangas and died in exile. To bim a posthumous son, named Sagara, was born, who nearly exterminated the Haihayas and would have also destroyed the Sakas had they not applied to their family priest Vasishtha for protection. The priest desired Silgara to refrain from the slaughter of those who were as good as dead; for he had compelled the tribes to abandon the duties of their caste and all association with the twice born, and Sagara thereupon imposed upon them peculiar distinguishing marks. He made the Yavanas shave their heads completely, the Sakas to shave the upper half of their heads, the Paradas to wear their hair long, and the Pahlavas to let their beards grow. He deprived them of all religions rites, and thus, abandoned by Brahmans, they became Micclichhas.1" This notable instance of early ethnography shows that the writers of the early Paurinik periods believed that these Scythian races, some of whom like the Chinese shave the fronts of their heads, were of common origin with themselves. "They, at the same time," as Dr. Muir notes,2 "erroneously imagined that these tribes had fallen away from Brahmanical institutions; thus assigning to their own polity an antiquity to which it could in reality have no claim." What real connection there may be between these Indo-Scythian Sakas and the Sakadwipi Brithmans it is now impossible to ascertain.

2. The legend of their origin is thus told by themselves; Sûmj Narayan, the Sun god, married the Tribel legond. daughter of Visvakarms, the craftsman of the gods. When she was incommoded by the heat of her spouse, she went and complained to her father; but he said that he could not interfere unless Sûraj Nûrâyan himself asked him to come with her to Visvamitra. When he arrived, Visvakarma told him that the only way by which his beat could be diminished was by cutting him into twelve pieces. Sûraj Nârâyan agreed to have this operation performed, and thus came to existence the twelve units (kula). As Visvakarma was cutting the Sun's body with his file, eighteen fragments fell in Såkadwipa and from these sprang the eighteen divisions of Sákadwîpi Brâhmans. It may be noted in passing that Sun worship prevailed largely among the Indo-Scythian tribes. The story goes on to say that Sri Krishna, by the advice of the Sun, summoned these Brahmans from Sakadwipa to cure his son Samba, who had been stricken with leprosy. They came flying through the air on the back of Garuda and effected the cure, for which they would take no remuneration. Again they started on the back of Garuda for Gaya, where the Raja Suloma was afflicted with the same disease. Him they also cured, and the Rani was so pleased that she secretly made to some of them a gift (dana) of five villages, the names of which she wrote on betel leaves, and made the Brâhmans chew. Seeing them degraded by thus accepting a reward for their services, Garuda refused to take them back again, so they were obliged to settle at Gaya. But four of them were so conscious of the disgrace which resulted from the treachery of the Râni, that they retired to the holy land of Badarinath (Badari ka darama), and there died in the Himalayan snow. The four who thus lost their lives were Suratkrita, Sutaya, Sudhrama, and Sumati. The remaining fourteen founded the existing gotras of the Sâkadwipis—Mihransu, Vasu, Parasara, Kaudinya, Kasyapa, Garga, Bhrigu, Bhabhyamati, Sûryadatta, Nala, Arkadatta, and Kausila. They have in these Provinces at least no division by local areas (dik) and their system of exogamy depends altogether on the gotras.

Professor Wilson's Works, VIII, 294.

³ Ancient Sanakrit Teals, 1, 488.

- 3. Their titles are Misra, Påthak, and Pânrê. In Bengal, according to Mr. Risley their tribal organization is different: "It is a curious fact that although the Sakadwipi have the standard eponymous getras of the Brahman caste, their marriages are regulated not by these, but by minety-five divisions (gur) of the local or territorial type, that is to say, a Såkadwîpi man may marry a woman of his own gotra who in theory is descended from the same mythical ancestor or Rishi as himself, but may not marry a woman whose forefathers are shown by the name of her par to have come from the same village or the same tract of country as his own. To abandon the getra altogether, and to substitute for it exogamous divisions based on a wholly different order of facts, involves so serious a departure from orthodox usage that one is inclined to doubt whether the Sakadwipi can never have been organised on the orthodox lines. This doubt is berne out by the statement made by Mr. Sherring that the test applied to a stranger pretending to be a Sakadwipi is to offer him what iscalled jhatha pani, or water from a vessel from which another person has drunk,-a custom prohibited by all strict sects of Hindus. Should the stranger not be a Sakadwipi, he will refuse the water, probably with some indignation, as by drinking it, his easte, whatever it was, would be broken. If a Sakadwipi, however, he will take it willingly."
- 4. Whatever may be the case in Bengal, there seems little doubt that in these Provinces the Sákadwîpi follow the ordinary Brâhman formula of gotra exogamy; and it is perhaps possible that the rule which, according to Mr. Risley, provails in Bihår, represents a falling off from the strictor rules of the Western Branch of the tribe. In these Provinces the Såkadwîpi act as family priests and astrologers and seem to have a preference for the Tantrika rites.

Distribution of Sakadwipi Brahmans according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	LICTO			Numbers.	Dist	mic	TS-		Numbers
Sahåranpur				7	Gomkhpur	,			12,272
Meerut .				11	Bosti .				6,786
Bulandshahr	+			1	Azamgash				2,097
Mathora				2	Tarki .			÷	1
Farrukhabad			(j)	8	Lucknow.				121
Mainpuri .	4	14		179	Ras Bareli				471
Barellly .	+	N	٦,	8	Situpur .				1,313
Moradabad		V		15	Hardei .				5
Phibhit .			4	4	Kheri .	۲.			495
Cawnpur .				24	Paizābād			ý	4,545
Banda .				22	Gonda .		10	A	8,263
Bonares .				1,773	Bahrtich	÷			14,626
Mirzapur .			į,	657	Sultanpur				1,554
Janupur .				47	Bacabanki				7,121
GhAsipur .				1,938
Ballia .				9,381			TOTAL		67,186

Sakarwâr.—A sept of Râjputs who take their name from some place named Sikri. This, by one account, is Fatehpur Sikri, where Akbar built his famous palace near Agra. "In Unâo they are the t Filliott, Chronicles, 48, 29.

least considerable of all the clans who figure in these chronicles, and their weakness has had the common effect of destroying their ancestral pride and effacing the memory of their old traditions. None of them can give a clear account of where they came from, or what their history has been. But there seems reason to believe that they are a portion of the same Sakarwārs, who, emigrating into Oudh from the West, settled in the Faizāhād District, near Dostpur. These latter are certainly earlier colonists than the Bachgoti and Rājkumār Rājas, who have now nearly succeeded in reducing them to servitude, and whose immigration was contemporaneous with that of the Chauhāns of Chauhāna. The latter probably colonised their present position in 1350 A. D., and belong to the first class of coloniets; and, consequently, if the above line of reasoning be correct, the Sakarwārs, who are earlier than them, belong to the first class also."

- 2. They appear to have held North Gorakhpur 1 before the Sirnots. They are the strongest Hindu landowners in Ghazipur,2 except the Kinwar Bhamhars. They claim to have been originally Misr Brahmans from Fatehpur Sikri. They have split into a Rajput and Bhuithar branch, and some are Muhammadans. In Azamgarha the Rajputs ignore the Bhûinhar branch; but the latter assert that they are of the same stock, which is generally believed, They call themselves Gadiya, and derive the name from an ancestor named Gad, or one who was afflicted with ringworm (gdd). Another story is that he was a Raja Gadh, who was the founder of Ghāzipur and the ancestor of the Sakarwar as well as the Kausik sept. In the Azamgarh story he lived at Silnigarh, near Lahore, which was the home of the sept. Another branch moved into the hills and are known as Parbetiya. They settled in Pargana Nizamabad after expelling the Suiris. The Muhammadan branch in Sultânpur trace their origin to one Pôran Mal, who is said to have been converted to Islâm in the time of Tamerlane, or more probably of one of his successors.
- It is reported that the Sakarwârs give and take brides to and from the Bhadauriya, Dhâkra, Gahlot, Kachhwâha, Panwâr, and Parihâr septs.

Buchanan, Eastern India, II, 458.

³ Oldham, Menso., I, 64.

⁴ Settlement Report, 30, 57.

265

Distribution of the Sakarmar Rajputs according to the Census of 1891.

		Dist	SICTS.				Hindas.	Muham- madans,	TOTAL-
Bulandahah	r					4	81	17	48
Mathura		+					228	34	262
Agra .							10,001	13	10,014
Farenkhâb@	a						276		276
Mainpuri					40		364	8	387
Ethwah						9	340	-	340
Etah ,							405	8	408
Budann	i.						349	100	340
Morādābād					1		806		506
Shahjahanp	ur	+		3.0	1	W	35		35
Campur	٠	10	1	43	140	12	46	10	56
Patchpur			100				112		112
Banda.		4			4	H	56	//	56
Allahábád					2	8.	67	1	58
Jhansi	٠						24	491	24
Jalaun							112	8	115
Benares	·						485	19	498
Mirzapar		÷	4				5		6
Jaunpur	٠		1				121	116	237
Ghazipuz							5,616	6,101	11,717
Ballia			4				1,776	31	1,807
Gorakhpur							2,702	141	2,848
Basti .							585	103	688
Aramgazh							2,179	284	2,463
Lunknow							90	9	96
Unão .						•	222		229
Råå Bareli						+	444	100	444

Distribution of the Sakarudr Rajputs according to the Census of 1891—concluded.

		Distr	1078.			Hindus.	Muham- madans.	TOTAL,
Sinsper						341	11	352
Hardoi	٠					2,445		2,448
Kheri		16.				128	11	139
Faizdbåd						618	1,473	2,091
Babrhish			+			16	240	16
Sultamper						807	1,104	2,091
Partabgarh					0	234	23	257
Bårebanki			•			18		18
				THTAL	12	81,887	9,594	41,481

Saknyani, Shaknyani.—A class of Hill Brahmans. Common report makes them the progenitors of both Sarolas and Gangaris, and the name is said to be derived from the great Saka race. Others connect the name with a colony of ascetics who lived near Tapuban and Rikhikes; others again assign the name to a great grove of sakis trees, whose bluish flowers are used in worship, and which gave the name of Sakinyani to the parent village and Saknyani to the people. Those who remained on the banks of the Ganges became known as Gangaris. They intermarry with Ghildyals, Unyals, Ingwals, Dadais, and Naithana and Bughana Brahmans.

Sanadh.—A tribe of Brahmans most numerous in the Central and Lower Ganges-Jumna Duab and Rohilkhand. Sir H. M. Elliot lays down the boundaries of the Sanadh country as follows: "—" They touch the Kanaujiyas on the North-West, extending over Central Rohilkhand, and part of the Upper and Central Duab, from Pilibhit to Gwalior. The boundary line runs from the north-west angle of Rampur, through Richa, Jahanabad, Nawabganj, Bareilly, Faridpur, to the Ramganga; thence through Salimpur and the borders of Mehrabad; thence down the Ganges to the borders of Kansuj; thence up the Kalinadi to the western border of Alipur, Patto, through Bhonganw, Sij, Bibamau, and down the Jumna to the junction of the Chambal. Instances, of course, occur of occupation by either party on the other line, but they are very rare. On the North-West the Sanadh are met by the Gaur Brahmans, whose boundary line is also sufficiently definite to admit of description. It runs through the Rampur territory as far as the Ramganga, thence through Sarauli, Scondara, Narauli, Bahjoi, Rajpura, Dabhai, and the western border of Koil, Chandausi, Noh-Jhil, and Kosi."

¹ Atkinson, Himalayan Gasetter, III, 271.

¹ Supplemental Glossary, S. V. Kanaujiya.

2. There is much doubt as to the origin of the name. According to one authority 1 it is derived from sana, "austerity," and adhya, "wealth," a conjunction which applied to a Brahman would imply "one possessed of the wealth of religious austerities." According to others, sana-adhya means "absorbed in asceticism." Mr. Nesfield, without much apparent reason, would connect the name with that of the criminal Bundelkhandi tribe known as Sanaurhiya, They claim to be a sub-branch of the Kanaujiya, and the tribal legend as given by themselves tells how Rama, on his return from Lanka, assembled a large number of Brâhmans at the great Rudâyan tank, near Shâhpur Tahla, in Pargana Azamgarh of the Etah District, to perform a sandka yaga, or sacrifice. At the conclusion of the ceremony, he distributed among them grants of land and money, and hence the name Sanadh, either from the ceremony in which they participated, or from the Sanskrit root sana, " to obtain as a gratuity." There is a curious resemblance between this story and the account given of themselves by the Tagas of Meerut and the Nagars of Bulandshahr. Most of the Sanadhs of Etah represent themselves as the descendants of the Brahmans of Rama's days; a few belonging to the Dandotiya at say that they came from the Gwalior territory, where the Emperor Akbar had given them a group of eighty-four villages (cheurded) on the banks of the Chambal. These villages, known as the Dandtoghar Chaurisi, are said to be in the possession of the Sanidhs to the present day. The Bhateli Brahmans of Etah are an offshoot of the Sanadhs. In Etawah Sanadh Brahmans of the Singhiya and Merka gotras, the former with the title Chaubé, are found in Pargana Auraiya. They trace their origin to one Vasudeva or Basdeo, and are said to have been among the earliest immigrants. According to their family traditions, Bâsdeo came and settled at Sahahda or Sabhad under the protection of the Sengar Rajputs, and then one of them went to Delhi as late as the reign of Shahab-ud-din Ghori and obtained some service. In the reign of Akbar they obtained a grant of land near Auraiya, and assumed the title of Chaudhari, or were appointed to the office. Some of the family have since borne the title, and in the neighbourhood of Auraiya they still retain many villages. The Singiyas derive their name from Singiya, a tract near Delhi, from which they came into the Etawah District. They say that Garga Acharya, the spiritual preceptor of Krishna, belonged to their family. The Merhas profess to have been the family priests of the Bharch Rajas. Besides these, two other important gotres of the Sanadhs are settled in Etawah. In the fourteenth century, when Ala-ud-din captured Rinthambor, Hari Pant, a famous Pandit, came to Etawah, accompanied by Ugra Sen of the Mathuriya gotra of the Sanadhs; similarly the Svarna gotra are said to have come with Sumer Sah.1

Bliga Lackhumn Sink, Dulandshahr Memo., 153.

3. The Sanadhyas are not purely endogamous. It would appear that wherever their habitat, as shown above, joins that of the other tribes, intermarriage is not infrequent. Thus in Farrukhabad, where they meet the Kanaujiyas, both intermarry. In the same way in the Bulandshahr District they intermarry with the Gaur. But here, for some time, and perhaps in some cases even now, a sort of hypergamy prevailed, that is to say, the Gaur and Kanaujiya married Sanadh girls, but did not give their own daughters to a Sanadh in marriage-This distinction is, it appears, being obliterated by degrees.

4. One division among the Sanadh Brahmans is into the "three-and-a-half houses" (drle*-tia ghar*) and the 'ten houses' (das ghar*). The former are considered superior, and a system of hypergamy prevails among them by which "the three-and-a-half bouses," for a money consideration, take brides from the "ten houses," and do not give them girls in exchange. The result of this is that the former find no difficulty in marrying even at an advanced age.

5. The Robilkhand legend tells that Adisur was Raja of the Pargana of Kot Satasi in the Budaun District. He had four famous 269 SANÂDH.

Pandits in his Court. To the four sons of the chief Pandit, known as Misraji, he gave four villages for their support, vis., Saraha, Rahariya, Tarapur, and Bhatta. These originated four sections, the Misras of Saraha, Rahariya, and Tarapur, and the Pathaks of Bhatta. These four, being descended from the same ancestor, exonot intermarry. The second Pandit was named Saukhadhāra. He had also four sons, and to them the Raja gave four villages : Auni, Dhamai, Remai, and Parsara. Hence arose four sections, the members of which being of the same stock cannot intermarry : Anni kê Sankhdhâr, Dhamai kê Sankhdhâr, Reunai kê Sankhdhâr, and Parsam kê Sankhdhar. The village of Anni is close to Budann, and is still in the possession of these Brahmans. The descendants of the third Pandit are called after him Parisan, and from the villages held by his descendants spring four sections, vis., Para, Chandawali, Pipara, and Ubra. The section taking its name from Ubra is known as Trigorayat, because their ancestor had mastered the three Vedas. The others are known as Parasari. These four, being of the same stock, cannot intermarry. The fourth Pandit had only two sons to whom the Raja gave two villages : Dungarpur and Kataiya. These are known as the Misras of these two places. The fourteen families thus enumerated constitute the "three-and-a-half houses,"

- 6. There is also some connection between the Sanadh and the Kataha or Mahabrahman. The story runs that this same Raja Adisur was once going on a pilgrimage, when he became seriously ill. The Raja of Nagadesa, where he was at the time, sent him a skilful physician, who restored Adisur to health. His patient was so pleased that he gave him the name of Kashtaha, or "remover of trouble," of which Kataha is without much probability said to be a corruption. It is alleged that Raja Adisur compelled the "three-and-a-half houses" to intermarry with these Katahas, an assertion which clearly marks some fall in status of which the real explanation has been forgotten.
- 7. The domestic rites of the Sanadhs are of the normal type. At marriage they have a ceremony which seems to be peculiar to them called nitosuts. The bridegroom is made to sit behind the bride, and behind him the cluest man of the family and the other relations sit in a line. The harber's wife moves a milk churner (ras) and a bundle of thread over the heads of all the men and women present. Then one or more vessels of sweetmeats are shown to the bride and she is asked if they are full or empty. If she says that they are full, it is a good omen; if she says that they are empty, the marriage will not be prosperous. After this potter's wheel is worshipped. Some make an image of it on the wall of the house, others go to the potter's house and worship his wheel there.

- The Sanadh Brähmans have, on the whole, a doubtful reputation, and are not much respected among the other Brähmanical tribes. Many, in addition to some priestly functions, hold land and cultivate, but they will not hold the plough themselves.
- 9. The Sanaurhiya, a thieving tribe of Bundelkhand, claim kindred with the Sanadh Brähmans. According to one story they were excommunicated, because they attended the rite (jag) held by Râmchandra when he was defiled by the blood of the Brähman Râvana. Others say that they were degraded, because they did not attend the sacrifice performed by Brahma at Brahmavartta or Bithûr.

Distribution of Sanadh Brahmans according to the Census of 1891,

Dist	BIC	78.	٥,	Numbers.	Dist	DICT	F		Numbers.
Dohra Dún			۹.	148	BudAun	4	,		41,817
Sabāranpur				222	Moradabad				8,032
Muzaffarnagr	18			329	Shahjahan	nr			14,840
Meerat .				1,051	Pilibhit			6	10,027
Bulandshahr				8.477	Cawnpar				759
Aligarh .				76,209	Fatebpur				381
Mathura				63,345	Bànda	÷			1,311
Agra .				106,881	Hamfrpur				4,371
Farrukhábád			,	6,087	Allababad				1,070
Mainpuri			,	42,691	Jhansi			×	B,606
Etawah .				36,659	Jalaun				15,155
Etah .				44,070	Lalitpur				9,498
Bareilly				81,630	Bensres				469
Bijnor				382	Mirzapur				704

Distribution of Sondah Brahmans according to the Census of 1891-concluded.

Dist	RIGH	в.		Numbers.	Disc	aici	8.		Numbers.
Jaunpur				411	Sitapur				1,056
Gházipur		*		149	Hardel				908
Ballia .			+	60	Kheri				1,844
Gorakhpur		4		2,110	Fairábád				610
Bosti .			4	1,429	Gonda.				2,320
Azamgarh				474	Bahrdioh		÷		1,306
Kumann	+			9	SultAnpur				1,532
Tarbi .			,	634	Partabgarb				899
Lucknow	÷			548	Bàrabanki				2,867
Unão .				113	1000		52
Rão Bareli		1	10	814	1127	To	TAL	•	548.261

Sanaurhiya, Sanorhiya.—A so-called caste of criminals in Bundelkhand. They seem to have escaped separate enumeration at the last Census by recording themselves as a tribe of Brahmans, and, in fact, they claim to be akin to the Sanadh Brahmans of the Ganges-Jumna Duab.¹ Attention was first distinctly called to their criminal propensities in 1851, when they were called Uthaigiras or Sanorhiyas, and were estimated to number 4,000 in Tehri State, 300 in Banpur, and 300 in Datiya. The Rajas of Tehri and Banpur gave them protection, receiving presents in return, and frankly admitted this when addressed by the Political Agent.

2. The Sanaurhiyas are not a caste but a confraternity recruited by the initiation of promising boys from all castes except sweepers and Chamars. A census taken of them in 1882 showed that they then included Brähmans, Lochaus, Telis, Thäkurs, Kanjars, Ahirs, Dhimars, Sunārs, Kurmis, Lochaus, Nāis, and Dhobis. One account of their origin is that they are Sanādh Brāhmans who were excommunicated, because they attended the feast given by Rām Chandra when he was defiled with the blood of Rāvana. Another story is that they were degraded for not attending the sacrifice performed by Brâhma at Brahmavartta or Bithur. A third account is that they came from Delhi about two centuries ago. It is quite obvious that they have no claim to rank as Brahmans. They possess a slang vocabulary of their own, confine themselves to thefts by day, and are said entirely to abstain from nocturnal theft, house-breaking, and crimes of violence: so much so that members of the confraternity offending in this way are excommunicated. They never steal near home and begin their depredations at least a hundred miles away. But they visit all parts of India, including Calcutta, Bombay, and They assume the disguise of respectable merchants and Madras. travellers, and their favourite method of shop-lifting is by the agency of a boy, whilst one or two of the gang as customers engage the shop-keeper in conversation and lead him to display his goods. A gang will be absent on an expedition sometimes for a year at a time. The fascination of their profession is so great that they say "Once a Sanaurhiya, slways a Sanaurhiya." In various distant cities one or more Sanaurhiyas used to reside, apparently carrying on an honest business, but really acting as receivers of stolen goods. The Criminal Tribes Act was extended to them in 1874, and Mr. Robert's note contains full details of the supervision exercised over them since" that time. The result, as in so many cases, has been far from satisfactory.

¹⁸⁴⁰ Mr. D. T. Robett's note in connection withithe Police Commission of 1890.

Sanjogi — (Sanskrit samyogi, "joined").—Classed at the last Census as an order of Hindu ascetics. The word, or its equivalent Grikasti, "householder," appears to be equally applied to those who have so far abandoned the practices of the ascetic orders as to marry and lead a family life.

Distribution of the Sanjogia according to the Census of 1891.

Numbers.		rs.	TEICI	Div	Numbers.		Districts.
1				Patebpur	31			hr.	ishal	ulano
23	ΠÁ	4	÷	Bánda .	758					gra
68		4)		Hamlepur	6	+	v	4		tah
1				Allababad	12	-			n	udAu
142				Jhānai	4				ar	dumi

SANJOGI.

Distribution of the Sanjogie according to the Census of 1891-concluded.

Dist	PRIOR	s.	Numbers.	Di	Numbers.
Jálann			178	Pasti				741
Lalitpur			136	Hardei				67
Ghāzipar			539	Gonda		+		36
Ballia	+		832
Gornlehpur			960		To	TAL		4,538

Sannyasi __ (Sanskrit sannydsi, "abandonment of the world,") __ a term which is often used in very vague and uncertain senses.-It properly means the ascetic stage of life through which every Brahman should pass. But the term is specially applied to the followers "The Saivas," writes of the famous reformer Shankar Acharya. Mr. Maclagan,1 "have generally been defenders of the faith against innovation. The final struggles against Buddhism in the south and centre of the peninsula gave rise to one sect of Saivas, known henceforth as Sannyasis, and the contest against the innovating Bhagats of Northern India in the fifteenth century gave rise to another sect Some account from local sources of now known as the Jogis." Shankar Acharya and his disciples has been already given under the head of the Gusains. Mr. Macisgan's account from the Panjab tradition is somewhat different and may be given here : "Shankar Achârya, the well-known Sanskrit commentator, a very vigorous defender of orthodoxy, is supposed to have lived in the ninth or tenth, or, according to Professor Monier Williams, in the eighth contury, and to have helped in the final extinction of Buddhism in India. Shankar Acharya is said to have had four pupils, from whom are derived the ten classes of Sannyasis, -from Padman Acharya, the Tiratha and Asrama classes; from Sarupa Acharya, the Bana and Arana; from Tarnaka or Tank Acharya, the Givi, Sagara, and Parvata; and from Prithodar or Prithivi Acharya, the Puri, Bharthi, and Såraswati. According to others the order is divided into four Maths, - the Joshi Math containing the Giri, Puri, and Bharthi; the Sangri Math containing the Bana, Arana, and Tîratba; the Nararâgini Math containing the Parvata and Asrama; the Brahmachāri Math containing the Sāraswati and Dandi. The fact that there are ten groups of Sannyāsis is well known, but different versions are given of the names. Of eight lists which I have before me from different parts of the Province the Giri, Puri, Arana, and Bhārthi appear in all, but one or other of the following names, Astāwar, Jati, Bodla, Dandi, Anandi, Datta, Achārya, Kar, Nirambhē, or Pari is often substituted for one or other of the remaining six class-names. According to some account only eight of the classes are really Sannyāsi, the Bhārthi being Jogis, and the Dandi, Vaishnavas. Three classes only—the Nirambh, Asrama, and Sāraswati—are allowed to wear or use arms. Five of the sub-divisions are said to be recruited from Brāhmans alone, vie., the Sāraswati, Achārya, Arana, Bana, and Ananda; the other five being open to the public.

- 2. "A man of any caste may become a Sannyasi, but in practice the order is made up of Brilhmans and Khatris mainly; and, according to some, the true Samyasi will partake of food only in the house of a Brahman and a Khatri. The members of the sect are supposed to be strict collibates, but of late not a few of them have taken to marriage, and still continue to beg though married. They are, as a rule, of a higher class toan the Jogis, and their morality is of a higher order, but scandals about their enticing away the wives of rich Hindus are said to be not infrequent, though generally hushed up. The whole order is in theory devoted to contemplation and abstracted from the cares of this world, and a large number of Sannyasis are actually religious mendicants without wives and without money, who wear othre-coloured clothes and distribute quack medicines, who refuse to touch a coin or to take in alms more food than will suffice for the day; but there are also many who work in business and are men of great wealth.
- 3. "In fact the order is sometimes divided into three groups called after the three philosophical qualities (gunu): the Rajoguni, who are the principals of religious houses (akhdra) and live in the world; the Tamoguni, who are ascetics who live on charity, begging for the wants of the day; and the Satoguni, who do not even beg but trust to support from Heaven and their neighbour.
- 4. "The Sannyäsis are professedly followers of the Vedânta system of philosophy which was promulgated by their leader Shankar Achârya, and the books based in that philosophy are held specially sacred by them. They are, as has already been noticed, a sect not indigenous in the Panjāb, and their chief places of pilgrimage, Benares, Amarnāth, Narsinhnāth, etc.—are outside the Province.

They are especially remarkable for some customs which are foreign to the Hindus of this and most parts of India. In the first place, they do not generally wear the scalp-lock (chois), but either wear all their bair or shave it all. Further, the true Sannyāsi does not, it is said, wear the sacred thread (janea). And, again, their usual custom is not to burn their dead, but to bury them or throw them into rivers. When buried, the dead are placed in a sitting posture facing East or North-East, and the hands and arms are rested on erutch."

- 5. In these Provinces the rite of initiation takes, according to one account, three days. On the first day, his body is purified with milk, ghi, cow-dung, cow-urine, and curds, and all his hair, except the scalp-lock is shaved off. On the third day, the home and ord daha are performed and his scalp-lock and Brithmanical cord are removed. Then the mantros of the order are recited into his car by the Guru, and he receives a dand or bamboo stick with a piece of red cloth tied to one end of it. Then he is known as Dandi. Only Brithmans can become proper Sannyssis. There is no condition of age. Most become members of the order on account of trouble, as the verse runs —Nari mai, ghar sampatti vaci; Mand mardi, bhad Sannyasi." When a man's wife dies and he loses his home and property, he shaves his head and becomes a Sannyasi."
 - 6. The sectarial mark is the tripund: three horizontal lines drawn on the forehead. Their dress is the kopin or small loin cloth with a broader piece of cloth rolled round the hips. They carry a water-pot known as kamandal and a resary of the rudrakaka berry. They get their food either at alms-houses (kohetra) or from charitable Hindus. When they ask for alms they say Nardyan, "Great The respectable title for them is Swāmi, "Lord." proper Sannyasi ought to eat a meal of only milk, fruits or vegetables once a day, and they are particular in abstaining from meat and other substances, such as garlic (lahsas), which are supposed to excite passion. They do not cook for themselves. They prefer to eat food cocked by a Brahman or Kshatriya; but if such a person is not present, they can cat from the hand of a Vaisya or Sadra. Their cooking vessels are of the usual Hindu pattern, and they are careful not to use the vessels belonging to a member of another religion, They do not enter Jaina temples, but visit all the ordinary Hindu shrines. But they practise no form of idol worship, as they themselves have attained the rank of deities. They salute each other in the words Namo Náráyan. They salute their religious guides and other eminent Sannyāsis by falling before them. They chiefly worship Nārāyana, but until they obtain the rank of complete saintship, they also revere Ganesa, Rudra, Bhāgawati, and Sūraj Nārāyan, the Sun godling.

Vot. IV.

7. Nizām-ud-dîn Ahmad in the Tabakāt-i-Akbari describes a terrible fight between a body of Jogis and Sannyāsis at Thānesar in the presence of the Emperor Akbar, when the Jogis were defeated.¹ General Goddard, in his march through Bundelkhand, was attacked by a body of two thousand Sannyāsis called Saiva Nāgas.²

Distribution of the Sanny drie according to the Census of 1891.

Distri	101		3	Numbers.	Dav	TRIOL	18,	Numbers
Delara Dún		16	C.	37	Pilibhit		1	34
Sahdraupur			3	137	Campar		1.	8
Muzaffarnaga	•	1	3	101	Fatehpur	1		5
Meerut				43	Bánda			23
Bulandshahr				119	Hamirpur			40
Agra				35	Allabábád			19
Farrukhábád				11	Jhānsi			142
Mainpuri				3	Jalana			17
Etāwah				7	Lalitpur		4	84
Etab				25	Ghazipur		,	113
Bareilly				82	Ballia			651
Bijnov			,	80	Gorakhpur			1,069
Budan				14	Basti		*	3
Morhdabád				38	Garhwâl			1,077
Shahjahanpur				19	Tarli			67

Dowson's Elliot, History, V, 818.
Pennant, Hindustin, II, 192.

Distribution of the Sanuydris according to the Course of 1891-concluded.

Districta.			Numbers.	Di	181	RIOTS			Numbers
Lucknow				17	Faizābād					218
Unão				1	Gonda			,		13
Ràs Bareli			+	37	Bahrdieh					1
Sitapur Hardei	,			10
	lei 58	58			TOTAL .			4,408
		Males					2,668	9
		Female	٠.				1,738	8

Sansiya.1-A vagrant thieving tribe who were at the time of the last Census confined to the Western Districts of the Province. Of their name no satisfactory account has been given. Some derive it from the Sanskrit sedsa, "breathing," or seasta, "separated;" others with snagdnika, "one who has to do with dogs," or snapdka, "dog-cooking," a person of a degraded and outcaste tribe, who, by the older law, was required to live outside towns, to cat his food in broken vessels, to wear the clothes of the dead, and to be excluded from all intercourse with other people; he could possess no other property than asses and dogs, and his office was to not as public executioner and to carry out the bodies of such as die without kindred. It is true that these are now-a-days the functions of the Dom, but the mode of life of the Sânsiya is sufficiently degraded to make it perhaps possible that he may have inherited the name. The Sansiya is no doubt the near kinsman of the other degraded wandering races who occupy the same part of the country, such as the Kanjar, Beriya, Hâbûra, and Bhâtu. Their tribal legends, so far as they have been recorded, do not throw much light on their history of origin. Some of them allege that they are a sub-caste of Nats; but the Nats do not acknowledge kinship with them. Another of their legends appears in various forms. By one account when the Agnikula or fire-born races were created, the Chauhan Raiputs created the Sansiyas to act as their bards and sing their Principally based on an excellent report by Mr. V. W. Court, District Super-intendent, Police, Aligarh; notes collected at Mirrapur and by the Deputy Inspector of Schools, Bijner.

praises. Their first ancestor was, it is said, one Sans Mal or Sahasman, who has given his name to the tribe. He is said to have had three sons: One was born early in the morning when these people take their morning draught of butter milk (chidnesh) and hence sprang the Chhânchhdih section. The second was born at midnight. which is said in their patois to be called karkhand, and hence the section known as Karkhand. The youngest was born at noon, and as this is the time they milk their buffaloes, he was called Bhains. Bhains, it may be noted, is a section of both the Beriyas and Kanjars, which tends to establish the connection between the tribes. and Kara also means a "young buffalo." So the designation of these sections may be perhaps either totemistic or occupational. Another story makes out their ancestor to have been Sans or Sahans Sinh, a Ráthaur Rájput. His house once fell down in the rainy season, and he could not afford to rebuild it; so he and his descendants took to living in wigwams. He is said to have had three eons-Chandu Sinh, Gaddu Sinh, and Beri Sinh, -all their descendants took to a jungle life and lived by collecting khaskkas grass and catching vermin. The women of Beri Sinh's family took to prostitution, and they are the present Beriyas; those of Chandu Sinh were called Chanduwala; and those of Gaddu or Giddu Sinh, the present Gidiyas. These legends are of little value except to prove the identity of a number of castes of the same social standing and occupation, who are known in the Central Duâh as Beriyas, in the Upper Dush as Gidiya, Habura or Bhatu; in Mathura and Bhartpur as Radhiya or Radhua Kanjars; and in Rajputana as Gharkhulo or "those who live with their doors open." ing to another legend there were two brothers -Sans Mal and Mala. nur-from the former are descended the Sansiyas and Kanjars; from the latter the Beriyas or Kolhatis and the Doms and Mangs,1

2. As we have seen, the more degraded members of the tribe recognise three exogamous sections: Chhân-chhâh, Karkhand, and Bhains. Those who are rather more advanced and lay stress on their alleged Râjput descent profess to have sections taken from the names of well-known Râjput clans, such as Chanhân, Khâgi, Pundîr, Gahlot, and Samhâr. There is again another endogamous division of them into Gunthorpe, Notes on Oriminal Tribes, 40.

Kalka or those of pure Sansiya blood and Malla, whose mothers were Sansiya women and their fathers men of other eastes. That the tribe is much mixed is quite certain. It is well known that they habitually kidnapped girls of other eastes. Of the seven gangs in the Aligarh District it was recently ascertained that the women leaders of four were women of other tribes, who had been either kidnapped or introduced into the tribe. Even now it is admitted that they will take into the tribe men of almost any tribe except the lowest menials. The only ceremony is that the convert is made to cat and drink with members of the tribe.

3. Another very curious fact about them is that they act as a sort of Bhats or hard and genealogists to some The Stariyas as bords. tribes of Jats and to some Chauhan Rajputs. Many of the Sansiyas of these Provinces refer their origin to Bhartpur, where they allege they were bards to the original ruling family. So in the Panjab we find that in Hoshiarpur 1 they receive an allowance from the Jata known as birt. "Towards them they hold the same position as that of Mirasis or Doms among other tribes. Each Jat family has its Sansi; and among the Jats of the Malwa and Manjha, the Sansi is supposed to be a better authority on genealogy than the Mirasi; for this he takes a fee at marriages. If the fee is not paid, he retaliates effectually by damaging crops or burning ricks." This fact is corroborated by Mr. Ibbetson in relation with various other Jat and Raiput tribes of the Panjab. How this connection can have arisen it is impossible to say; but the case of the Pataris, the degraded priests of the Manhis, is a case in point, and the relation between these tribes furnishes a possible analogy which may account for the creation of the degraded Bråhman tribes, like the Mahābrāhman and Dakaut.

4. In addition to the prohibition of marriage within the section

Marriage rules. there is the additional prohibition against marrying in the families of first-cousins, until at least three generations have passed since the last connection by marriage. They generally marry in the same neighbourhood, but the feeling seems to be in favour of selecting a bride from a nother camp, which is perhaps one of the most primitive forms of [|] SetClement Report, 106.

Panjab Ethnography, para, 577.

exogamy. We have also probably a survival of the matriarchate in the rule by which the match is arranged by the phapha or father's sister's husband of the bride or bridegroom. Besides this the marriage and funeral ceremonies are performed by the son-in-law (dhiydua) or by a connection through a female (wdn). As among all nomadic tribes, owing to the comparative weakness of female infants, girls are in a deficiency. At the last Census there were only 1,955 women to 2,832 men; hence brides are in demand, and a heavy brideprice is charged for a suitable girl. In Aligarh it is reported that a bride sometimes costs as much as four or five hundred rupees, all of which is spent in drinking and debauchery during the ceremony. The marriage ceremony is analogous to that of the Kanjars. The bridegroom, after the match is arranged, arrives with a body of his friends, and there is a pretence of seizing the bride by force if she be not peaceably surrendered. He then seizes her in the presence of the assembled elders, drags her seven times round the marriage shed, and marks her forehead with red lead, and this makes them man and wife. Widow marriage does not need even this amount of ceremonial. The man is generally expected to repay to the relations of the first husband what they have spent on the first marriage; in the case of the levirate this compensation is, of course, not paid.

5. The real vagrant Sansiyas often merely expose their dead in the jungle. In Aligarh it is said that the Death ceramonics. Chanduwâla Sânsiyas cremate the corpse; with the others burial is the rule. Where they bury their dead they seem to have come under the influence of the example of their Muhammadan neighbours. Some members of the tribe, who were deported to Mirzapur after the proclamation, professed to adopt the following rules : - A pice is put in the mouth of the corpse immedistely after death as a viatioum, when it is washed and wrapped in a piece of new cloth, which should be five yards long, and carried by four men to the burial ground on a cot. The corpse is buried with the head to the West and the feet to the East. After bathing the mourners return home. The chief mourner remains apart for four days and cooks for himself. At every meal he lays some food outside his hut for the spirit of the deceased. On the fourth day the brethren are fed on rice, pulse, sugar, and ghi, and on the twentieth and fortieth day, the four men who carried the corpse to the grave are fed in the same way.

Westermarck, History of Ruman Marriage, 330, 197.

- 6. The religion of the Sansiyas is of a very elementary type. They have a vague idea of a great God, whom Religion. they call Bhagwan, or Parameswar, or Narayan; but of his character and functions they can give no satisfactory account. Some of them worship Devi or Kali in the same vague way whenever they are sick or in trouble. They are, like all the allied races, continually in fear of the malignant ghosts of the dead, who, if not duly propitiated turn into Bhat's or evil spirits and injure the survivors, They have nothing in the way of a ardddan, and one way of propitiating the Purkha log or " sainted dead " is by feeding some of the unmarried girls of the tribe in their honour. They also have a vague belief in a godling known as Miyan, who may be Ghazi Miyan or the saint of Amroha and Jalesar. He is, they say, the king of the serpents, and when they do honour to him they and their families are safe from snake bite. They believe, of course, in the demoniacal theory of disease, and when they fall sick call in a Sylun or Ojha to mark down the ghost, which is causing the mischief, and suggest the appropriate merifice which should be made to him.
- 7. They do not pay much regard to an cath on the Gauges or on the heads of their sons or daughters. Caths and ordeals. They have three binding forms of oath : First, they kill a cock and pouring its blood on the ground swear over it; secondly, they throw some salt into a cup of spirits, and, throwing it on the ground, swear over it; thirdly, they crush a leaf of the papal tree in their hands and swear. When a woman is suspected of infidelity and denies the charge, she is made to undergo the following ordeal : Five leaves of the pipal tree are placed on the palm of her hand, one over the other. She has then to take in her hand a red hot gadaila or "spud, " which is the national implement of the tribe, and used by them in digging out vermin, etc. With this she has to walk five steps, and if her hand shows no sign of burning, she is pronounced to be innocent. Similarly, of the Kolhatis of the Dakkhin, Major Gunthorps writes :- "The ordeals men and women of this race have to pass through to prove their innoceance, if they deny an acousation, are curious. For a woman seven leaves of the pipal tree are placed, one over the other, in the open palms of both hands. A wet thread is wound seven times round both hands and leaves. An axe made red hot is then placed on the leaves, and she hears it seven paces forwards and throws it into a bundle of thorns. Should the metal have penetrated the leaves and burnt her hands, she is guilty; but if not, she is considered innocent."

8. The organization of these separate gangs, to which reference has already been made, as practising a sort of Gang system. rule of exogamy among themselves, is curious. and may be illustrated by the condition of things which until recently prevailed in the Aligarh District. The Sansiyas there used to be divided into seven gangs (gol), of which the leaders of five, vis. those led by Roshaniya, Harro, Pancho, Giyaso, and Kallo, were women; and two were led by men, Hariya and Lachiya. The reason that women so often command Sansiya gangs is because so many of the males are habitually in jail. Of these the gangs of Roshaniya, Harro, Pancho, Giyaso, and Hariya used to be all one gang, which was known in the Mathura District as the gang of Sewa. His brother Mathura separated from him and formed a separate gang. On Sewa's death his gang broke up into two parts-one called after Teja, nephew of Sewa, and the other after Hulasi, son of Sewa. When Hulisi was imprisoned, the gang was called after his wife Bola ; and when Teja was also sent to jail, his gang was named after Roshaniya, wife of Belha, son of Sewa; and when Mathura elso got into trouble, his wife Pancho took command of his gaug. When the two sons of Harro, widow of Hulasi, grew up, she started a separate gang of her own, and into this gang was absorbed the gang of Bela. Again, when Toja was released from jail, he formed a separate gang, which was known as that of his wife Glyfso. The gang known as that of Kallu sprang from a Nat woman who formed an amour with a Jit, and had a large family who followed the gypsy life of their mother and finally intermarried with Sansiyas and became recognised members of the tribe. This gang is still known as Banswalli, because its foundress used to dance on a hamboo (bass). Finally, the gang known as Lachiya's, who were really Beriyas from Noblehera in the Etah District, came to Aligarh in recent years and became amalgamated with the regular Sansiya gangs. All these facts are very significant in considering the question of the origin of the present Hindus. If, as we have good rea-sen to suspect, the same process of amalgamation of eastes owing to sexual intrigue and the formation of caves of Adullam, like these existing vagrant tribes, has been going on for ages, the anthropometrical evidence in favour of the practical unity of the existing races ceases to be surprising.

¹ Notes on Criminal Tribes, 49.

283 sānsiya.

9. That the Sansiyas are one of the most audacious criminal tribes in the Province is now admitted and formed the justification for the recent stringent proceedings which have been taken against them. In the year 1890, they were all simultaneously arrested; the younger members were removed to a reformatory, and the elders distributed throughout the Province in the hope that they would adopt an honest course of livelihood, an expectation which has certainly not been realised. In the Upper Duib careful enquiry conclusively proved that they had no other means of livelihood except dakšiti, road robbery, thefts from vehicles, threshing floors and persons sleeping in the fields. In the course of their operations, unlike the Habara or Beriya, they were always ready to commit violence, and have been known to cause serious bodily injury and even death with the heavy bludgeons, which in recent years they had substituted for short clubs which they carried when they first came in contact with our Police, and which soon became an inconvenient means of identifying them and When bent on highway robbery, were consequently abandoned. their usual medur operands was to hide by the side of the road and suddenly attack passengers or the drivers of vehicles with showers of stones. If this failed to compel them to abandon their property, they fell on them with their bludgeons. Another device was to disguise themselves as constables, and in the course of a mock search to rob travellers. They do not usually take the plundered property to their camp for a considerable time, but bury it at a distance. use the railway freely in going to and returning from the seene of erime. On their journey they do not stay at sardis or other recognised halting-places, but encamp outside a village or town, and, being well dressed, pretend to be Banjaras or merchants. Their operations extend to a very considerable distance, and some few years ago a series of dakaities in the Panjab was traced to one of the Aligarh gangs.

10. They dispose of stolen property through Kalwars and Sunars; they will not take it with them to the shop, the intending purchaser has to accompany them to the jungle, and, strange to say, the Sansiya is usually found very honest in such transactions. If they take stolen property into their camp, the jewelry is deposited in the hollow legs of their beds, and the clothes hidden as stuffing of quilts, etc. The women sometimes appropriate some of the stolen iewelry for their own use, and when a search is made hide it in a way which cannot be described. Other jewelry is generally at once broken up. On arrest both men and women babitually give false names in order to conceal their identity, and hence the men greatly dread the punishment of flogging, as it marks them; for this reason they generally behave themselves well in jail so as to avoid corporal punishment. They are very averse to incriminating each other; if any of them turn approver, he is tried by the tribal council. The usual penalty is a fine of one hundred rupees for every person he has incriminated, and if he cannot pay the fine they will realize it by seizing his property or even a marriageable daughter. They never dare in such cases to complain to a Magistrate. In fact all their disputes are settled by the council, and they are never seen in Court. When a member of a gang is arrested, his companions will provide for his wife and family, and when any stolen property has been acquired, the wife of a man arrested gets her husband's share.

11. Owing to the constant absences of the men on thieving excursions and in jail, the women have gained a The position of the position of unusual influence in the tribe. Many of them, as we have seen, become leaders of gangs. They are, as a rule, affectionate, faithful wives, and the men are very much influenced by their advice. When a party of Police approaches a camp, the women all commence to call out at once bhitari I bhitari I " To your tents !" which is the signal for the men to escape. While search is being made, the women will resist to the utmost of their power, and they are in the habit of throwing all sorts of fifth over the officers engaged, hence all Police dread the auty of searching a Sansiya camp. Another plan is to take their babies in their arms and fling them round their heads in the hope that the search will be discontinged to save the lives of the children. They have a thieves' argot very like that of the Haburas. Of the corresponding dialect in the Panjah it has been shown by Dr. Leitner I that it is not a real patois, but merely a perversion of Panjabi according to a regular system. This is also certainly the case with the argot of these Provinces.

Analysis of Abdul Ghafter's Dictionary, 17.

12. There seems little doubt that the real vagrant Sânsiya will eat all kinds of meat, vermin and the leavings of almost any tribe except perhaps sweepers.

In Aligarh it is reported that they will eat with sweepers when ongaged with them in the commission of crime. Those who are beginning to settle down claim, however, a much greater degree of purity and pretend not to eat kacheki except from high castes like Brâhmans, Râjputs and Banyas. The vagrant branch of the tribe live under portable reed mats (sirki). The men, as a rule, sleep till 9 A. M., sleep again during the day, eat again at 5, P. M. and then spend the night on the prowl. The women help by going about begging and pretending to sell roots and other jungle medicine; they thus obtain entrance into respectable houses and obtain information which is of use to their male relations. They are very fond of dogs and keep a number of them to guard the camp. The camp is usually pitched on one of the high sandy ridges which are such a prominent feature in the landscape of the Upper Duab. They are no doubt guided in this by sanitary considerations and the sand is a convenient hiding place for property and the meat and hides of They themselves keep numerous bullocks and donstolen animals. keys which they use for the carriage of their buts and goods, as well as cows and goats for milk; these they habitually let loose in the fields adjoining their camp. Hence the Sansiya is not by any means a favourite visitor to a respectable village, and they could not wander about with impunity, as they were in the habit of doing, were it not that they were protected by landowners and merchants who shared in their plunder. Every true Sansiya woman must have her ears bored, and some time ago this fact was used in Court to prove the identity of a kidnapped girl,1

Distribution of the Sansiyas according to the Census of 1891.2

	n	istri	ore.			Hindns.	Moham- madana.	TOTAL,
Sabaraupur				G.		3,043	,,,	3,043
Muzaffarungar	,					71	3	74

¹ Reports Niedmat Addict; Mussammet Dorbo, 10th April 1852.

This, of course, does not represent the present distribution of the easte since they were brought under the operations of the Oriminal Tribes Act.

Distribution of the Schrigan according to the Census of 1891 -concluded,

		D	isvė i	224.				Hindus.	Mulum- madans.	TOTAL.
Meerut								852		862
Bulandaha	he				4			36		36
Agra								16	342	16
Ethwah								1	···	1
Bijnor							4	13	105	12
Budánn	*					*	14	5		6
Moradaba	d	4						26	491	26
Cawapar			,		+		i	49		40
Dånda		•				*		6		ā
Hamirpur					no.	RU	97	16		15
Tardi			10	UP	1	1031	-1	19	100	19
Lucknow						,	1	10		10
Kheri					-21			20		20
Esbritich				1		W.		13	111	18
Saltanpar	•				20		1	01		01
Partabga	rh						. ,	D		2
					To	TAB		4,287	3	4,200

Sâraswati.—A tribe of Brâhmans who take their name from the river Sâraswati, the lest river of the Indian desert. It now loses itself in the sands near Bhatner in Rajputâna, and by devout Hindus is supposed to flow underground until it joins the Ganges and Jumna at the sacred confluence of Prayâg at Allahâbâd. One legend accounts for its disappearance in the sand by telling how Mahâdeva, the father of Sâraswati, in his drunken passion attempted to violate her modesty, and she dived under the earth to escape his attack. The river gained its name from Sâraswati, the goddess of learning, under whose suspices the sacred literature of the Hindus assumed shape and anthority. This river appears to have been to the early Hindus what the Ganges, which is named only twice in the Veda, became to their descendants.

2. The Saraswatis, who in these Provinces are found principally in Agra, Mathura, Aligarh and Moradabad, Tribal organisation. are ranked among the Pancha Gauda and are the chief Brahmans of the Panjab proper. Dr. Wilson gives a list of their sections which are said to number no less than four hundred and sixty-nine. Mr. Sherring,3 on information received from Benazes, divides them into four great classes, the Panjati, who should by their name have five clans; the Ashthans, with eight clans; the Barahi, with twelve clans; and the Bawanjati, with fifty-two clans. It has, however, been found quite impossible to secure a complete and consistent account of these gotras. As Pandit Rådha Krishna, Dr. Wilson's authority, admitted, such a list could only be prepared by the collation of the registers kept by the Pandas of Hardwile, Thanesar and Mathura, who keep genealogies of every family of note, any member of which has visited the holy place within the last three or four centuries.

8. After the bride has come to live with her husband the first period of menstruction which occurs is a Domestic rites : Birth. senson of rejoicing. The women of the household and their friends assemble and sing songs of joy; sweetmeats are sent to the houses of friends. On the fourth day when the bride is pure, she is bathed and dressed in her best clothes and jewelry, and in the evening her husband's sister leads her and her husband into a room where they are shut up together for the night. When pregnancy occurs, at the end of the third or fifth month, the tribal deities are worshipped and an offering of sweetments made of rice and sugar is made to them, which after dedication are distributed to the friends of the family. At the completion of the seventh or ninth month the same rite is performed on a more extensive scale. When the child is born the sandi much sraddha for the propitiation of the sainted dead of the household is done. A Chamarin is called in who outs the umbilical cord, which she buries under the bed on which the mother lies. The mother and child are bathed and the eldest woman of the family plasters with cow-dung the place where the cord has been buried and scatters some washed rice over it. Then the friends assemble and each of them gives a pice or two to the Chamarin as a reward for cutting the cord (narkatdi). Songs are sung on this occasion. The haby does not suck its mother's breast for three days after birth; in the interval it drinks cow's or goat's milk. On the fourth day one of the women friends washes the mother's breast and receives a present. Then the child begins to suck. The Chamar midwife remains in attendance until the fifth day and is then succeeded by the barber's wife, who remains till the twelfth day. On the evening of the sixth day the women assemble and make images of men and women on the wall, which are worshipped by the mother. On that day, for the first time, she cuts grain. Up to that time she is given fruit and milk. On the eleventh day she is bathed and puts on fresh clothes and then worships the tribal deities. This rite is done in the family kitchen. In the evening she cooks kachehi and distributes it to the relatives and friends. After this, under the guidance of the family priest, she worships Ganesa and the Navagraha or nine planets. She sits down with her husband and their garments are knotted together as at the time of marriage. The baby is also dressed in fresh clothes. The mother again bathes on the twentisth, thirtieth and fortieth days, and on these occasions Ganesa is worshipped again with an offering of the halwa sweetment. This is distributed among the friends of the family. After the fortieth day the birth impurity is finally removed.

Wilson, Vishnu Purden, Preface LXVII; Mule, Auction Sanskrit Tasiz, V, 333.
 Indian Caste, II, 124, 274.

Minds Costes, I, 62, squ.

4. At the sixth month comes the "grain feeding" (anna, prilsana). This is done on the eighth or ninth day of the waxing moon. The eldest member of the family takes the child in his or her lap and makes the baby sip a little food, usually rice milk (khir) off a rupes, which becomes the perquisite of the person who feeds him. After a year the rite of "the year knot" (baras gánth) is performed. Some halwa sweetment is cooked in a pot, in which is then placed some red powder (ror!) and washed rice. A little balwa is offered to Ganesa and the rest is distributed to friends. This rite is done on every subsequent birth-day until the fifth. In the third or fifth year the ceremonial shaving (minram) is done in the usual way. The women take the child to a shrine, worship the razor of the barber and the mother takes the child in her lap and gets him shaved. The kanchhedan, kanbedha or ear pieroing is often done at the same time. The child makes an offering to the family god, sweets are distributed and songs are sung.

- 5. The marriage rites are of the usual form. As a rule the bride does not live with her husband until after the gauna rite which takes place after one, three, five, or seven years from the marriage. During the first year certain gifts are sent to her from her house on festivals. The technical phrase is feodôr biejna. Thus at the Kajari feast in the month of Sawan, her husband's friends send her a coloured sheet (chundari), some henna (mehadi), fine clothes, cards and backgammon (ganjifa, chausar), sweetmests and cakes, cowries and dice, red powder and coloured rice. The bride's family also send some clothes for the mother of the bridegroom. Similar gifts are sent at the Holi.
- 6. The gauna (Sanskrit gamana "going") generally takes place in Aghan or Phalgun. The husband and his friends go to the bride's house and are entertained on choice food in a place (januansa) arranged for their reception. When the auspicious moment arrives, the bridegroom in his best clothes and with a sword in his hand, possibly a survival of marriage by capture, goes to the house of the bride. In the courtyard a platform is made on which a water jar (kalas) and images of Gauri and Ganesa are placed. The garments of the pair are knotted together and in the knot some betel-nut, turmeric, and money are placed. The bridegroom sits in a square (chank) with the bride behind him and Gauri and Ganesa are worshipped. The bride's hand is placed on that of her husband and the Pandit repeats texts. Her mother comes up with a dish containing red powder (rori), sweetmeats, and money, and marking his forehead with the powder, puts the sweets and money in the corner of his sheet. The Pandit sprinkles water over the pair with a wisp of Kusa grass and the bride and bridegroom go to the janualsso. The barber's wife carries a tray full of large ladds sweetmeats; The girl's father stands before the father of the boy and says :- " I place my daughter under your protection. I am to blame in everything. My daughter will serve you." The girl's mother says the same to the boy's mother and both of them accompany this appeal with a money present. Then the bride returns to her father's house and weeps and embraces each of her female relations. She is given a box containing the solding or paraphernalia of a married woman, sweets, bangles, red lead, etc., which are taken with her by a woman. Half the dowry is paid in each by the father of the bride who after blessing the pair dismisses them.

Vos. IV.

7. When the pair get home they are met at the door by a female servant with a pitcher of water into which they drop some copper coins. The bride's mother-in-law then locks at the bride's face and gives her a present, known as much dikhdi. The other female friends do the same. Two or three days after the pair worship the Ganges and the family deities and the rite is concluded.

S. The corpses of the boys who have not been invested with the Brihmanical cord and those of unmarried Death neromonica. girls are wrapped in a clean sheet and thrown into a river. No rites are performed for the propitiation of their ghosts. The adult dead are cremated in the usual way. The younger brother usually fires the pyre of his elder brother; or this duty is performed by the father, which is the greatest misfortune which can befall bim. The only difference between the oustoms of the Saraswata and Sarwanya Brahmans in this respect is that the former feed Brahmans (brahm bhoj) on the seventeenth and the latter on the thirteenth day after death. It is also peculiar to them that when an old man dies they make rejoicings. The head of the corpse is smeared with red powder and sprinkled with red water, It is carried to the cremation ground to the sound of music, and from the date of death up to the tenth day the women sing, and sweetmeats and besel are distributed. For a year after on the day of death a Brahman is fed.

9. In Bombay the Saraswati Brahmans are known as Shenavi, which seems to be a corruption of Chhianavê as they are supposed to have ninety-six sec-The Shenavis of Bombay. tions. "In Gujarat, besides acting as family priests, they follow many callings, reading hely books, drawing horoscopes, teaching private schools, trading, and serving as accountants, soldiers and constables. Once the holders of high offices, they have long lost their special position, and are now degraded, eating with and serving as the family priests of Kshatriyas, Lohanas, and Bhansâlis, whom they say they saved from Parasurâma's persecutions. In religion Saivas and goddess worshippers, (their chief deities being Ambika, Asapurna, Bhawani, Kumari, and Mahalakshmi) their family deity is Saraswati, whose chief place of worship is on the river of the same name. Not careful to keep the ordinary Britman rules, they allow widow marriage, and freely travel across the seas to collect payments for their patrons, Cutch Vanya traders settled in Mozambique and Africa.

"Dr. Wilson says that they are Shukla Yajurvedis. In using animal food they abstain from that of the cow and tame fowls; but cat sheep, goats, deer, wild birds of most species, and fish killed for them by others. They also est onions and other vegetables forbidden in the Smritis. They are generally inattentive to sectarian marks. They dress like the Hindu merchants and Amins of Sindh, though using white turbans. They shave the crowns of their heads, but have two tufts of hair above their ears. Their physiognomy is supposed by some to be not so distinctly of the Aryan type as that of other Brâhmans. They are partial to the Gurmukhi written character used in the Panjâb."

10. In these Provinces they are the special family priests of the Khatris. They have in recent times commenced to intermarry with the Gaur.

Distribution of Sdrasmati Brillmans according to the Counse of 1891.

Digri	TUT	g.	20	Number.	Dier	nici	rs.	- 1	Number
Debra Dúa				8,261	Bijnor.				714
Saharanpur				1,278	Budånn				1,628
Muzaffarunga				500	Moradabad	i			3,901
Mecrat		4		2,461	Shahjahanp	ur	y		271
Bulandslinhr				1,016	Pilibhit				89
Aligarh				5,135	Cawapar				615
Mathura				7,419	Patelipur				59
Agra .	٠			2,943	Bánda				31
ParrukhAbAd				388	Hamlepur				20
Rthunh				290	Allababad	ŝ.			250
Etah .				280	Jhansi				337
Baroilly	E			1,239	JAlaun				22

Bombay Gazetterr, V. 43.

Distribution of Sarasmati Brahmans according to the Census of 1891 -concluded.

Dist	ntow	10.		Number.	Diaz	nict	п.		Number.
Lalitpur				10	Sitapor				174
Bennes				2,586	Hardoi				172
Jeunpar				32	Kheri .				124
Gházipur				48	Fairabad	į.	1,		306
Gorakhpur				83	Genda				28
Kumauu	٠		+	1	Bahraich	÷			150
Garhwal			+	26	Saltanpur	ý.			16
Taral .				102	Partabgarh				6
Lanknow		,		1,069	Bárabanki				46
Undo .				317	14000			1
Ras Bareli		1	2	5.5	11127	To	TAL		47,880

Sarbhangi.—An order of Hindu ascetics who are said to take their name from their complete isolation (saswa-bhanga) from all others. There seems to be little or nothing to distinguish them from the ordinary Bairagi.

Distribution of the Sarbhangie according to the Cenena of 1891.

074.		Number.	Dis	TRICT	5,		Number.
		20	Lucknow				5
	. ,	1	Sitapur				1
		_ 1	Kheri				3
		1	Bahrainh				3
		4
		9	N	To	LAI		56
	1074.		r	r 29 Lucknow 1 Sitapur 1 Kheri 1 Bahraish	r 29 Lucknow . 1 Sitapur . 1 Kheri . 1 Bahraish .	29 Lucknow	r 29 Lucknow

Males . 44 Females . 12 Sarpakariya.—A Râjput sept found in Azamgarh who say they are descended from a serpent (sarpa). Some of them are Chhatris and some Bhuinhârs. They are of low standing among Râjputs, but rank high among Bhuinhârs.

Sarwariya .- A division of the Kananjiya Brahmans, who take their name from living beyond the river Sarju (Sarjupar, Sarayu-pdra). They say themselves that they settled on the east of the river Sarju in the time of Raja Aja, grand-father of Rama. Mr. Risley 2 gives from Bihar a legend of their origin which as he says "throws light upon the part which misunderstood tradition may play in the growth of popular tradition. Once upon a time there were two brothers, Kanha and Kubja; they lived in Kanauj, and their descendants were called Kanaujiya Brahmans. Now Râm Chandra, King of Ajudhya, wished to perform the great sacrifice of a horse, and sent for the Kananjiya Brahmans to help him. When they were starting, their father made them promise not to take any present for what they were going to do. But it seems that the sacrifice was of no effect unless the Brahmans were duly rewarded. The Raja knew this, and caused diamonds to be hidden in the packets of betel which he gave to the Brahmans. When they got home their father asked them if they had taken any presents, and they said they had not. But when the packets of betsl were opened the diamonds were found, and these Brühmaus were at once turned out of their caste, so they went back to the king, ready to curse him for his treachery. But he appeared them with smooth words and with grants of land to dwell on, and the grants were made in this way. The king shot an arrow as far as he could, and the place where it fell was the boundary of the land. Now the name of an arrow is sar so these Brahmans were called Sarwariya."

2. The Sarwariya Brâhmans have the usual Brâhmanie organisation of sections (golra) and local groups (dik); there are two superior sections in these Provinces:—

Garga gotra, called Sukla with the following groups (wik):
 Mämkhor, Mehra, Bhenri, Bakrua, Kanail, Majhganwa

[|] Selflement Roport, 29.

[&]quot; Tvides and Contes, I, 157.

- Gautama gotra; title Tivâri; sections Sarya, Sohgaura, Dhatura, Deoriya, Sirjam, Chetiya. The last are properly speaking Tivâris of Burhiya Bâri, of Gorakhpur. Below these are thirteen inferior sections:—
 - 1. Vateya gotra ; title Misra ; dil Payasi.
 - 2. Vatsya ; title Dûbê ; dih Samadari, Samri.
 - 3. Kasyapa; title Důhê; dik Bribatgrama.
 - 4. Kasyapa; title Misra; dià Dharmpura.
 - 5. Gautama ; title Gurdaban Dübê ; dih Kanchani.
 - 6. Savarna ; title Panré, Panreya ; dià Itiya.
 - Savarna ; title Pânrê, Panreya ; diâ Itâri.
 - 8. Kasyapa ; title Pânrê ; dià Tripbala,
 - Gard Mukha Sandilya; title Tivāri; dil Pinri, Nadāwali, Tāra, Majanna.
 - 10. Vatsya; title Pânrê; dih Nâga Chauri.
 - 11. Vatsya; title Mism; dil Ratanmala.
 - 12. Vatsya ; title Tivâri ; dià Pâla,
 - 13. Kasyapa ; title Misra ; dia Rarhi.

In addition to the above there are some whose claim to rank among the higher Sarwariya Brahmans is not fully accepted. Such are the Parwa Dübé of Kantit, the Pathak of Sonaura, the Tiwari of Bhargo, the Ojha of Karaili, the Panrê of Thokawa, the Upadhyaya of Khoriya, the Chaubê of Nepura, the Dübê of Latihai. These Brahmans, however, intermarry with the higher grade Sarwariya.

3. Sarwariya Brahmans pay much regard to their pasti or rank which now hardly means anything more than The Pantibe and Tatabaa certain amount of prejudice in the matter of eating and drinking only with persons of equal or superior rank. The Pantiha Brahmans will not eat pakki cooked by Kshatriyas; on the other hand those who are not Pantiha will cat pakki cooked by Kshatriyas whose lineage is undoubted. Pantiha Brahmans will not allow their women to use the flour mill or rice pounder, and would rather die than get the work of preparing the grain done by their women. But the number of Pantihas is said now to be so rapidly diminishing that they find it difficult to marry without violating the prohibited degrees. All have fallen into the lower grade known as Tutaha or "broken," with a few exceptions. If a Pantiha marries the daughter of a Tutaha he falls into the status of the latter. Pantihas at present belong only to the higher sections, those of Garga, Gautama and Sandilya. These three of the highest grade are exogamous and so are the thirteen lower divisions; but a kind of hypergamy prevails, and while the higher three divisions give daughters to the lower, they do not take brides from them. The Pantihas of the lower grades exchange brides indiscriminately. But there is a constant effort to rise in the social scale on the part of those of inferior grade by contracting marriage alliances with those of higher status. When a man emigrates he takes his dis with him and the area of the group is thus constantly extending.

4. When a woman is five months gone in pregnancy she invites her mother-in-law and entertains her on Demestic zites : Birth. cakes, sweetmeats and milk. Five Brahmans are also fed at the same time. The woman gives her mother-in-law a present of a sheet (sori), petticont (lakinga) and hoddiec (choliga), accompanied with a present in cash varying with the wealth of the family. If her father-in-law be alive she gives the garments suitable to a married woman ; if he he dead, only two white sheets are presented. Up to the eighth month of her pregnancy the expectant mother wears a blue sheet as a protective against the Evil Eye. At the end of the eighth month eight sweet cakes (pus) are sent to the houses of each of the near relations. From that day the weman gives up wearing her blue garment, and the mother lays her head at the feet of her mother-in-law and makes her a present of two rupees, known as plaw lagdi.

5. When the baby is born, if it be a boy, the nandi-much srdddha is done as described in the case of other Brithmans. The father, after this ancestor worship is over, binds the umbilical cord with his Brahmanical thread and buries it in the confinement room. A fire is kept burning over it for six days; during this time whoever wishes to enter the confinement room washes his feet and then dries them by holding them over fire. This repels the evil spirits which may have accompanied him from outside. This also keeps off the dreaded demon Jamhua, which represents the infantile lockjaw resulting from the cutting of the cord with a blunt instrument and the neglect of sanitary precautions. On the sixth day the mother bathes at an auspicious moment selected by the Purohit. She bathes again on the tenth and twelfth day and then acquires a sufficient degree of purity to allow her to be touched by her relatives. But she cannot touch the drinking water of the family, or cook for them. On the day the child is born the motherin-law puts in an earthen pot the seeds of the Embelia ribes (bdd birang) and water, and in another wim leaves and water. The former is drunk by the mother and she uses the second for bathing. On the third day the mother-in-law grinds some pepper (pipar) and gets two rupees as a present. On the sixth day the mother dyes seven or nine sheets with turmerie; one is given to the Chamârin, Nâin, and Bârin, and the rest to the wives of Brâhmans. The Pandit who prepares the heroscope is also rewarded and a sheet is given to the Dhohin who washes the clothes used at the delivery. People of other castes will not drink water at the bouse of a man whose wife has been delivered for twelve days. On the twelfth day the house is cleaned, the old earthen vessels replaced and the birth impurity is removed.

- 6. When the baby is a month old it is bathed and a piece of red thread tied as an amulet round the wrists, feet, waist, and neck. Each thread has seven tassels, three yellow and four red. These threads are changed every month up to the sixth month when they are replaced by ornaments of gold or silver which are also regarded as protectives against demoniacal influence. The ornaments for a child consist of bangles (lara*) on the wrist and feet, a waist chain (lardhans*), and a necklace (hussel*, ladula) to which `aro* attached seven charms (yantra*). Then the child is dressed in a cost and cap and the anna-prasana rite or "feeding with grain" is performed as elsewhere described. At the first birthday what is known as the varsha harm is done. The child is made to drink a mixture of milk and sesamum which is first offered to the tribal goddess.
- The shaving.

 For three days before the rite the women sing, a small silver razor is made costing a rupee and a quarter. The child is rubbed with the condiment known as abtan during this time. On the third day! the barber touches the child's head with the silver razor and then shaves the head with his own razor. The mother holds the child in her lap and receives the hair as it falls on a broad wheaten cake. She preserves the hair till she has occasion to go to Prayag when she lets it float away in the sacred junction (Trivensi) of the rivers. With the hair ten copper coins are also thrown into the stream. At the fifth year the ear-pieroing (tanchiedan) is done at some favourite shrine,

The marriage and death rites are of the usual type as elses
 Other domestic rives. where described.

9. Of the Sarwariya Brahmans of Gorakhpur Dr. Buchanant writes :- "The Sarwariya Brahmans, and all Speinl customs. the sacred order here imitate their example, do not eat rice cleaned by boiling, that is purchased in the market. What is cleaned without boiling may be anywhere purchased; yet the distinction is very slight, for the Brahman women never clean the rice themselves, and low women are employed to boil the rice before it is cleaned. The conscience is saved by this operation being performed in the Brahman's house, and by the water used being drawn and carried home in his vessels, for this is done by the low women employed to clean the grain. The Brithmans here in general decline to cat parched grain purchased from a shop, and sweetments consisting of grain and sugar fried in oil they altogether reject; but they use the confectious made of sugar and curds, and they carry grain to the parchers' shop, who prepare it before them, and this they eat without scruple. They never eat either of these refreshments without purifying the place on which they sit with cow-dung and water; a ceremony which elsewhere is only considered necessary at regular meals. They cat goat's flesh both when sacrificed and when killed on purpose, but will not purchase a joint from the shop of a professed butcher. They also eat deer, porcupines and hares, partridges, quails, pigeons, turtle doves, and wild ducks of several kinds.

"It is admitted that according to the written law they might eat wild hog, lizards, turtles and wild pullets, but anyone who presumed to do so would infallibly lose caste. Two or three Pandits are shrewdly suspected of drinking in the worship of the goddess, but they keep it as secret as possible, as, if clearly proven, they would undoubtedly lose caste. The Brähmans and all the women, except of the lowest dregs of impurity, never smoke tobacco except as a medicine; but for this restraint they make up by chewing. Brähmans may without lose of caste intoxicate themselves with hemp; but it is only used to any considerable extent by those who have abandoned the pleasures of the world for a religious life,"

Eastern Indis, II. 472.

Distribution of Sarwariya Brahmans according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	nic	TH.		Number.	Dia	TRIC	TS.		Number.
Dohra Dûn	,			219	Phiblds			á	365
SahArunpur	٠			273	Campur			- 4	835
Muzaffarnag	sr			108	Fatchpur				6,436
Mearut				255	Banda		٠		57,392
Balaudshahr				38	Hamirpur				287
Aligarh			ē	615	Allaháhád				177,975
Mathura		1	G.	200	Jhānsi		1		251
Agm .		X		111	Jálaun	9	٧.		28
Parrukhábád				807	Lalitpar				64
Mainperi				239	Benares	÷		-	77,196
Ethwah				104	Mirapur				152,841
Etah .		,	3	98	Jannpur				146,845
Bareilly				235	Gházipar				20,930
Bijner .				120	Ballia				12,630
Budhun		,		73	Gorakhpur				241,791
Mozádábád				79	Basti .	ě			185,086
Shabjakanp	nz			218	Ammgarh				109,728

Distribution of Sarvariya Brahmans according to the Ceneus of 1891 - concluded.

Dist	1010	rn.		Number.	Dist	Aic	Dir.		Number
Tarài .	i		,	17	Faizābād				194,037
Lucknow				1,032	Gonda				197,983
Unão			L	303	Bahraich				41,322
Rãô Bareli			4	23,144	Sultanpur				155,534
Sitapur		4		636	Partibgarh		÷	٠	123,039
Hardel				527	Bārabanki			•	18,565
Khevi			6	474	112	To	TAL		1,909,277

Satnāmi. —A Hindu religious order who take their name from their invocation of Satyanāma, "The God of truth." There are at least two classes of people called by the same name.

2. There is first, the sect founded by Jag-Jiwan Dâs of Sardaha in the Bârabanki District, who was born in 1682 A.D. He was a Chandel Thâkur, and his chief disciples were Gusâîn Dâs, an Upâdhya Brâhman, Devi Dâs, a Chamar Gaur Thâkur, Dulam Dâs, a Sombansi Thâkur and Kheni Dâs, a Tiwâri Brâhman. He established some connection with Islâm; and two of his disciples were of that creed. They profess to adore the True Name alone, the one God, the Cause and Creator of all things, void of sensible qualities (nirgano), without beginning or cul. They borrow, however, their notions of creation from the Vedânta philosophy, or rather from the modified form in which it is adapted to vulgar apprehension; worldly existence is illusion or the work of Mâya, the primitive character of Bhawani, the consort of Siva. They recognise, accordingly, the whole Hindu pantheon, and although they profess to worship but one God, pay reverence to what they consider manifestations of his nature visible in the Avataras, particularly Rama and Krishna. Their moral code is much the same as that of all Hindu ascetics, and enjoins indifference to the world, its pleasures and its pains; devotion to the spiritual guide; elemency and gentleness; rigid adherence to truth; the discharge of all ordinary social or religious obligations, and the hope of final absorption into the One Spirit with all things. There is thus but little difference between them and some of the Vaishnava sectaries. The sacred book of the sect is the Aghavinsa or "Sin remover." The Baha died at Kotwa, five miles from Sardaha in 1761 A.D. Meat. marifr pulse and intoxicating liquors are prohibited, as well as the egg-plant (baingan) at least locally. The story goes that Raja Devi Bakhsh, late Ta'aluqdar of Gonda, married in the family of the high priest, and on the occasion of his marriage he was entertained as a guest with his whole suite. But he declined their hospitality unless served with flesh. The Satnamis at last prepared a ourry of baingan, pronounced a prayer upon it, and when served out, it was found to be flesh. From thenceforth the Satnamia renounced the enting of beingan as a thing convertible into meat, Smoking seems to be allowed.

Indian Antiquary, VIII. 289 sqq.: Oudh Gazetteer, I, 362; Wilson, Europe. I, 356; Central Provinces Gazetteer, 412.

3. Caste distinctions are not lost by profession. On the contrary its professors seem to be careful not to interfere with casts prejudice and family customs. Fasts are kept, at least to a partial extent on Tuesday, the day of Hanuman, and on Sunday, the day of the Sun. A good deal of liberality is shown towards local superstitions. Incense is weekly burnt to Hanuman under the title of Mahabir, whilst Rama Chandra seems to come in for a share of adoration. The water in which the Guru's feet have been washed is drunk only when the Guru is of equal or higher caste than the disciple. Satnamis seem regularly to observe the festivals of their Hindu brethren. Their distinctive mark is the sade, or black and white twisted thread worn on the right wrist. The full-blown Mahant wears an anda on each wrist and each ankle. Their caste mark (tilak) is a black, perpendicular streak. The bodies of the dead are buried, not cremated. Marriage customs are those of the family to which the Satnami belongs.

4. The other class, known by the name of Satnāmi, are the Rāê Dāsi Chamārs of parts of the Central Provinces. The creed preached by Rāê Dās seems to have been very similar to that of Ghāsi Dās, the celebrated Satnāmi teacher, who started the revival among the Chamārs some seventy years ago. This seems hardly to have reached these Provinces.

Distribution of the Saturdania according to the Census of 1891.

Distate	TO.		Number.	D18711	CTS	-	Number.
Muzaffarnagar			109	Moradábád			2
Moscut			2	Pilibhit		,	21
Bulandshahr ,			54	Mirrapur			6
Farrukbábád .			1	Ghāzipur	,		25
Mainpuri .			3	Fairnbad			26
Ntah		6	1	400/55
Bareilly	10		332	327 -	To	TAL	582

Saun—A tribe recorded at last Census to the number of 1 in Moradabad and 256 in the Tarai. They represent in the hills the Kurmi of the plains and will do any kind of labourer's work except carrying palanquins. Their principal occupation is mining, and the reason they give for not carrying litters is that all castes will not drink water from their hands, though drinking it from the land of the Kabar. In the Tarai they show 63 sections. They claim to be a branch of the Khasiya Rajputs. They do not appear to be regularly domiciled in the Tarai, but come in the cold weather for work and return in the hot season.

Sayyid; Sayyad—(said to be derived from sild, "increase, gain") one of the four chief divisions of Muhammadans. They call themselves the descendants of the famous martyrs Hasan and Husain, the sous of Ali the fourth Khalif, and Fitima the daughter of the Prophet. How many of these are true Sayyids it is impossible to say. Many of them came with the early Muhammadan invaders and asserted some priestly pretensions which were in many cases rewarded by gifts of revenue-free land which their descendants still enjoy. Many of these new recorded as Sayyids have no real claim to the title. The common proverb quoted in the article on the Shaikhs says: "Lest year I was a batcher, this year I am a Shaikh; next year if prices rise, I shall become a Sayyid." According to Mr. Ibbetson¹ the apostles who converted the Pathans to Islâm were called Sayyids if they came from the West and Shaikhs if from the East. The characteristic qualities of a Sayyid as described by Farishta on the occasion of his dissipating the doubt whether Khizr Khân, the protégé of Taimūr, was really a Sayyid, were modesty, politoness, hospitality, compassion, charity, learning and bravery; but it is needless to say that few of the modern Sayyids reach this high ideal.

Atkieson, Himalayan Gaselfeer, III, 451.

2. The tribal organisation of the Sayyids is confusing because some of the divisions take their name from Tribal organization. an oponymous ancestor and some are merely territorial. At the last Census they were enumerated in a large number of divisions-Ablasi, which is also one of the Shaikh subdivisions and takes its name from Abbas, the paternal uncle of the Prophet; Abidi, "worshippers of God;" Bani Fatima, the descenddants of Fâtima, the daughter of the Prophet. She married Ali the ecosin of Muhammad and was the mother of the martyre Hasan and Husain from whom the Sayyids generally are said to be sprung; Baqri (baqar, "an ox") Baghdadi, "residents of Båghdåd "; Bukhåri, "residents of Bukhåra"; Chishti, followers of the Saint Salim Chisti of Fatchpur Sikri; Hüshimi, also a Shaikh division, named after Hashim, the great grandfather of the Prophet; Hasani, from the martyr Hasan; Hasani-ul-Husaini, from the two martyr brethren; Husaini from Husain; Jaffari, also a Shaikh division, who take their name from Ja'far, one of the Imams; Jaláli possibly from Al-Jalál, a term used by the Súfi mysties to express that state of the Almighty which places him beyond the understanding of His creatures; Qadiriya, which is the name of a special sect who deny absolute predestination and believe in the power (quar) of man's free-will; Kāzimi (Kāsim, "the restrainer of anger"); Naqwi; Pîrzûde, "descendants of some saint;" Riswi; Sabzawari from Sabzwar one of the chief cities of the Persian Province

Pasido Ethnography, para, 515.

Khurnsan, between Mashad and the Caspian sea; Siddiqi, from As-Siddiq, "he who speaks the truth," a title given by the Prophet to the first Khalîf Abn Bakr ; Taqwi, " the abstinent." Tirmîzi, residents of a place called Tirmîz in Persia; Ulwi or Alawiya, who believe the Khalif Ali to have been a prophet; Uskari and Zaidi.

3. Abul Fazl, Sayyid, of Wasit in Iraq, is the ancestor of most of the renowned Muhammadan families in Upper India—the Barba and Bilgrami Sayvids, and in Khairabad, Fatchpur Haswa and many other places branches of the same stem are found. Sayyid Muhammad, the fourth in descent from him, was the ancester of the Bilgram family.1

4. The Sayyids of Jais in Rae Bareli are another famous Oudh family who are said to have been settled since the thirteenth century. They are well known for learning and the Mujtahids of Lucknow, literally "one who strives" to attain a high position of scholarship and learning, the highest degree among Muhammadan divines, belong to the family. The Bilgram Sayyids are also famous for having produced many poets and learned men. They claim to have invaded Oudh in the time of Shamsuddin and to have founded Bilgram on the site of a city named Srinagar.

5. But perhaps more famous are the Sayvids of Barhas; Sadat-i Barha. They claim descent from Fatima the daughter of the Prophet, and by one account came into these Provinces with Mahmûd of Ghazni. Their head-quarters are in the Muzaffarnagar District and a few colonies of them are found in Amroba of Morâdabad and Sikandra of the Allahabad District. There are various theories as to the origin of the name. Some say that, scandalised by the debaucheries of the Mina Bazar of Delhi, which they considered unsuited to their sacred character, they obtained leave to reside outside (taker) of the town; others that it was the chief town of twelve (baras) which belong to the clan. As Professor Blochmann remarks, whether the derivation from the Hindi numeral barah be correct or not, there is no doubt that the ctymology was believed to be correct in the time of Akbar and Jahangir; for both the Tabagat and the Tuzuk derive the name from the twelve

¹ Hardei Settlement Report, 63; Elliot, Chronistes of Undo, 93.

Williams, Outh Consus Report, 74.

^{*} Elliot, Sapylemental Glotsary ; S. V. Blochmann, Ata-i-Akonei, I, 000; Census Report, 1865; M. W. P., I, 6, Appendix ; Ibbetsen, Panjab Ethnography, para. 515.

villages in the Duab of Muzaffarnagar, which the Sayvids held. Like the Sayyids of Bilgram, the Barba family trace their origin to Sayyid Abul Farah of Wasit; "but their nasabadma or genealogical tree was succeed at, and even Jahang's in the above-quoted passage from the Tuzuk, says that the personal courage of the Sayyils of Barba, but nothing else, was the best proof that they were Sayyids. But they clung so firmly to this distinction, that some of them even placed the title of Sayyid before the titles which they received from the Mughul Emperors, as Sayyid Khân Jahân (Sayyid Abul Muzaffar) and others. But if their claim to be Sayyids was not firmly established, their bravery and valour has become a by-word. Their place in battle was the van (Airdwal), they claimed to be the leaders of the onset, and every Emperor from the time of Akbar gladly availed himself of the prestige of their name. They delighted in looking on themselves as Hindustanis, Their military fame completely threw to the background the renown of the Sayyids of Amroha, of Manikpur, the Khanzadas of Mewat, and even families of royal blood as the Safawais."

- 6. They are divided into four branches -the Tihanpuri with Jansath in the Muzaffarnagar District as their chief town; the Chatbanûri or Châtrauri of Sambalhara; the Kûndliwâl of Majhara and the Jagneri of Bidauli on the Jumna. Of these, the Muhammadan historians mention only the Kundliwal and the Tihanpuri. Besides these divisions they have private marks of recognition which they say have been very successful in excluding impostors from the tribe. Particular families have a sort of totemistic designations, such as "dog," "ass," "sweepers," etc., which are said to be derived from the menial offices which some of the Sayyids of this family are reported to have performed for the Emperor Humáyun when reduced to extremities in his flight from Shîr Shâh. As Sir H. M. Elliot remarks : "the improbability of men assuming such humiliating designations without a good cause, gives some colour to the story; particularly when we learn the devotion of the Emperor's attendants, which is so amusingly described by his right reverential Aftalohi, Janhar, in the Tazkirat-ul-Vikaya."
- 7. "The histories of India," writes Professor Blochmann, "do not appear to make mention of the Sayyids of Barba before the times of Akbar; but they must have held posts of some importance under the Sûrs, because the arrival of Sayyid Mahmûd in Akbar's camp is recorded by all historians as an event of importance. He and other Sayvids were, moreover, at once appointed to high mangaba. The family boasts also traditionally of services rendered to Humayun; but this is at variance with Abul Pazl's statement that Sayyid Mahmûd was the first who served under a Timuride. The political importance of the Sayyids declined from the time of Muhammad Shah (1131 to 1161) who deposed the brothers Sayyid Abdullah Khân, and Sayyid Husain Ali Khân, in whom the family reached the greatest height of their power. What a difference between the rustic and loyal Sayyid Mahmud under Akhar, and the above two brothers, who made four Timurides Emperors, dethroned and killed two and blinded and imprisoned three. They made Farrukh Siyar, Rafi'uddarajāt, Rafi'uddanla, and Muhammad Shah Emperors; they dethroned and killed Jahandar Shah and Farrukh Siyar, whom they had moreover blinded; and they blinded and imprisoned Princes A'azzuddîn, Ali Tabar, and Humâyun Bakht."

Distribution of the Sayyids

Ваятисти,		Abbini.	Alott.	Bant Patiena.	Bagri,	Bighead.	suthard.	Chiebits.	Hashimi,	Husani,	Haemiege Huenini,	Breatel	Jun.
Delira Dúa			10	-	ne.	ire	47	939	-			177	in
Halakrampur		8	4	2	2	8	1,608		271	ine	140	1,809	to
Mandanagar	-	8	15	0	46	190	$7	2	17	wwx.	1	4,019	210
Meesut .	-	8	17	8	9	12	902	-		rec-	32	1,683	300
Bulandshalar		15	4	10	146	02	858	274	- 1	Ann.	inc	733	81
Allgarh .			-	-	1	47	626	1				1,725	168
Mathers .		9	. 9	im.	100		110	-		465	AND.	230	00
Agra .	+	64	120	18	2	4	111	10	40	200	-	580,1	154
Farrukhátúsá	.	*8	37	18	15	7	815	-	-033		2	400	20
Halaguri ,		1	391	m	in.		17	140	10	404	100	138	100
Ethwah .	H	14	19		2	Ż	19	-	140	1	31	100	48
Etah .		1	30	2	m.	7	174	-	1	-	· ne	POS.	16
Baratily .		203	14	60	23	250	1,202	106	81		u	1,273	338
Bijack .				32	-	144	715	2,173	100	-701	- nu	1,045	31
Budden .			22	-	17		128	in	67			849	133
Monkdahad		100	110	38	250	13	119	1	4	1	-	10,607	199
Shihjahinpur			1	Tree.	21	11	401	29	26	224	058	730	36
Punan .		12	60	21	ren:	17	118	80	. 4	278	2	her.	33
Сампрат .		40	506	1	4		81.0	-	34		74	527	-000
Patshpur .		13	205	10	8		.00		-		72	aun	166
Binds ,		19	75	16	4	1	60		0	San	-	0	80
Hamlepur.		b	80	a	1	14	45	m	82	-	20	200	26
Allabibite .	.1	42	210	7	1	13	187		104	-	26	1,401	002
Jhanei .		88	141		- 100	21	51.	20	-		-	113	10
Minum .					-	3		20	20	971	-	81	12
Lalitpur .		100	344	-			10	-		Ave	100	14	30
Вепатея .		9	109	114	-10	440.	3	-	· ·	int	100	000	250
Mirsapur .		1		100		-			34	-		218	600
Jaunpur .	: 1			in	186	_	34		329	101		1,648	$80
Ghizipur .		1	719.		-	7	18-	102	in.	945		674	203
Ballia .		20	ne l	ne.	-	244	17	-	183	net .	178	181	-
Gorskhpur		1	231	81.	1	-	72	4	-		7	174	4
Buell .		-	67	71	100	771	13	·n		100	111	1,301	0
Atampath,		17	58	0	1	-	12		200	-140	100	0,123	232
KamAnn .			-				ner.		-	445	13.0
Garlenti .							yes			441		111	-00

according to the Census of 1891.

Julian,	Qualitya.	Kuzsimi	Nagwi.	Pirzhin,	Qiard.	Sabrwart.	Sidiffyl	Taquel	Timbel.	Ulet,	Aelsei,	Zaidi.	Othern,	ZOTAS.
2		4	in	66	7	7	10	-		100	14	100	202	63
10	125	180	47	8	150	150	0.		659	78	3.5	227	1,333	6,60
	107	766	109	36	41	902	26	1700	234	138	600	5,236	1,050	11,63
80	87	200	-		1,801	220	4	41	81	37	200	#03	3,708	10,00
2	2	6	633	-	1,430	29	29	915	24	23	ant.	67	737	4,57
	23	4	her :	168	206	20	10	22	100	68		345	3,400	4,80
4			186	200	215	rei	20		19		eac	18	1,891	1,22
122	20	38	7	-	860	-	71	41	19	80	2	12	3,307	0,70
69	1	81	4	85	255	-	41	403	862	814	67	106	2,764	8,10
in	1	75		28	346	10	165	78	1	67		2.5	2,517	2,81
2	11	35	107		574	rec.	in.	100	3	43		-	1,906	3,55
3	4	4	28	11	50	18	23	Comment	ñ	17	e	50	1,383	E, 023
667	6	10		101	176	70	2	100	1	200	-85	1,007	2,344	8,00
19	141	1		11	914	200	in	240	470	3/2		3,762	2,103	12,00
128		1	110	-	117	62	28	im		100	1	201	1,807	8,60
261	14	44	2,213	-	909	10	-	è	20	471	40	623	2,427	17,78
100	63	16		0	134		-	20	383	16	luc.	jan.	1,504	2,766
137		17	144	-	3		3	20	42	1	-	79	167	1,816
m	63	65	10	18	1,083	in	110	m-	47	80	3	63	2,450	0,925
51	21	E0	251	i.	400	103	74	715	31	0.6		268	3,900	5,020
25	24	10	118		484		42	7110			_	47	1,177	2,500
840	11	CI.	10		72		33	340		17	-	24	1,006	2,483
180		848		91	4,141	210	93	1,183	13	100	1	324	4,131	18,600
20	21	10	966		88		35	32	30	8	Arm	85	1,080	1.001
a	22	20		100	53	5	24	18	10	14	her-	17	1,003	1,511
1	2		44		35	4	11			1	*	200	268	363
	ret	83			433	100	-		-	28		498	1,294	2,075
		35		*10	201	1988	L	-01	-	744	Size:	-	1,325	2,250
4		88			1,000	2	40	-	100	140	20	861	1,446	4,814
6		888		110	336	216	13	25	271	24	hav.	150	078	11,290
		561			122	150	1	100	and	-	193	_	271	751
18		73		1	181	1	1	30		24	jan	17	2,176	0,583
144.	31	141		10	1,314	led	180	51	998.	14	191	410	2,047	0,500
7		331		3	040	10		-	107	0.59	137	473	1,660	8,838
				_		int		-	111		-		90	Bil
100			148	-	1	100			100		31	""	41	41

Distribution of the Bayyids according

Вимпер		Abbut.	AMEL,	Bant Patima,	Regri.	mighdidi.	Bekharl.	Chiehel,	Rashimi,	II meterif.	Hessn-sk- Hwalni,	Braduf.	Juffi,
Tardi .			100	$1	-	-	177				in	121	-
Lucknew .		4	1,400	17	191	100	58		24	910	170	1,607	3310
Unho .		101	in	8	23	-	61	-	-60	iam.	112	100	833
BA6 Barell			78	ta:	100	344	5	1	5		133	101	228
Stapur .		1	146	1		-	89	119	219		18	91	677
Hardat .		6	30	120	-	-in	186		-	216	a	810	TO
Ehset .			44	1	-	000	86		10		-112	511	181
Faintbid .		4	108	11	fre:	(ped	1	:015.	378	410		1,146	80
Gendu .			20	90		200	4		No.	-	771	160	Œ5
Bahráfeli .		2	lot	16	47	10	11	40	27	-	-	130	170
Selthapur		ties	141	77		88	24	-	0	in.	-	405	47
Partitional	+	121		13		Art.	45	-	D	lane :	2	40	63
Bkrahanki	,		,im	10	-20	27	rı.	(6)			201	A30	-
Toras		725	4,616	001	710	1,687	9,705	3,063	1,860	27%	1,984	64,902	8,111 to the Census of 1891 - concluded.

Jahn,	Quieriya,	Kuzalest,	Nager.	Phraids	Qiret.	Bahowitt.	Statigit,	Toput	Timit.	TDw.I.	Askari.	Paidt,	Others.	Torre
-	21	10	(red.	_		-		11	-	6	-01	4	282	676
34	48	1,310	100	2	4,512		63	$13		277	127	225	3,567	14,010
-		50	100		833	-	104	346	949	68	36	263	1,625	3,762
-		133	1,194	42	370	35	101		49	7	100	112	Sits	3,680
11		67	-	2	107	100	-	12	745	22	res.	478	3,703	3,710
69	12	31	461	-	1,286	1000		-	178	14	No.	246	1,990	8,472
117	ent.	72	27	25	200		141	-	157	0	-	000	1,350	5,100
-	an.	181	788	794	3,110		140	-	980	205	-	935	2,376	8,101
-			-		4,614		101	13		57	140	939	673	6,042
	16	196	161		193	40	2	-	246	107	100	301	1,352	3,339
		59	101	35	450	400	991	92	200	105	ywe.	412	1,050	3,317
16	13	11	287		101	31	18	17	-	18	*	48	1,108	2,011
m	in	int	60	54	2,612	(m)	-	193	1	201	90	610	8,417	7,017
2,671	740	5,603	5,918	615	37,900	1,983	F63	0,100	3,218	8,712	910	19,102	75,700	242,813

Sejwāri. —A small caste found only in the Lalitpur District. The story told of their origin is that when Maharāja Devi Sinh, of Chanderi, went to attack Maler Kotla, he brought from there four boys, one of whom he appointed to arrange his bed (sej), whence their name. They enumerate fourteen exogamous sections:—Gadoi or Garoi; Hāra; Nachhniwār; Bhāradwaj; Chobdār; Sāni; Pachauri; Sikhaiya; Hardwār; Gond; Kasābka; Sawār; Kachhwār. They still regard Chanderi as their head quarters. They have a tribal council (panchāyat) of which the Panch or President is not hereditary, but is elected to act from time to time by the votes of the members.

2. A man may not marry in his own section nor the daughter of his maternal uncle or father's Marriago rules. sister. He cannot marry or keep as a concubine a woman of another caste. He may marry two sisters. They generally marry their daughters in the sections from which they take their brides. Polygamy is allowed, and all the wives hold equal rank. Widows are allowed to marry. When a widow agrees to marry a man, she gives him her silver finger ring and he shows it to his brethren and informs them that he has arranged to marry such and such a widow. The giving of the ring is understood to mark the engagement and is known as ndnon. After he brings home the widow he feeds his brethren. Girls have no liberty before marriage, and infidelity is punished by a fine on both parties. Until her parents pay the fine, the girl cannot be married in the tribe. Girls are married at the age of nine and boys at ten. The marriage is arranged by the girl's barber. A marriage is invalid without the consent of the girl and her parents. It is only widows who are allowed to select husbands for themselves. The girl's parents, if they can afford it, are expected to give her a dowry, the amount of which is fixed by the barber. A marriage cannot be annulled on account of any physical defects appearing in either party after the ceremony has been performed. A man can divorce his wife in the presence and with the sanction of the tribal council for habitual infidelity. Divorced women can marry again by the inferior form, and the children of divorced women who marry again, widows and regularly married brides rank equally for the purpose of inheritance. The levirate is allowed under the usual restriction; but the widow may, if she please, marry an outsider. When she does so, her husband's brother has the right of custody of the children of her first marriage, and they succeed to their father's goods, while their mother gets nothing. But if she marries the younger brother of her husband, she has a right to maintenance out of the estate of her first husband. There is no fiction whereby the children of the levir are affiliated to his late brother.

- S. While a woman is pregnant, they rub her head with powdered gram and water; but none of them can give an explanation of the custom. A woman of the Basor caste acts as midwife, and her place is then taken by the barber's wife. After the birth there are singing and dancing, and alms are distributed. When the child is a boy, the brethren are fed on the tenth day; if it be a girl, on the sixth day. There is no trace of the couvade. The mother remains secluded after her confinement for only three days. They have no rule of adoption. When boys arrive at puberty, the hair of their faces and heads is shaved with great solemnity.
- 4. The marriage arrangements are made by the family barber. When the matter is settled, the bridegroom gives the barber a rupee as his fee. Then the wedding day is fixed, and once that is done the match cannot be broken off. The various stages are:—the abtauni or ancinting of the pair; the setting up of the marriage shed (mdaro); the presentation of jewelry to the bride; the marking her forehead with red lead (sendirdin); the giving away of the bride (kanyddin) and the revolution round the central pole (bhanwar). The binding portions of the ceremony are the walking round the shed and the giving away of the bride.
 - 5. They burn their dead and throw the ashes into the Ganges.

Death rites. At the time of cremation they are particular to perform the rite of ara or kapalkriya by breaking the skull to allow the spirit to reach the other world. They do not perform the regular sraddha. But to remove his impurity, the officiating Brahman makes the man who fired the pyre offer a sacred ball (pinda) to the manes of the dead. The death impurity lasts ten days, and that of a woman after her confinement for three days.

6. The Sejwaris do not adopt the tenets of any particular sect. Their priests are Jhijhantiya Brahmans and, like the Bundelas, whose servants they are, they are wershippers of Râma and Krishna. The women worship snakes at the Nâgpanchami and the banyan tree at the Barsait festival. But they are not allowed to enter the temples of the higher Hindu gods. They are very much afraid of domons which they propitiate with offerings of cocounuts and athwais or a mixture of eight ingredients, of which treads, cardamoms, and turmeric are the chief part. They believe in the Evil Eye which can be obviated by moving some mustard and sait over the head of the child.

only from the hands of Brahmans and Rajputs and members of their own tribe. Their social rank is very low. They serve the Bundelas as menial servants, some serve as village watchmen and act as guards for bankers. A few cultivate lands as tenants without occupancy rights. At times of rejoicing, such as marriages and births, they get presents from their Bundela masters.

Distribution of the Sejmari according to the Census of 1891.

		Die	TRIOR	5	1				Number.
Lalitper			7	4		,			386
						Tur	TAL	. [386

Sengar.—A sept of Râjputs who, like the Gautam, claim descent from Singhi or Siringhi Rishi, whose daughter Basantiya is said to have been married to Somapâla, King of Kanauj. They say that their sneestor Pûran Deva emigrated to the Dakkhin and thence to Dhâr. From thence they were forced to go to Bandhugarh in Rîwa, and thence to Kanâr in Jalaun, near Jagmohanpur in Etâwah. Their Râja Bisukh Deva or Sukh Deva founded the modern house. His date lies between 1065 and 1165 A.D. He married Deva Kula, daughter of Jay Chand Rāthaur, of Kanauj, and after his defeat by Shahâb-ud-dîn Ghori the power of the Sengars increased and the river Basindh was renamed Sengar in their honour.¹

¹ Coners Report, North-Western Provinces, I, Appendic 81, agg.

- 2. Their occupation of Oudh I dates from about 1527 A.D., when Shaikh Bayazid, one of the Afghan generals of the Lodi Dynasty, submitted to Babar. This officer had in his service two Sengars from Jagmohanpur, across the Jumna, by name Jagat Sâh and Gopal Sinh. They raised and commanded a cavalry regiment, which was cantoned near the village of Simri, in Pargana Asoha of the Unão District, and after his defeat they settled quietly down in the Pargana, making Kautha their head-quarters. "For eleven generations they remained peaceably there, keeping the Lodhas, who had been the original proprietors, in subjection. During this time they were joined by another family of the same clan, who followed them from Jagmohanpur and settled in Parsandan. In the eleventh generation, the Lodhas, who had nover thoroughly acquiesced in their loss of position, suddenly rose against the Sengars, and killed the majority of them, but allowed the women and children to escape. The fugitives did not think it safe to go to their brotherhood in Parsandan, but fled to Jagmohanpur, and returning thence with an accession of strength, the sons of the murdered Sengars, Askaran on GopAl's side, and Gurbu on Jagat Sinh's side, recovered their father's possessions in the country."
- 3. The Ghâzipar branch frace their origin to Phaphûnd in Etâwah. They worship under the name of Nâth Bâba, a deified member of the tribe named Amar Sinh. Before the establishment of British authority they managed to secure for themselves an unrivalled reputation for courage, independence, and insubordination. They have now abandoned their old turbulent habits; they behaved well during the Mutiny, and are now loyal and peaceful citizens. In Jâlaun they claim to have come from Lanka or Ceylon and to be descended from Singhi Rishi. They seem to have been originally Brâhmans who intermarried with Râjputs. According to General Sleeman, the Sengars are almost the only class of Râjputs in Bundelkhand, Baghelkhand, Rîwa, and Sâgar, who used to put their female infants to death; in Oudh they are almost the only sept who do not.
 - 4. There is a tribe in Gujarat called Sanghar who are on perhaps doubtful authority, connected with them. They are more pro-

[|] Elliott, Chronicles of Dudo, 45, ag.

² Oldham, Manto. L. 575, 49.

A Gasatteer North-Western Provinces, I, 200.

⁴ Journey through Outh, I, 222, note.

bably allied to the Panjab Chhangars and perhaps to the Zingari of Europe.¹

5. In Jâlaun they give brides to the Chandel, Bais, Bisen, and Parihâr septs, and marry their sons to the Kachhwâha, Bhadauriya, Râthaur, Sisodiya, and Hâra. In Ballia they take brides from the Karchhuliya, Bisen, Donwâr, Haibobans, Kâkau, Raghubansi, Kausik, Nikumbh, Sakarwâr, Udmatiya, and Pachhtoriya septs. They give their daughters to the Bais, Haibobans, Ujjaini, Kausik, Sirnet, Râjkumâr, Sûrajbans, Parihâr, Karchhuliya, Raghubansi, Sombansi, Udmatiya, Nikumbh, Barwâr, Kinwâr, Chanhân, Kâkan and Pachhtoriya. Their gotra is said to be Gautam.

Distribution of the Sengar Ros puts according to the Cenaus of 1891.

	Dist	RICT	9.		Numbers	Di	state	TES.		Number.
Muzaffaro	ngaz			9	2	Lulitpu .				100
Bulandshi	hr				56	Benares .				79
Aligarh				. 2	74	Mirrapor		- 1		42
Mathura			160	×	18	Janupur .	35.			8
Agra					171	Ghâzipur	113			1,913
Farrukhál	băs.		CLA		1,451	Ballia .				32,189
Mainpuri				4	040	Gorakhpur	14	1	+	1,553
Etawah					11,164	Basti .	4.		4	218
Etch					28	Azamgarh				282
Budáun					21	Lucknew				73
Morádábá	d				43	Unko .				2,775
Shahjahar	par				91	Raa Bareli				710
Pilibid					43	Sitapur .				183
Cawnpur					5,233	Hardei .		0.00		108
Fatehpur					1,028	Kheri .				75
Pânda					395	Fainfibld				163
Hawirput	7				557	Gonda .				15
Allahábád				4	595	Bahráich				47
Jhanei				16	601
Jalaun					6,856			TOTAL		59,425

Shaikh, Shekh (an Arabic word meaning an "older,"
"chief," "a venerable old man").—The name should properly be applied to tribes of pure Arab descent; but it has now been applied to a much more vulgar use, and is adopted by converts from the meaner Hindu tribes to Islam. This is marked in the common proverb—Perhayin Quando bidem, badaran quahtem Shaikh; ghalla chun uradu shawad, imadi Sayyid meshawem—"The first year I was a butcher, the next a Shaikh; this year, if prices rise, I shall be a Sayyid."

¹ Bombay Gaestleer, V. 95, XIII, 718.

- 2. At the last Census the Shaikhs of these Provinces were enumerated in the following tribes :- Abbasi, who take their name from Abbās, the paternal uncle of Muhammad; Ansāri from Al-' Ansār, "the helpers," a term used for the early converts of Al-Madinah, but when all the citizens of Al-Madinah were ostensibly converted to Islâm, they were all named 'Ansår, while those Muslims who accompanied the Prophet from Makkah to Al-Madinah were called Muhajirûn or "exiles"; Bahlim; Bani Isrâli or "children of Israel"; Faridi or followers of the famous Saint Bâba Farid Shakkarganj of Pak Pattan in the Montgomery District; Fardqi, who take their name from the Khalif Umar, surnamed Farûq, "the discriminator between truth and fulsehood"; Hashimi, after Hashim, the great-grandfather of Muhammad, who according to the tradition, was surnamed Hashim on account of his liberality in distributing bread (Aashm, "to break bread") to the pilgrims at Makkah; Ja'fari after Ja'far, a cousin of Muhammad, who from his charity was called Abul Masskin, "the father of the poor"; or Ja'far, one of the twelve Imams; Khurasani, "residents of the land of Khurasan"; Kidwai; Qureshi, after the Arabic tribe to which the Prophet belonged; it is hence the favourite tribe to which persons of doubtful origin claim affinity, and many of them are probably not of genuine Arab descent; Milki, probably the same as the Maliks, who were originally a Persian tribe, though more recently the word has been used as a title, like Khan or Beg; Pirzada or "offspring of the saint"; a term of very wide meaning which may mean the descendants or followers of any spiritual guide; Siddiqi, who take their name from the first Khalif, Abu Bakr, who received from the Prophet the title of As Siddiq or "one who speaks the truth"; Sulaimani from Solomon; 'Ulwi or 'Alawiyah, who take their name from the Khalif 'Ali Murtaza and 'Usmani from 'Usman, the fourth Khalifa.
 - 8. The Shaikhs, of course, follow, or pretend to follow, all the rules of Islâm. This the real Shaikhs do; but those who are revent converts from Hinduism, maintain many of the practices of the castes from which they have been drawn.

Distribution of Staiklie according to the Census of 1891.

Torer		0,840	23,140	19,734	80,384	23,814	17,15	13,004	99,055	21,155	13,306	111,719	18,050-	13,957	57,486	40,004	140,818	20,000
Others.		1,982	$,390	1,986	6,481	2,332	2,020	6,075	11,720	4,635	7,652	4.054	5,687	11,603	8,000	11,542	81,613	4,60L
Anhast.		100	4355	443	88	24	012	97	110	8228	22	87	-	Š.	100	328	870	292
nwa.		i	h	230	9	0	ŧ	i	kis.	2	1	18	i	8-	4	8	18	23
Subilinian		•	E	++	à	64	E	i		55	1	1		63	1	12	1	H
Jelioie		2,213	10,507	10,079	12,851	0,701	3,902	2,603	6,018	39,587	3,000	8,563	1,988	12,738	10,148	14,730	93,678	1,081
Physids		1	1	R	1		1	1	I	25	-	ī	1	ŧ	1	1	1	-
THER		1	32	3	8	3	I	1	H	10	*	0	*	1	Ţ	ī	1	3
Дазовру		3,882	8,316	5,043	11,778	7,510	8,090	3,618	14,231	30,148	2,600	2,57	4,788	20,000	27,429	30,070	24,503	10,507
Trappy.		1	i	7	1	1	ı	1	1	22	1	40	1	I	į	1	į
Khanskal	1	71	41	a		早	154	191	ñ	*	R	I	100	1	1	I	lą.	R
747,87	8	li	1	1	1	1	į	-	-	1	1		1	22.	:		m
Habimi,	N		D	13	1	P	I	1		1	1	27	m	9.0	1	E	130	n
lpfuril		19	1,677	829	200	2	100	69	403	100	2	R	20.0	177	303	100	2,764	0
Parith	Г	-1	1	8	1	1	N	1	n	Si.	1	1	1	1	1	20	108	*
fitted leafil.		i	*	ei	-	Ħ	974	$	a	Я		-	200	808	1	1	5	961
, बाद्यीतं वर्षा			Д	8	118	â	1	*	611	123	21	I	130	a	1	10	30	100
Andrea		347	3,566	3,086	100	3,650	300	92	340	1	98	2	200	1,047	1997	1,810	3,800	629
Leader's.		911	8	4	n	200	S	li	8	330	E	122	B	118	*	101	400	160
			•		٧	-	•					,					4
		6															,
ice.				+						-
Diseasors,				*	*		*				*						•	,
		Dakm Din	Saharangur	Marsffranger	Maerut .	Bylandshahr	Allgam.	Mathora .	Agra .	Pareskhald	Mainguri .	Etawnh .	Erab .	Sandly .	Bigner .	Budlen .	Murhanh	Shikahisper

		16	0	8		2		1	7	1	4,738	ŧ	£	2,579	1	ŧ	평	1,00	11,640
8		230	g		a	E	10	61		+	1/088	1	ī	19,689	1		E	11,907	886,50
1		154			163	880	n	138		1	2,123	1	#	18,033	8		956	5,400	20,510
21		8	1		8	282	ŧ	į		I	1,916	E	1	4,056			36	6,403	11,805
2.0		4	n	_		ti	1	92		ŧ	9	1	ŧ	1,888	*		ä	3,680	9,294
103		1,528	ı	_	1	tgo	450	100		E	P.TE	1,386		401,00	3		1,558	9,887	690,068
17		191	25	_	*	×		1		ì	1,513	4	1	1,556	15		8	4,370	H, 2668
68		2	138	_	1	34		1		I	1,705	1	i	1,651	I	_	8	8,438	0,000
-		n	8		1		Î	.1		*	353	1	97	200	3		*	1,006	1,617
n		8	ŧ	_	1	114	Ħ	117		I,	2,064	34	1	34,638	- 1	I	-	8,239	28,876
g		9	*	_	1	191	-1	1		1	2,007	ij	ŧ	13,000	- 1	1	32	11,454	27,488
183	77	List.	1		n	Time.	P	74		I	3,883	300	1	11,201		R	I	4,216	28,330
_		6	ł	_	10	988	3	38		1	158	120	1	111/111	Ħ	1	39	3,666	11,386
90		1,714	1		7	308	1	1		7.	1,209	Ä	1	4,312	- 1	į	80	SQ.	8,082
8	ж.	£.131	1			25	4	ï	_	Đ,	0,055	180	#	31,137	ŧ	ŧ	2	4444	32,755
52		1,043	1,130			1,730	i	1		y E	10,108	72	1	26,282	1	_	1,611	11,529	56,590
_	-	8,679	1		ħ	1,580	5	1		I	18,018	8		27,003	8	_	1,50%	7,912	401,104
		1	1		ű.	1	1	I		1	1	ŧ	İ	899	-1	_	1	1,665	2,019
1		1	1		1	1	Į i	1		1	1	1	I	$	1		1	2,670	2,017
:		#	Of a	_	1	ı	ï	Ţ		ı	2,404	ŧ	1	R.847	1	_	8	2,396	18831
TUE.		1,345	1	_	1	488	H	1		200	9,029	8	1	34,365	*	_	200	15,488	65,339
4		100	1	_	316	402	2	1		B	244	8		11,104	1		404	7,356	22,014
п		1110	1	_		212	1	i		116	8	30	9	8,728	2	_	28	4,188	18,256
15		355	1	_	1	100	31	i		210	2,316	447	1	20,412	1	_	318	8,77.6	13,046

Distribution of Shaikbs according to the Ceneus of 1891-nucluded.

Toler	27,496	30,040	23,615	40,866	18,484	10,967	28,286	38,769	1,302,606
минфо	8,090	2,347	7,240	1,000	2,387	1,265	6,056	7, 618	300,177
"Membrish"	989	116	200	2,038	69	13	346	380	10,700
140.	10	11	1	11	1	41	-	#	1,570
Julentalis	-	1	1	Ŧ	4	1	- 1	T.	187
n squife:	15,187	8,975	14,074	177,02	10,050	4,007	9,436	37,876	610,668
Phride	1	1	i	1	M	1	1	*	188
MBK	1	45	Ř	22	171	100	900	25.0	$20.5
Quinstr	2,088	1,716	4,511	7,563	5,768	4,877	1,751	1,388	200,300
Levelin		1	i	300	4	F	I	27	3,453
Antennak	-	8	1	1	5		39	Ť	1,482
Jan'st.		1	*	1	ŧ	1	2	1	15
Heater	1	Y	1	1	Ħ	1	8	*	1,123
Parieti.	300	100	P.	3,648	483	330	2,080	630	38,855
Janes.	1	a	1	1	*	a	9	3	100
Their Least.	*	-	1	1	-	1	ī	3	1,58
Bublin.	1	I	1	977	Ħ	1	1	1	3,178
.lasted	8/9	989	1,518	744	1,007	400	III	6,886	86,110
Janda.	0	2 is	188	4	0	E	22	130	7,817
	+		+				*
									PAE To
atte		٠		*				*
Design		4
	Inridol .	Charl .	'ntsthat .	· spanie	tahraleh .	ulthayer	artabana.	Memberki

Singraur. —A tribe found only in the Fatehpur District to the number of 9,388. They claim to be Råjputs and descendants of one Sringi Rishi, who migrated from Ajudhya to Benares. They marry in the orthodox way, and widow-marriage is forbidden. They will eat kackoki pakki only with their own Bråhman family priest or members of their own tribe. Their claim to be Råjputs does not appear to be universally admitted, and by one account they are really Lodhas. Under their leader Daryão Sinh they gave much trouble in the Fatehpur District during the Mutiny, and it is only in the Khâga and Khakhror Tahsîls that their pretensions to Råjput origin are to any extent recognised.

Sirnet.—A sept of Rajpute found principally in the Gorakhpur Division. There are various accounts of the origin of the name. According to one story they got the title from some Muhammadan king in whose service they were. Their chief was in the habit of wearing on his head a cloth of gold called net, and the king, not choosing to recollect the Hindu name, called him Sirnet or "the man with the golden cloth on his head " (sir). By another account they take their name from some place called Srinngar. A third legend is told in connection with the Nikumbh sept and tells how one of them allowed his head to be cut off on a sword placed neross the door-way in preference to bowing his head before one of the Delhi Emperors. Dr. Oldbam suggests that the name is derived from sira "hend" and neta (Sanskrit netri, "a leader ""). All these are mere speculations and of little value.

2. The Oudh story is that the Sirnet kingdom of Bansi in the Basti District was founded by Banwari, the third son of Jaswant Sinh, Dikshit; but the Sirnets of Bansi claim a higher rank than this legend would give them, and do not acknowledge any connection with the Dikshits. The Unaula Raja told Dr. Buchanan that they came from Assam.* The Gorakhpur branch ascribed the crigin of the Satasi Raj to Chandra Sen, who was an emigrant from Lahore. He treacherously murdered the Domkatar or Donwar Raja and seized his dominions. In Basti they are said to allow their daughters to grow up to womanhood, and do not allow them to marry.* In

⁴ Mainly based on a note by M. Hashmatalla, S. C. S.

¹ Oh deigner Mesons., I, 50, eq.

³ Elliatt, Chronicles of Undo, 35.

^{*} Eastern India, II, 358.

[!] Selections of Records, North-Western Provinces, I, 197.

Ghāzipur they call themselves Nikumbh and claim kinship with the Gorakhpur family, as represented by the Rājas of Unaula, Bānsi, and Rudrapur. "They are one of the most noble looking races in the District and are generally well disposed and on good terms with the District officials; but quite ready to join in a general rebellion to recover their estates."

Distribution of the Siruet Edjputs according to the Cenaus of 1891.

Die	2101	4.	Number.	Dist	RIGI	8.		Number.
Fatebpur			18	Azamgarlı				474
Banda			1,196	Lucknow			i.	6
Hamirpur			1	Rac Bareli	٠			153
Allahâladd			86	FnizAbåd	4		٠	56
Benares			506	Bahralch			+	67
Ghāzīpur		à.	ā	Sultanpur	·			338
Bollin		- 66	495	Pariābgarh	ì.	1		192
Gorakhpur			11,810
Basti		N	452	7- 4	Ton	AL .		19,486

Soeri, Soiri, Suiri.—A small tribe found in parts of the Allahâbâd and Benares Divisions, about whom there has been much not very fruitful speculation. According to Mr. Risley they are known by the names of Savar, Sahar, Sanr, Sar, Sayar, Suir, Siwiri, and are "a Dravidian cultivating and servile tribe of Orissa, Chota Nâgpur, Western Bengal, Madras, and the Central Provinces. Colonel Dalton regards them as Dravidian, while Fredrick Muller, General Cunningham, and Mr. R. Cust place them on linguistic grounds in the Kolarian group of tribes. The evidence from language, however, is meagre and inconclusive; while, on the other hand, it is tolerably certain that the Savars, scattered and partially Hinduised as they are, represent the main body of an ancient race, an isolated fragment of which survives in the Malé or Saur of the Râjmahâl hills."

2. General Cunningham a identifies them with the Sauras about

I Triber and Caster, II, 241, sq.

Archwological Reports, XVII, 112, aq.

Damoh and Sågar. The origin of the name Savara, he says, " must be sought for outside the language of the Aryans. In Sanskrit Savara simply means 'corpse,' From Herodotus, however, we learn the Soythian word for an axe was sagaris and as g and v are interchangeable letters, savar is the same word as sagar. seems, therefore, not unreasonable to infer that the tribes who were so called took their name from their habit of carrying axes. Now it is one of the striking peculiarities of the Savaras that they are rarely seen without an axe in their hands. This peculiarity has been frequently noticed by all who have seen them." In opposition to this it may be urged that the word Savara, if it be, as some believe, derived from sava "a corpse," comes from the root sav, " to cause to decay," and need not necessarily be of non-Aryan origin, while, on the other hand, no distinct inference can be drawn from the use of the axe by the Savaras, when it is equally commonly used by various other Dravidian jungle tribes, such as Korwas, Bhuiyas and the like.

3. Of the Savarus, who are supposed to have been the ancestors of the existing race, not much is known. Of them Sir W. Hunter writes 1-"The Savaras appear in very early Sanskrit writings and are spoken of with more than usual detestation. As the Sûdras or aboriginal tribes, who had been subdued into the servile caste of the Aryan Commonwealth, sprung from the feet of Brahma, so the Savaras and other forest races, who successfully withstood the invaders, proceeded from the sweat of a cow.2 They were goblins, they were devils, they were raw eaters, they were man-eaters, and the Viehnu Purana has concentrated the national antipathy towards them in its picture of a dwarfish race, with flat noses and a skin the colour of a charred stake. Another sacred text assures us that they were as black as crows, with tawny hair, red eyes, a chin jutting out, short arms and legs, and the typical flat nose. A third Sanskrit sage adds a protuberant belly, drooping ears and an ogre mouth. They seem to have made their individuality very strongly felt in ancient India. The beginning of their territory long marked the last point of the Aryan advance. They are often spoken of as horder tribes, who resisted the Sanskrit invaders, scattered armies, and carned for themselves the name of the 'terrible Savaras.' Their name even found its way into Greek geographies, and the ancient kingdom of Kalinga was known to the distant Islands of the Indian Archipelago, while still a terra incognita to Northern India," On the whole it seems at least probable that the name Savara was a generic title for the aggregate of the Dravidian races who inhabited the line of hills which rise along the south of the valleys of the Jumna and the Ganges. It is thus that they appear in the Katha Sarit Sâgara of Somadeva and in one of these tales the Savara is described as running up "stained with dust, bow in hand, with his hair tied up in a knot behind with a creeper, black himself and wearing a loin-cincture of vilva leaves," in short very much like what the Juângs and similar tribes were almost to the present day."

¹ Orises, I, 176, sq.

¹ Muir, Ancient Sansbrit Tests, 1, 391.

- 4. Modern observers give much the same account of them. Dr. Ball 2 describes the Savaras of Ganjam as small but wiry, often very dark in colour, and sometimes quite black, which agrees with Mr. Sterling's account of the tribe in Orissa, "Their hair is generally tied in a top-knot, and sometimes it is cut short over the forehead, two long locks being permitted to hang over the ears, A few individuals have frizzled shocks, with which no such arrangement is attempted. Most of the men have small square beards. Of these races in Bengal, with whose appearance I am most familiar, they reminded me most strongly of the Bhumij, who belong to the Munda family; but I could also perceive in them some points of resemblance to the Dravidian Pahariyas of the Rajmahal hills. They have not, however, the manly hearing and good physique of the latter. Their manner of dancing resembles that of the Rajmahal Pahariyas, as I have on one occasion witnessed it, rather than that of either the Santals or Kols."
- 5. Writing of Ghazipur Dr. Oldham 'says that the Soiri strongly resemble the gypsies of Europe; their women wears tartan dress, and often have a kind of horn projecting from the forehead as an ornament. They live in light and easily moved booths, made of grass and reeds; are fond of intoxicating drinks, and eat the flesh of swine and oxen. They provure the wives for their young men by kidnapping female children, and live principally by jugglery, coin-

Turney, Translation, II, 284.

[&]quot;Jungle Life, 267.

Oriena, 42, quoted by Risley, lec. oil.

⁴ Memo., 1, 57.

ing false money, and theft. They bring the bones of deceased relatives from long distances to the Ganges, which seemed to Dr. Oldham to indicate that the Ganges valley was once the home of the tribe. Another name of them is, he says, Sansi, but they will seldom admit the name of either Sansi or Soiri, and commonly say that they are Banjaras, Kanjars or Nats.

6. At the last Census the Soiris are found to have disappeared from the Districts of the Benares Division, except Benares itself. The fact is that within one decennial period the process of converting them into Rajputs has so far advanced that they now call themselves Sûrajbansis, and repudiate the name of Soiri. This is a very remarkable example, like that of the Kharwars who have become Benbaus Rajputs, of a process which has no doubt gone on extensively in former times, and by means of which there is no doubt that more than one of the Rajput septs has been formed. But in their appearance the so-called Sürajbansi Rajputs of Mirzapur show unmistakeable signs of non-Aryan origin, and there cannot be any doubt that they belong to the Dravidian branch and are closely akin to the Kols and Cheros who live in their neighbourhood. They assert that they give daughters to respectable septs like the Raghubausi, Bais, and Chandel, and receive girls from the Bais. But there is good ground for believing this to be incorrect, and the real fact seems to be that, if they ever intermarry with Rajputs, it is only with bastard members of some sept which bars marriage with such people. There is in almost every Rajput sept a class of people who are in the Western Districts as Ganrua and to the East as Suraitwal who are the result of connections of Rajput youths who find a difficulty, owing to infanticide or poverty, in finding respectable wives, with Natnis, Kanjarins or other prostitutes. Such children are, of course, excluded from full tribal privileges, and it is with them that tribes like the Soiri, who are on their promotion to become a regular Râjput sept, form marriage alliances,

7. These Mirzapur Soiri Sûrajbansis have no very distinct tradition of their origin. Some of them say that they were once rulers of the Majhwâr Pargana in the Benares District, whence they were expelled by the Barhauliya Rûjputs. They allege that they still procure priests, who are Sarwariya Brâhmans, from the village of Keshopur in that Pargana.

Others say that, like the legitimate Sûrajbansis, they came from Ajudhya. Another account is that their first ancestor was a per-Vot. IV. son named Garg, a Gautam Râjput, who settled at Bardiha near Mânda, in the Allahâbâd District, and kept as his mistress a Bhar girl, whose father he had treacherously killed. He is said to have lived in the time of Jay Chand of Kanauj. His descendants are alleged to be the present Soiri-Sûrajbansis.

- 8. However this may be, there is ample evidence from the customs of the tribe that they are not genuine Rajpots. Thus, they manage their tribal affairs by means of a tribal council (panchayat) which no genuine Rajputs do. They permit widow marriage and the levirate, and they have, as might have been expected, to pay heavily for brides, and for this reason many of them are unable to contract a regular marriage. Only those who are married wear the Brahmanical cord (janeu), and they have no regular rite of investiture, but merely hang it over their shoulders as they are going through the marriage ceremony. Again, they drive the plough with their own hands, which no real Rajput will do; and contrary to standard custom, when they are cremating the dead, they throw a handful of mustard seed (sarson) on the pyre. In other respects they follow the usual standard form in their domestic ceremonies. fact, in their desire to be regarded as genuine Rajputa they are particularly careful to maintain a pretence of extreme orthodoxy.
- 9. They worship Mahabir, Mahadeva, Sitala Mai, and Amina and Bandê, two of the deified quintette of the Panchon Pîr. A special worship of these deities is performed at the Nauratra of Kuar. Mahabir and Mahadeva receive an offering of sweetmeats, a Brahmanical cord, a piece of cloth dyed in turmeric, a burnt offering ($600), and a lamp lighted with ghi. To Amina and Bandê they offer a plate of sweet cakes (rot), rice cooked with milk ($600), and an image of Amina made of silver. To the Panchon Pîr generally they present sweet cakes (malida) and a sacrifice of a goat or fowl, which is done by a Dafali. To Sîtala Mai they present a goat, cakes, and some halus sweetmeat in the months of Chait and Kuar. Mahabîr is usually worshipped on a Tuesday in the month of Sāwan. All these offerings are consumed by the worshippers themselves, except that to the Panchon Pîr which is taken by the Dafali officient.
- 10. They do not eat beef or drink spirits. They eat goat's flosh, mutton, venison, and birds like pigeons. None of the higher castes will take food or water from their hands. They naturally hold a low social rank, and are not regarded with more respect than Koiris. They are, in the Mirzapur District, in poor circumstances. None of them are landlords; a few cultivate as tenants, but the most of them are landless day labourers and serve as messengers or as stone cutters in the quarries about Chunâr. In Mirzapur, at least, they appear to have abandoned their old criminal habits, and are now a quiet, depressed race of people who very seldom come under the notice of the Courts.

Distribution of the Soiris according to the Census of 1891.

Dis	TBICT	Dis.	Number.	Dis	TRIOTE.		Number.
Allahábád			465	Benares			2,023
Jhanni			3,058	+
Lalitpur			12,273	li .	TOTA	L	17,822

Solankhi, Solanki.—A sept of Rajputa. One derivation of the name is from the Sanskrit sulakshana, "having auspicious marks," They are supposed to have succeeded the Chavadas at Anhalwada about 951 A. D.1 The Bhal and, according to others, the Baghel sept are an offshoot from them, Another name for them, Chalukiya, is said to be derived from the fact that when created out of the Agnikunda they were formed in the hollow of the hand (chullu, challu). Of them Colonel Tod writes : "-" Though we cannot trace the history of this branch of the Agnikulas to such periods of antiquity as the Pramara or Chanhan, it is from the deficiency of materials, rather than any want of celebrity, that we are unable to place it in this respect on a level with them. tion of the Bard makes the Solankis important as princes of Sura on the Ganges, ere the Rathaurs obtained Kananj. The genealogical tree claims Lokot, said to be the ancient Lahore, as a residence, which makes them of the same branch (edkh) Madwani as the Chauhans. Certain it is that in the eighth century we find the Langahas and Togras inhabiting Multan and the surrounding country, and the chief opponents of the Bhattis on their establishment in the They were princes of Kalyan on the Malabar coast, which city still exhibits vestiges of ancient grandeur. It was from Kalvan that a scion of the Solanki tree was taken and engrafted on the royal stem of the Chawaras of Anhalwara Patan."

[.] I Dr. J. Wilson, Indian Antiquary, III, 227.

2 Annals, 1, 102.

In the reign of Chaond Râc, the son of this prince Bhojrāj, the kingdom of Anhalwara was devastated by Mahmud of Ghazni. Colonel Tod divides the Solankhis of Rajputāna into sixteen branches: Baghel, Bîrpur, Behila, Bhurta, Kalâcha, Langaha, Togra, Briku, Surki, Sirwariya, Racka, Ranikiya, Kharara, Tantiya, Almecha, Kalamor.

2. The Solankhis in these Provinces hold a respectable rank and give their daughters to Chauhâns, Bhadauriyas, and Jâdons; they take brides from the Katiyâr, Tomar, Râthaur, Bâchhal, Bais, Gaur, Pundîr, Bargûjar, and some Chauhân families.

Distribution of the Solankhi Bajonts according to the Census of 1891.

Dis	raici	13.		Number.	Dray	RICI	.8.	Number.
Saharanpar				6	Jhānsi			88
Meerat .		i	4	184	Jalann			104
Bulandabab				375	Lalitpur		1	33
Aligarh .		+		864	Benares			60
Mathura		-10		154	Mirrapue		٧.	12
Agra .			1	456	Jampar	7		39
Favrukhábů	d			864	Ballia .			426
Mainpuri				773	Gozakhpur			842
BtAwah				57	Busti .	ů.		287
Etah .	,			5,636	Asamgarh			7
Bareilly				264	Lucknow		4	73
Budhun				1,558	Unão .			71
Moradabad				131	Ras Bareli			10
Shabjabanpı	ar.	÷		350	Sitapor			65
Pilibhit		4		75	Hardoi	,		115
Cawnpur				60	Kheri .			100
Banda .				94	Sulfanpur			4
Hamlepur	٠			78
Allaháládal				27		To	ZAL	14,305

Sombansi.-A sept of Rajputs who claim to be of the race of Some or the moon. Of them Mr. Bennet 1 writes :- "This tribe are found at the beginning of connected history at the Fort of Jhusi near Allahabad. They have no further traces of an immigration, and their tradition connects them for an indefinite period with their present dominions. The family worship is paid to five saints, four of them princes of the Sombansi blood, and the fifth a Gaharwar Raia of Benares, who successfully abstracted themselves into nonentity during the Dwapara Yuga, The principal of these, Ala Rikh or Rishi, gave his name to the town and Pargana of Alarikhpur, contracted into Aror, and since named Partabgarh, and is perhaps identical with the Atap Rikh of Dalman tradition, who resided in the Ganges forests, and whose teaching enabled Dal and Balto attain their wide dominion." A reference to these worthies will be found in the article on the Bhars. "Two remarks may be madehere ; first, that the worship of the manes of their ancestors is common to all the Sombansis and several low eastes in their neighbourhood. Barê Purukh ("the great old man") is one of the favourite local penates, and Kare Deo, the snake, the chief object of home devotion which he shares with Siau, the jackal. Another is that the most ancient tradition discovers the Sombansis on the northern, and the dawn of history on the southern, bank of the Ganges. An intermediate tradition, attested by the numerous remains of their peculiar forts, points to the existence of a Bhar Raj in the territory before and after occupied by the Chhatris. The commencement of the pedigree is, as usual, marked by some historical convulsion. Sakrāma Sinha had three sons—one of whom went to Nepal, the second to Hardoi, while the third remained at Jhusi. The son of the last was cursed by a Muhammadan Faqir, Shaikh Taqi, and lost his kingdom. The usual posthumous son was born in exile, and, with the name of Lakhana Sena, founded the kingdom of Arer. One of his sons was a convert to Islam, and in the eighth generation some subordinate centres of power began to branch off from the main Raj. No prince of this race attained distinction before Partab Sinh, who, in the last quarter of the seventeenth century, consolidated the power of his clan, built a huge new fort at Aror, which has since been known by his name, and assumed all characteristics of independent sovereignty between the territories of the Bach-gotis, the Râja of Mânikpur, and the Kânhpuriyas whom he subsequently defeated."

Claus of Rdd Barell, 31, 49.

- 2. There is a section of the sept called Chauhāna, said to be descended from Bhim Sen, who fought the Rākshasa Handavi and married his daughter. In Farrukhābād the Pargana of Khakatmau was entirely overspread by the Sombanais of the Baiyāgar (Pydgra) gotra. They trace descent from Randhir Sinh, who lived thirteen generations ago. They founded the Chând dynasty in Kumaun, and trace their descent, some to Jhūsi, and some to Nopāl. The Rautela of Kumaun are descendants of a junior branch, some to Jhūsi.
- 3. In Sultanpur they are reported to take brides from the Bilkhariya, Tashaiya, Chandauriya, Kath Bais, Bhâlê Sultân, Raghubansi, Gargbansi, Râj Kumâr, Bachgoti, and Bandhalgoti: and to give brides to the Tilekehandi Bais, Mainpuri Chauhâns, Mahal Sêrajbansis, and Bisens of Majhauli. They claim to belong to the Sûrya gotra. In Farrukhâbâd they are said to give brides to the Sûrajbansi, Râthaur, Chauhân, and Bhadauriya, and to receive girls from the Bamtelê, Chamar Gaur, Panwâr, and Gaharwâr. In Bareilly they take girls from the Salwant Gaur, Bargûjar, Tomar, Tânk, Bais, and Pundîr; and give girls to the Katheriya, Chauhân, Bhadauriya. In Hardoi they say that they belong to the Vyâgra gotra; take girls from the Chandel, Gaur, Gaharwâr, Pramâr, Bais, Ahban, and Nikumbh; while they give brides to the Chauhân, Râthaur, and Bhadauriya.

Distribution of the Sombansi Rajputs according to the Census of 1891.

-	Draw	віста,		Hindns.	Muham- madans.	TOTAL.
Sahāranput				1		1
Muzaffarosgar				2		9
Moorut .				2		2
Bulandahahr				196		196
Mathura .				16		16

¹ Paridogark Settlement Report, 112.

² Seldiement Report, 13.

Afrins en, Himélayan Gasotteer, II, 497, eq. 504, 772, III, 428.

Distribution of the Sombansi Rajputs according to the Census of 1891—continued.

		Dist	arors,				Hinden.	Muham- madane.	TOTAL.
Agra							30	.014	30
Farrukhábá	d		+				4,521	27	4,548
Mainpuri							366		366
EtAwah			4				126		126
Etah							83	7	90
Bareilly			4				2,485	197	2,685
Budkun							333	ket	333
Moradabad							. 133	386	519
Shāhjabānp	ur						2,200	8	2,208
Pilibbit				000	W	n.	268	100	268
Cawnpur			d	٠.,	10.534	10	1,214		1,214
Fatebyar							83		89
Banda		- 40		-	1		31		91
Hamirpur					-3	Š,	503	1	504
Allahábád				-			2,847		2,847
Jhānsi							115		118
Jālatu							115		115
Lalitpur							2		2
Benares							394	51	445
Mirzspur							46		4/
Jaunpar							2,515	32	2,543
Gh4zipur							2,008		2,000
Ballia							85		88
Gorakhpur							617		617
Basti							179	697	876
Azamgarh							8,891	158	9,044
Tarŝi							128		126

Distribution of the Sambaues Rappate seconding to the Census of 1891-concluded.

	Dist	atora.				Hindna.	Mahour- madans.	TOTAL.
Lucknow						935	12	247
Unito						501		501
Råå Bareli	÷					2,770	89	2,859
Sitapur		٠				1,936	13	1,949
Hardoi			4			14,793	180	14,978
Rheri						1,910	604	2,514
Faizābād	*			4		1,800		1,300
Gonda					-	3,167	191	3,167
Bahraioh	+			Al		1,002	67	1,009
Sultanpur		40	30	172	110	1,989	507	2,446
Partabgarl	10	06		me:	03.1	19,823	04	19,887
Parabanki			4	200		377	909	646
			To	TIE.	-	80,987	3,364	84,351

Sorahiya, Surahiya, Suraya.—A tribe of boatmen, fishermen, and cultivators in the Eastern Districts: They are usually classed as a sub-caste of Mallâh. According to Mr. Risley "there is a shadowy connection between the Surahiya and the Châin. The former use the water vessels and huqqus of the latter, but the Châin assuming a higher rank, will smoke, but will neither eat nor intermarry with the Surahiya. The Surahiyas have no tradition of their own except the common one that their ancestors came from the West."

"They profess to be orthodox Hindus, and employ Maithil Brâhmans for religious and oeremonial purposes.

"In practice, however, the greater gods of the Hindu pantheon receive only occasional worship, and the working religion of the caste is concerned with the mysterious group known as the Panch Pîr, Koil Bâbs, the beatman's deity, and Amar Sinh, a canonised Surahiya, who seems to be their special patron. In his honour a part of the house is daubed with cowdung on stated days of every month in the year except Pus (December-January) and Chait (March-April), and goats, rice, sweetmeats, ghi, etc., are offered, and incense burned, the worshippers afterwards partaking of the offerings themselves. In point of social standing the Surahiyas rank immediately below the group of castes from whose hands Brahmans will take water. Thus Koiris, Barars, Gangotas, who belong to that group, will accept sweetmeats from Surahiyas, but will not eat boiled rice in their houses. The characteristic occupation of the caste is boating and fishing.

"Dr. Wise describes them as enterprising and hardy sailors, often met with in Eastern Bengal during the cold sesson, in large trading vessels laden with grain pulse and fuller's earth, which is sold to Mahājans, and a cargo of rice shipped for the return voyage. They are very muscular and large boned, and their physique offers a striking contrast to that of the average Bengali boatman. Some Surahiyas have taken to cultivation, and bold land as occupancy and non-occupancy tenants. Their number, however, is comparatively small, and there are at present no signs of their developing into a sub-caste: in fact, even cultivating Surahiyas are ready to engage themselves as boatmen."

Sûd .- A Panjâbi tribe of whom only a very small number is found in these Provinces. Of them Mr. Ibbetson writes :2-" The Suds are almost entirely confined to the lower hills and the distriots that lie immediately under them as far west as Amritear. Their head-quarters are at Ludhisna and the neighbouring town They are almost wholly mercantile in their purof Machhiwara. suits, though occasionally taking service as clerks, and occupy a social position markedly infetior to that of either the Banya or the They wear a sacred thread (janeu) made of three instead Khatri. of six strands, and many of them practise widow marriage. the exception of a few, who are Sikhs, they are almost all Hindus, but are, in comparison with the other mercantile classes, very lax in the observance of their religion. They indulge freely in meat and wine, and in habits, customs, and social position resemble very closely the Kûyasths. The tribe is apparently an ancient one, but I can obtain no definite information as to its origin. I attempted to make enquiries from some leading Suds, but the result was the assembling of a Risley, Tribes and Coster, II, 283, 84.

 Pasjáh Elknography, section 537.

Panchâyat, the ransacking of the Sanskrit classics for proof of their Kshatriya origin, and a heated discussion in the Journal of the Anjuman.

2. They are divided into two main sections ; the Uchandiya or Såd of the Hills, and the Newandiya or Såd of the Plains. however, that some of the Sads of Hoshyarpur trace their origin They also distinguish the Suds who do not practise from Sirhind. widow marriage from those who do, calling the former Khara and their offspring Gols, Doghla (hybrid) or Chikan. These two sections, of which the latter corresponds exactly with the Dasa and Gola Bauyas already described, do not intermarry. The Suds forbid marriage in all four gotras, and here again show how much less their tribal customs have been affected by their religion than have those of the Banyas and Khatris. They are of good physique, and are an intelligent and enterprising caste, with great power of combination and self-restraint; and they have lately made what appears to be really successful effort to reduce their marriage expenses by general agreement. The extensive sugar trade of Ludhikoa and generally the agricultural money-leading of the richest part of that district are almost entirely in their hands. They are proverbially scute and prosperous men of business, and there is a saying: - 'If a Sad is across the river, leave your bundle on this side. ' The husbandman of the villages is a mere child in their hands."

Distribution of the Sad according to the Consus of 1891.

Distric	ma.	Number.	1	DISTRICTS	la.	Number.
Saháranpur .	,	12	Jhānsi			23
Muzaffarnagar	÷	1	Gonda			20
Mathura .		80
Allahâbâd .		9	1	TOTAL		147

Sunar, Sonar; in the Hills Sona (Sanskrit Suvarua-kdra, "a worker in gold"); in Persian Zargar—the gold and silver-smith, who also engages in money-lending, pawnbroking, and general trade. The internal organization and tradition of the tribe seem to indicate that it is probably originally occupational and may have been recruited from various sources,

¹ Based on enquiries at Mirrapur and notes by the Deputy Inspectors of Subools, Dehra Dau, Filibhit, Shabjahanpur.

- 2. The tradition of their origin is thus told by the Sunars of the Eastern Districts : There was Tradition of origin. in ancient times a Nivariya, or purifier of gold, who lived near a jungle where Devi lived with the Råkshasa Sonwa Daitya, whose body was of pure gold. goddess became tired of her demon lover and ordered the Niyariya whose name was Mair, to destroy him. Mair approached the demou and offered to clean his body which had become very dirty. The demon allowed him to experiment on his little finger and was satisfied with the result. Then Mair told him that he could clean his whole body if he would agree to mount the fire. The Råkshasa consented, and Mair arranged a pyre, on which he placed the demon, and then laid pieces of lead on his head and breast, so the demon was consumed, and Devi blessed Mair with the promise that he and his descendants should always possess gold and silver and work in the precious metals.
- 3. The Bengal story adds that Mair was covetous and stole part of the demon's head, and, being detected with it by Devi, she cursed him and his descendants with poverty.¹
- 4. According to the Bombay account: In the beginning of the world a pair were produced out of the fire: the male with a blow pipe, and the female with a burning hearth holding molten gold.*
- 5. By another legend current in Northern India, Devi created Mair out of the dirt (mail) of her body, and induced him to destroy her demon lover. In another form of the same story, Mair was created from the dirt scraped from the body of a Mâi or holy woman, and in return he rescued her from a golden demon by throwing him into the fire. In this version a Sarrâf seizes the golden ingot, and the Mair, who contented himself with the stray pieces of gold, received the Mâi's blessing, so that he does prosper to this day. Others again say that the gold demon was named Mâika Asura, and that from him was derived the name of Mair.
 - 6. At the last Census the Sunars were recorded under eight main sub-castes: Ajudhyabási, "residents of Ajudhya," Bâgri, which is also the name of a well-known Râjput sept; Chhatri or Kshatriya, which are probably the same as the Tank Sunars of the Panjab, who profess to be degenerate Kshatris or Aroras; Deswill or "indigenous;" Kananjiya or "residents of Kananj;" Khatri, who are perhaps connected with the Chhatri sub-caste already referred to; Mair, who are apparently the original Sunars of Upper India; and the Rastaogi, which is also the name of one of the Banya sub-tribes.

Risley, Tribes and Costes, II, 256.

Dombay Gasetteer, XVII, 133.

7. To the east of the Province the internal structure of the caste is very elaborate. There are three groups or sub-tribes, which, according to Mr. Sherring's 1 account from Benarcs, should contain respectively twelve (bdrah mel), fifty-two (bdwan mul) and twentytwo (balls wall) sections. It has been found practically impossible to procure a complete list of these sections. The following is the enumeration in Mirzapur. The names given by Mr. Sherring have been given in parenthesis where they apparently correspond-Tantê (Tâtê), Phankê (Phaphê), Thâkur (Thâkur), Rajghatiya (Rajghatiya), Anguriya (Anguriya), Sugawa Bair, Sinh Tarora (Tandora), Andhāri kā khatanga, Bāmtul (Rāmtuli), Banwadhiya, Nivâriya, and Nawagiriha (Naugrahiya). Mr. Sherring adds three more -Phûl, Aldemana, Nautakiya. He gives for the Sinh Tarora or Tandora sub-division thirteen minor class : Sinh Tandore, Amlohiya, Jhanjhiya, Sugvahair, Naktunäik, Alona, Nujariya, Tahakhiya, Ghosiwal, Khaspuri, Purhiya, Ghatkiya, and Parabi. Of these the Sugnahair is perhaps the same as the Sugawa Bair of the Mirzapur enumeration. Mr. Sherring does not give the sections of the other sub-tribes. The second group should, it is said, include ten sections, of which only nine are known in Mirzapur : Lal, Manik, Husninabadi, Tunkiya, Teliya, Sergharlotiya, Agariya, Bilaiya, and Kuthawa. The third group, according to Mirzspur enumeration contains thirty sections : Dewaiya, Kataiya, Chûrihâra, Bahariyâbūdi, Naubariya, Narhaniha, Teraha, Mardaniya, Qāzipuriya, Badipuriya, Manikpuriha, Bilalapuriha, Hajipuriha, Bigwa, Saharbadiya, Kutmutiya, Sutaha, Thana, Chikaniya, Charokota, Mathaiwan, Kith, Panadaha, Babhan, Sunara, Amawatiya Bilâra, Khatanga, Sarawaniya, and Lawaniya. Many of these sections appear to be of local origin; others, as the Churiham and Babhan Sunara, may indicate real or pretended connection with other castes. It is a good example of the extreme fertility with which castes like these produce their sections that there is no likeness between these lists and those given from Bengal and Bihâr by Mr. Risley.

³ Hinds Tribes and Castes, I, 314, sq.

- 8. There is, again, another classification in parts of Mirzapur of Uttaraha, "Northern;" Dakkhinaha, "Southern;" Purahiya, "Eastern;" and Pachhainwa, or "Western." In Bhadohi, north of the Ganges, there is a section known as Bhatkhauwa, so called, it is said, because a Sunar cohabited by force with a Kayasth woman, and her descendants were afterwards admitted to the tribe after eating rice (bhdi khdua). Another section is known as Kukar Khanwa or "dog-eaters," because once, when a house was burnt down, a dog was burnt, and they are its flesh, believing it to be that of a goat.
- 9. In Rohilkhand the Chhatri sub-easte is said to be so called because, when Parasurama was annihilating the Kshatriyas, one of them took refuge with some Sunirs and adopted their trade to save his life. They are said to have no less than four hundred and eighty-four sections, some of whom, according to a list from Pilibhit, are Amethi, Gonthi, Mangaiyan, Musarma, Haraihila, Karaihila, Ugar, Bhuinganiya, Bhujwar, Bachbrajpuriya, Süirajpuriya, Chandwariya, Nainhân, and Mediya,-all of which are said to be the names of their head-quarters. The complete census returns show 1,627 sub-divisions of Sunars, of which those of most local importance are the Desi of Saharanpur; the Pachhade of Meerut and Moradabad; the Mahar of Agra; the Sundba of Fatehpur, Allahábád, and Bánda; the Deogayán of Benares; the Audhiya of Lulitpur; the Badhauliya and Ganga of Mirzapur; the Indauriya and Jalesariya of Jaunpur; the Bholiya of Ghazipur; the Jaiswilr and Kanak of Ballia ; the Fatehpuri and Sakarwar of Gorakhpur, the Magahiya, Sarwariya, and Sikandarpuriya of Basti; the Deogayan of Azamgarh; the Syamkrishna of Gonda.
 - 10. Besides these there are other numerous sections, which are said to be merely occupational or recruited from menial tribes, and are not accepted by the genuine Sunars for purposes of marriage. All Sunars appear to practise hypergamy and marry, when possible, their daughters in a section of rank superior to their own. The sub-castes are endogamous, and the sections exogamous. The strict rule is that a man cannot marry in his own, his mother's, his paternal grandmother's, his maternal grandmother's, his father's, paternal or maternal grandmother's section, or in that in which a brother or sister has been already married. In working out the connection the sections of both bride and bridegroom should be considered. They also do not marry within seven generations in the descending line. But it would seem that this rule is falling into abeyance, and the tendency appears, at least in the eastern part of these Provinces, for the sections to coalesce into larger groups, such as the Uttaraha, Dakkinaha, etc., which are becoming endogamous, and isolate themselves by some special observances, such as the maintenance or abolition of widow marriage, and then fall back on the ordinary exogamous formula, which has intermarriage between the first consins on both sides.

11. The Sunars have a tribal council (pauchdyat) presided over by a permanent chairman (makhiya, chandhari).

Offences against morality or caste usage are usually punished by two compulsory feasts,—one pakki and the other hackehi, at the expense of the offender. More serious offences are punished by compulsory pilgrimages, and by feeding and giving alms to Brihmans, particularly to the tribal priests.

12. The Mair Sunars admit widow marriage, which most of the others profess to prohibit; but the rule is not Marriage rules. sufficiently precise to be defined. Polygamy is so far admitted that a man can marry again in the lifetime of his first wife with the approval of the council. As has been already noticed, there is so far a tendency towards hypergamy that parents desire to marry their daughters into a family of a higher rank than their own, while sons are married into families of the same or lower social rank. Concubinage is forbidden, and if a man keeps a strange woman he is put out of caste. Girls before marriage have a certain amount of freedom, but a girl detected in pre-nuptial infidelity is expelled from the family, and if her friends hesitate to take this step, they are put out of caste and not re-admitted until they pay a fine. Marriages are usually arranged by a Bhât. Girls are usually married at the age of ten or twelve; but the practice varies, the richer Sunars baving a preference for infant marriage. Those of higher rank give a dowry with their daughters; while those of a lower grade take money for their girls and often marry them to the highest bidder. It seems to be understood, however, that the bride-price should be spent on the marriage ceremony and the feast which accompanies it. A man may, with the previous sanction of the council, repudiate an unfaithful wife; and a woman can, similarly, with the permission of the council, leave her husband if he be impotent, but, of course, she cannot be re-married by the regular form.

13. There is nothing peculiar in the birth ceremonies. There are the usual observances on the sixth (chhathi) Birth ceremonies. and twelfth (barahi) day after confinement. The menstrual impurity lasts for three days; on the fourth the woman is purified by bathing. The time for the final ablution of the mother is fixed by the Pandit, who even decides what is the lucky direction in which she ought to sit while undergoing the final bath of purification. The Chamilr midwife receives as her fee, in addition to a money present, a sieve full of barley or rice which is known as a khat (Sanskrit akshata). On each of the two ceremonial bathings the barber's wife distributes, at the houses of the brethren, a preparation of ginger, molasses, and butter, known as boing, for which at each house she receives a present. They have the usual initiation into caste by means of the ear-boring (kanchkedan, kanbedka). They also wear the sacred cord (janes); but this is not assumed with any special ceremony, and the investiture is done at marriage.

14. The marriage ritual, on the whole, corresponds with that of the higher caste Hindus. Rich people marry their daughters by the respectable (charkanses) form; poorer people use the dola rite, where the coremony is performed at the house of the bridegroom.

15. The dead are cremated according to the standard form.

They perform the annual sraidha, and some of the wealthier class go even to Gaya for this purpose.

16. In Oudh a Sunar, named Munna Das, who died nearly a century ago, established a sect the members of which have an annual fair at the tomb of their spiritual leader at Mandwa in the Kheri district. Some of their special customs are to salaam with both hands, to abstain from flesh meat, and to worship an unlighted lamp. To the east of the Province, if they are regularly initiated into any sect, it is the Ramanandi or Nanakpanthi. Their tribal deities are Mahadeva, the Panchon Pir, Hardiha or Harda Lála, Ambika and Phulmati Devi. These deities are worshipped in the months of Jeth and Sawan. The Panchon Pir receive an offering of cakes (malida), sharbat, and garlands of flowers. The priests of the Panchon Pir are drawn from the Dafali caste and receive a share of the offerings. They have also a special tribal Pir, known as Mîran Sâhib, who is worshipped on Thursdays with an offering of sweets. Kālika and the other deities receive cakes (pāri), pottage (lapri), sacrifices of sheep and goats, and pieces of coloured cloth (chanari). Their priests are of the ordinary respectable Brāhman class. The meat offerings made by the worshippers are consumed by them after dedication. The family gods are worshipped in a special room in the house, where a platform (chabālra) is erected in their honour.

17. They observe the ordinary Hindu holidays. On the full moon of Asarh, they mix various grains to-Fostivaly. gether, parch them, scatter them in the corners of the house, and make a sacred circle all round outside to guard the family from evil. Snakes are worshipped at the Nagpanchami, trees on Saturday, the Sun on Sunday, and the Moon at full moon. The special women's holiday is the Tij or third day of the light half of Bhadon. Wemen fast the whole night and day and with singing go and bathe in a stream or tank. But on the previous evening they keep silence as they go to bathe. They worship Bawan or Bamana, the dwarf incarnation of Vishnu, on the twelfth of the light half of Bhadon. They also fast at the Anant, and, on breaking their fast, they eat only wheat bread and milk. The special girl's holiday is the Dasabra or the tenth of the bright half of Jeth, when they throw dolls into the water. They respect the nim tree as the abode of Sitala and the pipal as the home of the other gods. Dead people often become troublesome ghosts and are worshipped by their relations.

18. Women are tattooed on the wrists. If this be not done, they will be unable to find their mothers in the next world. They swear on Ganges water, on their own heads, on the heads of their sons, standing in water, or by putting pipal leaves on their heads. They believe in magic and witchcraft, to relieve the effects of which they employ Ojhas or Syânas drawn from the lower castes. To obviate the effects of the Evil Eye, a child is usually taken to a mosque and the Maulavi is asked to breathe over him when the service is over They worship and protect the cow.

19. They will not touch a Chamâr, Dom or similar degraded castes. Some of them drink, but the habit is reprobated. As an intoxicant and tonic they use bhang. They can the flesh of goats, sheep, and deer, but not beef or pork. Like all respectable Hindus, they will not cat onions, but use garlic instead, and they will not cat turnips or the kaddu pumpkin. They will cat the leavings of no one except those of their Guru. They salute their brothren in the forms Râm / Râm / or Joy Râm / Siturâm / They are said to respect women more than other castes of the same social level. They cat pakki cooked by Brûhmans and Râjputs, and kackeki cooked by clausmen or by their Guru.

20. The best account of the business of the goldsmith is that given by Mr. Muclagan for the Panjab. Their Occupation. business is making jewelry and money-lending and pawn-broking. They are very often "fences" and receive and dispose of stolen jewelry. They have a slang vocabulary of which a long list has been given by Sir H. M. Elliot. There are, according to Mr. Hoey, four classes of work in Lucknow; plain work (edda) in which there is no ornamentation, such as ordinary gold and silver bangles; childi or mat-work, which includes all work in which there are cut or engraved designs of flowers, letters, inscriptions, etc.; jardo or murassa, which includes all work involving the setting of stones and raised and joined work ; jaldar, which is of various classes, European goods, filigree, etc. Besides this there is a large business done by Sunārs in the manufacture of silver and silver-gilt vessels for the Indian market, and teapots, sugar-howls, tumblers, etc., for English people. When manufacture of ornaments or vessels involves enamelling and gilding, these processes are not performed by the gold or silversmith, but by other artisans, known as the Minasaz or Mulammasaz.

21. The occupation of the Sunär is certainly very ancient, as the deities in the Rigveda are constantly represented as wearing gold jewelry. Gold was undoubtedly very extensively found and used in the earliest times in India. ³

¹ Supplemental Glossary, 245,

² Monograph, 184.

² Rajondra Lala Mitra, Indo Aryano, I. 277: Schradar, Prehistoric Anthywitics, 173, 185.

22. The Sunar has a very indifferent reputation for honesty. "The ornament is the wearer's, but the gold remains with the goldsmith" (Sona Sunar ká, abhran sansár ká) is a common proverb. To the west of the Province they tell how a Sunar made the gold of his own Guru disappear before his very eyes, and then complimented the Guru on his miraculous powers. Another tale describes how a Sunar wasted away with regret because he made a nosering for his mother without alloying it, and a variant of the tale goes on to tell that he never stopped till he cut off his mother's nose to get the jewel back. So they say Sundr apni ma ki nath men at bhí churdta hai-" A goldsmith will steal a piece of his own mother's nosering." Another Sunar went to the temple of Badari Narayan in Garhwal and finding that his iron ring on touching the statue became gold, cut off one of the god's fingers for his private But the stump began to coze with unmistakable blood and from that day to this no Sunar dares to come near the idol for fear of being struck blind.

			Aindhra				P. committee			The Contract		Maham
DISTRICTS.	yė.		Page .	Blgri.	Chhatri.	Dearwilli.	fiya.	Khatri.	Mair.	Rastingi.	Ochure.	zeadans,	TOTAL.
Debra Dûn			1	98	1	33	1	1	1	i	187	1	583
Sahhranpar		*	1	454	73	766	1	1	192	1	2,888	-	4,935
Musaffarmagar	*		1	564		3,317	1	1	108		259	35	4,666
Meerut .	*		ī	81	;	4,832		1	1,812	1	2,461	1	8,427
Bulandahahr				:	E	679	9	a i	1,033	i	2,679	113	4,304
Aligarh .	٠			1	ī	-	1	11	1,466		3,139	1	4,6935
Mathura .	•		:	i	1	1	1	4	8,751		573	. 1	4,326
Адта	•		137	3	586	i	1	167	181	T	4,994	9	6,073
Farrukhåbåd			4	1	2,918	i	98	SI.	91	19	9,693	1	5,681
Mainpari .				1	2,316	:	1	1	ı		1,900	1	4,215
Btawsh .		•	551	22	1,438	1	199	240	240	63	2,031	i	4,782
Etah .			;	i	1,608	I	00	ı	61	4	1,773	1	3,468
Bareilly .			12		1,857	-	-		153	2.496	1.890	al	7.816

Distribution of the Sundry occording to the Centus of 1891-conlinued.

Draw	Бивтилста ,	78.		Afudhya- bási.	Bägri.	Chhateri,	Donagli,	Kaman- Hya.	Khatri.	Mair.	Rastiogi.	Others.	Mahsm- madans.	TOTAL.
Bijnor				i	1	I	390	I	1	3,862	1	108	1	4,360
Bodhen		٠			1	1,886	:	I	1	707	909	1,305		4,504
Moradabad.			•	i	*	1	1	I	9	2,195	949	1,733	124	6,001
Shahjabanur	an			;	;	3,128	1	1	119	230	1,078	1,941		5,676
Pilibhtt				1	21	1,186	1	ī		682	949	159	1	2,990
Cawnpur		٠		1,785	1	2,690	- 1	101	800	0	158	2,218	1	7,762
Patebpar			•	895	•	759	-	8	194	80	1	3,109	1	4,934
Bûnda			*	3,612	99	3	1	90	1,684	1	1	942	_	6,844
Hamirpar		٠		5,201	ŧ	1	1	ī	1,065	1		143	1	6,409
Allahabad				514	:	64	1	10	13	6	19	7,427	i	8,106
Jhánai				844	ŧ	3	1	1	1,705	-	1	814	ŧ	3,863
Jalson.			•	1,358		83	1	i	1,450	1	1	928		8,779
Lalitpur		٠		9	:	42	:	1	88	i	1	1,774		1,917
Benarce				124	1	1	1	i	160'%	303	i	4,795	1	7,313

962'9	6,217	8,670	9.480	17,259	9,459	8,369	189	4	983	6,184	4,023	4,863	8,973	3,847	3,276	4,804
	4			-	1	i	1	1	11	ŧ		1	1	1	:	01
4,800	5,959	7,895	8,989	11,430	7,735	5,414	189	7	308	2,803	2,833	3,935	1,537	294	334	3,986
i	1	:	1	1	1	i	1	1	179	1,172	139	239	1,333	1,142	1,207	99
1	1	1	;	en		ŧ	1	1	491	9	1	16	1	1	909	151
1	1	288	1	298	f	444	1	di	11	18	4	03 7		1	1	311
	1	61	566	54	1	128	P	100	1	60	7	M	99 91	1	i	1
1	1	1	1	262	1	,	Į.	1	1	1	i	:	I	Į	I	1
	1	;	;	2	;	1		1	:	1,107	824	497	1,878	2,411	1,328	23
	ŧ	i	1	99		86	1	1	1	E	1	1	1	**	-	***
866	898	474	222	4,644	450,2	2,390	:	:	i	7	923	130	101		:	3339
				*	•	1	*	+		*	•		•		•
					4						٠				٠
							٠			4
Mirzapar	Jaunpur	Glidzipur	Ballia	Gorakhpar	Basti	Azamgarh	Kumsun	Garberl	Tarki	Lucknow	Unão	Ras Bareli	Shapur	Hardoi	Kburi	Fairabad

Distribution of the Sundra according to the Centus of 1891-concluded.

Dis	Б ізтвіств.	*###	Ajudhya-	Blgri.		Chladri, Deswill,	Kanau- jiya.	Khatri.	Malr.	Bastiogi.	Others.	Maksm- madans.	TOTAL.
Gonda			1	175	9	1	88	L.	-	1,374	8,589		5,146
Bahriloh			-	1	789	14		3.1	1,453	108	1,400	29	8,99
Sultānpar			1	:	1	-	36	0	1	-	3,956	99	4,023
Partabgarh			1	:	*	-	17	113	9		9,663	91	980.2
Bărnbanki			1	846	553	10	4	0)1	1	1,175	3,340	1	5,436
	1							2/				1
	To	TOTAL	26,691	2,356	29,121	9,893	1,108	11,358	20,053	16,127	137,708	990	255,338

Sunkar.\(^1\)— A small caste of labourers entirely confined to Bundelkhand. They appear to have no traditions of origin. They have a number of exogamous gotras, some of which are Margiya, Gotiya and Jaraliya. A man cannot marry in his own gotra or in a family with which another marriage connection has been formed within the memory of man. Both infant and adult marriage is allowed. Neither polyandry nor polygamy is allowed. The marriage ceremony is by the usual form of thanwar or revolutions round the marriage shed. Widows are allowed to marry and the levirate is preferred, but is not compulsory on the woman. In widow marriage the only observance is the feast to the brethren when the bride is brought home with her husband. A woman can be divorced for adultery with the consent of the tribal elders (makhiga). A divorced wife may remarry in the caste according to the form allowed in the case of widow marriage.

- 2. They are Hindus and generally worship Devi. Their chief local god is Hardaul Lala, who is worshipped at marriages. They burn their dead, and if a river be near the asbes are consigned to it; if not they are left on the burning ground. They offer the usual libations of water to the manes of the dead and feast the brethren.
- S. Their chief occupation is dyeing cloth with the dt dye and making what is known as thdras cloth. Some of them burn lime and collect road metal (kankas) on the roads. They are allowed to cat goat's flesh and fish and drink spirits. They will not cat or drink with any of the menial castes, and no higher caste will take food or water from their hands.

Distribution of the Snukar according to the Census of 1891.

Distratore.			Number.	D	Number.
Bånda				1	Jålaun			,	497
Hamirpur			٠.	352
Jhansi		*		546	Total .			1,896

Sûrajbans, Sûrajbansi (Sanskrit Sûrya-vansa, "the race of the sun").—A modern sept of Râjputs who claim to be the represen-Principally based on a note by M. Ridha Raman, Deputy Collector, Jhanal.

tatives of the famous solar race of Ajudhya. The Malla Rajas of Nepål assert that they are sprong from Ansuvarma, who, according to the Chinese pilgrim Hwen Thsang, belonged to the Sûrajbansi family of the Lichchhavis of Vaisali near Patna.1 The famous tradition, accepted by Colonel Tod, represents that in 224 A. D., Kanak Sen left Ajudhya with a large following and migrated westward to Gujarat. "This tradition, however, is opposed to the widely received story that Vikramaditys, of Ujjain, visited Ajudhya about 50 B. C., and found it totally desolate and covered with forest, and, after discovering the sites of the ancient temples and palaces, rebuilt them in their original splendour. Granting, however, that this discrepancy is one of dates and not of facts, this migration of the Sûrajbansis from Ajudhya to Gujarat, and finally to Chithor, is the only tangible fact we have to lay hold on the early history of Oudh." The Pahari Chhatri Raja, who now holds the Pargana of Khairgarh, in the Kheri district, asserts that his family governed at Sâraswati till the time of Râja Suthurot, whose son Marchhan Deva moved with his subjects to Ajudhya, where they reigned for one hundred and two generations till the time of Pitra Sen, who became King of Bharat Khand or Northern India. There they reigned for eighteen generations, and then they moved to Kaphar, in Kumaun, where forty-two more of them successively sat on the throne. The forty-second, Sårang Deva, emigrated to Kathaur. The twentieth generation brings them down to Arjuva Påla, who was a contemporary of the Emperor Akhar. "They claim then to have governed in different parts of India for more than two hundred and twenty generations prior to the sixteenth century. In spite of this long descent, it may be remarked that the family is hardly considered Chhatri at all; and even when they managed to marry their daughters to the Ahbans, Janwars, and Raikwars, they had to pay large sums as bribes. Further, none of these places or parganas appear on the map of Kumaun, and the whole story is probably one of those fictions in which the bards of India are so fertile."

2. According to the legend current in Faizabad,* their ancestor

Atkiswon, Himniayan Gaselteer, 11, 514.

² Hilliott, Chronicles of Unde, 21.

⁵ Oudh Gazetteer, II, 120.

⁴ Saitlement Report, 212.

eame from Kumaun three hundred and fifty years ago and settled at Sultanpur, a suburb of Faizābād. He and his sons served a merchant named Daudās Sahu, who had excuvated a large tank in the neighbourhood, to which he gave his name. There dwelt hard by, in the village of Belahri Shāh Bhīkha, a hermit of great repute. On one occasion the merchant found the hermit washing his teeth at the edge of the tank, and admonished him for so doing. This so enraged the hermit that he vowed that in future not even donkeys should drink at the tank, and in consequence water is rarely found in it. The merchant died childless, and his property fell into the hands of his Sūrajbans servant, and thus the present family came to be founded. In Rāê Bareli their sons marry Chauhān and Bisen girls, and they give brides to the Amethiya and Bais. There is a flourishing branch in Ghāzipur, who claim to have expelled the Bhars.*

- There is another sept of illegitimate Sürajbansis who are probably included in the enumeration of the last consus. They are described under the head of Soiris.
- 4. According to one account the Sûrajbansis take wives from the Bachgoti, Rājkumār, Bandhalgoti, Sombansi, and Kalhans septs; and give girls to the Sirnet, Gautam, and Baghel. The poorer members of the sept are said to sell their daughters to rich Rājputs of any clan irrespective of social rank.

Distribution of the Surajbans Rajputs according to the Cousus of 1891.

Distrators.				Number.	Distrators.				Number.
Sahåranpur				110	Agra				211
Muzaffarnag	n.r			13	Farmkhâbâd				30
Meerut	4			155	Mainpuri .				2
Bulandshahr				2,204	Etawah .				4
Aligarlı		4	-	11	Etah				134
Mathura				45	Bareilly .				98

¹ Seillement Report, Appendix C.

² Oldham, Memoir, I, 65.

Distribution of the Sarajbans Rajputs according to the Census of 1841-concluded.

Distasors.				Number.	ber. Distrators.			Number
Bijnor .			,	185	Gorakhpur				1,581
Budaun				12	Basti .				14,670
Moradabad				222	Azamgach	,		+	551
Slahjakanpo	ır			111	Kumaan			*	184
Pilibhit				56	Tacki .	÷			49
Cawnpur				166	Lucknow	è			241
Fatabpur	4			5	Unde .				9
Panda .				187	RAS Pareli	è			55
Hamirpur	÷		- 4	49	Sitapur				194
AllabähailA				429	Hardoi			-	185
Jhansi			2	12	Khori .	1			458
Jálsun .				13	Faizabid				4,124
Lalitpur			1.	2	Gonda				826
Bennres				1,295	Bahraich		٧.		415
Miranpur	,			0,786	Sultanpor				315
Jaunpur	,			265	Part&bgarh				172
Ghasipur				8,700	Pårabanki				2,777
Ballia				855		To	TAL		44,382

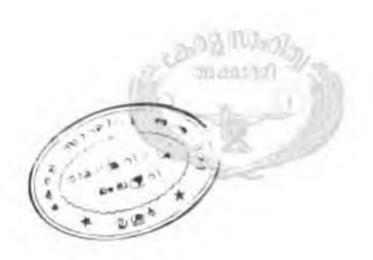

Suthrashahi.1—An order of Hindu mendicants who are found in very small numbers in these Provinces.

Of them Mr. Maclagan writes:—"The origin of this order is a little doubtful. According to one account, Suthra Shah was a Budwal Khatri of Bahrampur, in the Gurdaspur district, who became a disciple of Guru Arjan, and was called Suthra, "pure," from his truthfulness. Another story is that he was a follower of Guru Har Govind, and various tales are told of the quarrelsomeness and somewhat coarse humour which he displayed in the days of that Guru. Professor Wilson, again, says that the Suthra-t Panjab Ceneue Report, 154; Wilson, Resnya, I, 272, eq.; Ibbetson, Panjab Eiknography, paragraph 322; Cunningham, History of the Silche, 65.

shåhis look to Guru Tegh Bahådur as their founder. Dr. Trumpp, on the other hand, states that the founder of this sect was a Brahman named Sucha, and that they took their origin under Guru Har Råê. His view is supported by a story, which says that when Guru Har Råê was summoned by Aurangzeb to Delhi, Suthra Shâh took his place and so pleased the Mughal by his wit and wisdom that he was given special permission to levy a paisa from every shop in the realm. On the strength of this his spiritual descendants are most importunate beggars and will seldom leave a shop till they get alms. They proceed along the bazars with black caste marks on their foreheads and black woollen ropes (soli) twisted round their heads and necks, clashing together a couple of short staves (danda) and shouting mystic Panjabi songs indifferently in honour of Guru Nanak and the goddess Devi. They perform the funeral ceremonies of the Hindus, burn their dead, and throw the bones into the Ganges; but they neither wear the Brahmanical thread nor keep the scalp-lock. They indulge freely in intoxicants and seldom cease from smoking. Their profligacy is notorious and they are said to he composed mainly of spendthrifts who have lost their wealth in gambling. They are recruited from all castes, and they always add the title Shah to their names. "They have," says Trumpp, "a Guruship of their own, and receive novices (chela); but there is no order or regular discipline among them." They live chiefly in large towns, and their principal Guradwara is at Lahore. They are also said to have shrines at Nagar Sain, near Benares, and at Patiála ; but as a rule they have no sacred places and spend their time in roving mendicancy. "

2. Whenever they visit these Provinces they are regarded with extreme abhorence, partly on account of the coarse way in which they demand alms and abuse and lampoon those who do not give in to their demands, and partly because they have the reputation of enticing away the sons of respectable people to join the order. Some of them say that they are the followers of one Jhakkar Shāh. Their distinctive mark is a straight line across the forehead made in black, and the ebony (abulls) wood sticks which they beat together as they beg. A proverb current in the Eastern Districts says, in allusion to their rapacity,—Kehn mile, kehn jiyê, Suthra gher batása piyê: "Any one may live or die, but the Suthrashāhi must have his drink of sugar and water."

T

Taga. 1—An important cultivating and land-owning tribe confined almost altogether to the Upper Ganges-Jumna Duab and Robilkhand. They are divided into a Hindu and Muhammadan branch.

2. The Tagas claim to be of Brahmanical origin, as Sir H. M. Elliot writes :1-" They state that they were Traditional origin. invited from Bengal to these parts by Raja Janamejaya for the purpose of exterminating snakes; which fable, though sufficiently ridiculous in itself, no doubt veils under an allegorical type a most important historical fact. The circumstanees attending the sacrifice of the snakes by Janamejaya are preserved by local tradition in almost the same form as they are given in the Adi Parva of the Mahabharata. A garrulous old Taga, who has perhaps never read or even heard a line of that poem, will tell you how Raja Parichat (Parikshita) was bitten to death by a snake, notwithstanding all the precautions he took to avoid it by scating himself on a platform in the middle of the Ganges; how that Utang (Utanka), a Muni, persuaded Janamejaya, who had lately returned victorious from Takshasila, to avenge his father's death; how that they were all exterminated, except Takehak (Takshaka), brother of the Adityas, and Basuk (Vasuki), sovereign of the Nagas of Patala; when, towards the end of the sacrifice, Astik, a holy man (of whose birth some marvellous paticulars are given), came forward and obtained the promise of Janamejaya to spare their lives, which promise he dare not break, as it was exacted by a Brahman; and how that he was thus foiled in his object of sacrificing the chief offenders whom he had reserved for the close of the caremony in order that none of their followers might come to their assistance.

"It was for the purpose of officiating at this serpent sacrifice that Janamejaya is said to have invited Brahmans from Gaur. After they had performed all that he requested of them, he offered them remuneration, which some rejected, and others received in the shape of land; on which account they were called Tagas from having

Based on notes by M. Muhammad Ali, Read Master, Zillah School, Bljnor; H. Frazer, Esq., C.S. Bijnor.
Supplementary Glassary: S.F. Gour Yago.

TAGA. 352

consented to a relinquishment (tydg) of their ereed as Brähmans, by pursuing agriculture, which they are forbidden by the Shāstras to practise.

3. "These who continued to retain their titles and privileges as Brahmans took up their abode chiefly in Hariyana, while the Tagas remained in the neighbourhood of Hastinapur, within a circle of about one hundred miles round the ancient capital, where they are found to this day. This is the usual account.

"It is remarkable, however, that almost all the claus of Tagns state that they came from Hariyana, not from Gaur, and even derive their names from places in that country, as, for instance, the Chulat who say that their name is derived from Chûla in Bikanîr; and the Bikwans, of Pur Chapar, who came from Bikanir. It is, therefore, far more probable that the Brahmans were already tenants of Hariyana, that they must have settled there before Janamejaya's reign, and that the Tagas only, and not the Brahmans, owe their residence to that powerful Raja; otherwise it is difficult to reconcile the apparent contradiction that he called Gaur Brahmans from Bengal, and Ganr Tagas from Hariyana; or it may be that the Brâhmans were invited from Gaur by Janamejaya, and afterwards settled in Hariyana, and that the Tagas were invited by some succeeding Prince or Princes, after the Brahmans had fully established themselves in Hariyana; so that the occupation of the country round Hastinapur by the Tagas may be later than the occupation of Hariyana by the Brahmans. But what militates against this, and confirms the other hypothesis, is that it is expressly stated in the concluding section of the Mahabharata that Janamejaya, 'having concluded the ceremonies of the sacrifice on which he had been engaged, dismissed the multitude of Brahmans and other pious mendicants who had thronged to the place, loaded with presents, to their several abodes."

4. It is of course dangerous to press the details of a legend like this too far. Mr. Ibbetson tattempts to explain the difficulty of their legendary connection with Hariyana by the fact that they give Safidon in Jhind, on the border of Hariyana, as the place where the holocaust took place, and the name of the town is not improbably connected with the snake (sánp). Whether, as Sir H. M. Elliot believed, their name was to be connected with the Takkas, who are believed to have been a Seythian race, with the snake as their totem or not, there seems reason to believe that the Tagas are probably the earliest inhabitants of the Upper Jumna lowlands (khādir), holding villages that have been untouched by the course of the stream for a longer period than most of their neighbours.

^{&#}x27;l'anjab Ethnography, pars. 177.

S53 TAGA.

- 5. Lower down the Ganges-Jumna Duab, the Tagas, Gaur Bråhmans, and Någars of Bulandsbahr firmly believe that Ahâr in that district (said to be derived from abibara, "serpents destroyed") was the spot where their ancestors assisted Raja Janamejaya in the snake sacrifice and got largesses and assignments in return. Another legend gives a less respectable account of their origin. It is said that having been tempted by the munificent gifts offered by a certain Raja to married Brihmans, a Gaur bachelor took in his company a common prostitute to the Raja's Court to pass as a married man and obtain the gift. The device succeeded, but was soon after discovered, and then to escape the Raja's displeasure the Brahman kept the prestitute for good as his wife. The progeny of this pair imitated the pure Brahmans by wearing the Brahmanical cord (taga), and hence they are called Tagas, or Brithmans, in no other respect than that of wearing the cord. As an argument in support of the story, it is said that Taga women are still uncommonly fond of ornamenting their persons, a peculiarity supposed to be derived from their original ancestress.1
- 6. On the whole it seems not unreasonable to believe that, like the Bhuinhar Brahmans of the eastern part of the Province, the Tagas may have been originally Gaur Brahmans, who lost status by abandoning priestly functions and taking to agriculture. At the same time their appearance, and the recognition of the Dasa or inferior grade, who allow widow marriage and are admittedly not of blue blood, leads to the inference that there has been at one time some admixture with other races. How far they really intermarry with other Brahmans is not quite certain. In Gurgâon it is said, that some thirty years ago one Gordhan, a Taga, was about to marry his daughter to a Gaur Brahman; but a council of Gaurs forbade it. Sir H. M. Elliot says that in the Dehli territory the Gaur Brahmans and the Tagas frequently intermarry; but that the practice is not observed by the Gaurs of the Duab and Rohilkhand.

Baja Lashhman Sinis, Bulandekahr Neme. 134, 150, sq.
 Seltlement Report, 32.

7. The records of the last Census show no less than one hundred and fifty-five sections of the Hindu and fifty-five of the Muhammadan branch. Many of these are well known Råjput or Bråhman tribes, such as Båchhal, Bais, Bargala, Chauhan, Chandel, Dikhit, Gaur, Sanadh, Vasishtha. These appear to be exogamous groups framed on the Bråhman or Kshatriya model. But the really important division is into Dasa or Daswan, Bisa or Biswan the "tens" and the "twenties," the former of whom allow widow marriage, which the latter prohibit. If a Bisa allows this objectionable practice, he falls at once into the Dasa grade.

8. The Dasa and Bisa form two endogamous groups, and within these groups they follow the usual rules of Brahmanical exogamy. Polyandry and sexual license before marriage are strictly prohibited. Polygamy is allowed only when the first wife is barren. The age for marriage is from eight to fifteen. There is no legalised divorce; a faithless wife is simply expelled from the house. There is no bride-price; but it is usual to give a dowry with the bride. The domestic ceremonics are of the standard orthodox type.

9. The Hindu branch appear chiefly to worship Mahâdeva.

They are very careful to propitiate the sainted dead of the household. One way of appearing the spirit of the dead man is to make an unmarried boy drink milk under a pipal tree on the death day in every fortnight for a year, and then on each succeeding anniversary. Their priests are generally Gaur Brühmans of an inferior grade.

10. The Tagas are a fine sturdy set of yeomen, all or nearly all occupation.

Occupation.

Good farmers as the Jats in their neighbourhood, but much more industrious and respectable than the Güjars.

Distribution of the Tagos according to the Consus of 1891.

Dre	PRI	Tr.	- 1	Hindus.	Mahammad- ans,	TOTAL.
Dehra Dûn				12		12
Sahdraupur		4		15,961	2,855	18,816
Muzaffar nagar			4	12,792	6,637	19,429

Distribution of the Tugas accombing to the Cevens of 1891-concid.

p	STRI	or,			Hindus.	Mnhammad-	TOTAL.
Mearnt .		,			43,290	12,049	55,339
Bulandshahr					6,508	-40	6,548
Bijnor .	,			4	10,952		10,952
Padāun .					21	346	21
Moradabad			4		9,822	0,537	16,359
Sháhjahanpur			+		1		1
Tarái .				-	49	300	49
Hardei .	r.			-	1	109	1
		Tu	TAL	1	99,409	28,118	197,527

Tambakugar, Tamkhera.—A dealer in tobacco (tambaku)
This is hardly a caste, but was recorded as such in some of the Census schedules. One of the earliest references to tobacco in India is in the memoirs of the Emperor Jahangir 1 where he writes:—"As the smoking of tobacco (tambaku) had taken very bad effect upon the health and mind of many persons, I ordered that no one should practise the habit. My brother Shah Abbas, also being aware of its evil effects, had issued a command against the use of it in Iran
But Khāni Alam was so much addicted to smoking that he could not abstain from it and often smoked."

Tamboli, Tamoli. (Sanscrit timbula, the pungent and aromatic leaf of the piper betel).—The caste which is devoted to the cultivation and sale of pin (Sanskrit parne, "the leaf," par excellence). The man who cultivates the plant is properly called Barai (q. v.); but the respective functions of the Tamboli and Barai are not clearly defined. In Benares, according Mr. Sherring, there is no real distinction between them. There the Tamboli sells betelnut as well as pin, and appears to be more of a wholesale trader Dowson's Elliot, VI, 851; Indian Antiquery, I, 161.

Based on enquiries at Mirzapur and motes by M. Chhotê Lâl, Archaelogical Survey, Lacknow: Mr. A. H. Bence, C. S., Ghasipur, ³ Hindu Tribes and Castes, 1, 230.

than the Barai. The sub-eastes of both Tambolis and Barais are very similar, and if there is any real distinction it is very ordinarily overlooked.

2. At the last Census they were enumerated under the subcastes of Chaurasiya, who seem to take their Internal structure. name from Pargana Chaurasi in the Mirzapur District; Barai, Jaiswar, from the town of Jais in the Ras Bareli District; and Kathyar. In Agra we find the Barai, Chaurasiya, and Kathwar, who are probably the Kathyar of the Census enumeration and do not allow widow marriage. In Gorakhpur are the Tenduhara, who are named from the tendu (Sanskrit tinduka) the tree disepyros embryopteris, the fruit of which is occasionally eaten, and the Jaiswar. In Lucknow we find the Chanrasiya, Jaiswar, Sribastav, who are named from the town of Sravasti, the present Sahet-Mahet of Gonda, and the Jaunpuriya. In Ghazipur we have the Nåsarkhåni, Chaurasiya, Bhadesiya, and Mathesiya or Madhesiya, who are residents of Madhyadesa, "the middle land." Another enumeration from Ghazipur gives the sub-castes as Nasarkhani, Kharwara, and Turk or Muhammadan Tambolis. In Allahabad are the Chaurasiya, Jaiswar, and Sribastav. The complete Census lists show 244 sub-divisions of the usual type, many taken from well known castes and septs, such as Aberiya, Bagheli, Baiswâla, Chhatri, Gaur, Gaharwar, Jadon, Janwar, Kahar, Kayasthwar, Kalwar, Luniya, Nagbansi, Nandbansi, Raghubansi, Rajput, Råthaur, Råwat, Thåkur, with local sub-divisions, like Aharwar, Ajudhyabāsi, Bindrabani, Chaurasiya, Gangapāri, Jaiswār, Jamunapāri, Jaunpuriya, Kananjiya, Mathuriya, and Sribāstavi. All these are endogamous, and the only regular rule of exogamy is that a man cannot intermarry with a family with which, during human memory, his family has been connected by marriage.

S. Among the better classes marriage usually takes place in infancy, and the bride does not come to live with her husband until she is nubile, when there is a second ceremony (gauna.) All the Tambolis, except the Kathyâr sub-caste, appear to allow widow marriage and the levirate, but the latter is not compulsory on the widow. Polygamy is allowed, and a man can put away his wife by leave of the tribal council if she is guilty of adultery or of some other act which involves excommunication from the easte. In their domestic ceremonies the Tambolis follow—the orthodox rules current among the trading castes of the same social grade. They cremate their adult dead and perform the usual *raddha. At marriage the Tambolis of the east of the Province have a rite, which seems special to them, called *Ahorbahor; the bride and bridegroom jointly pay five visits to the family of the other before they finally live together.

4. By preference they seem to be usually Vaishnavas. But they have no special connection with any Religion. particular sect. In Lucknow some are said to be Saivas, Saktas, Nanakshahis or Kabirpanthis. There some worship Brahm Gusaîn and Narsinha, and some affect the Vamachâri worship of Bhîtari Devi. Early in the morning, when they open their shops, they burn some incense before the little wooden box in which they keep their pan, with a view to propitiste Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth. In November the Tambelis of Ghazipur go to a place called Magha, in the Patna District, where a particularly fine kind of pan, called Magahi pan, is grown. There is here a temple known as that of Sokha Baba, containing a lingam of Mahadeva, which they all worship and invoke prosperity in their trade. Some of the offerings are brought home and distributed among friends and relations. On their return, an offering of a bundle and a quarter of the leaves is made to Mahabir on a Tuesday, which is his day.

5. The special occupation of the casto is the cultivation and sale of pdn. The leaves are made up and sold in bundles of two hundred each, known as a dboli of pdn. There are numerous varieties.

Mr. Hoey 1 enumerates in Lucknow the Kapári, Kaker, Bangla or Bengali, Begami, Desdwari or "foreign," and Kalkatiya or Calcutta pán. Abûl Fazl names six varieties. "The leaf called Bilahri is white and shining, and does not make the tongue harsh and hard. It tastes best of all kinds. After it has been taken away from the creeper, it turns white with some care after a month, or even after twenty days, when greater efforts are made. The Kakar leaf is white, with spots, and full, and has hard veins. When much of it is eaten the tongue gets hard. The Jaiswâr leaf does not get white, and is profitably sold, mixed with other kinds. The Kapûri leaf is yellowish, hard, and full of veins, but has a good taste and smell. The Kapûrkant leaf is yellowish-green, and Monograph, 180.

Blockmann, Afa i-Akbori, 1, 72.

pungent like pepper; it smells like camphor. You could not eat more than ten leaves. It is to be had at Benares, but even there it does not thrive in every soil. The Banglah leaf is broad, full, hard, plushy, hot and pungent." The leaf is made up for sale with catechu (katha), lime (chéna), betel-unt (supári), and cardamoms (iláchi), and is then khown as bira or gilauri.

6. The Tamboli, from his connection with the production and sale of what is almost a necessity in Indian life, holds a fairly respectable position. They observe a high degree of personal purity, and will eat keckeki only if cooked by a member of their own caste, and pakki cooked by a Brâhman or Halwâi. They will eat goat's fiesh and fish, but not, of course, beef or pork. Many of them are Bhagats, and avoid the use of meat and spirituous liquor, the latter of which is permitted to those under no special vow. They have a special reverence for the conservatory (bātt) in which the cresper is raised, which is carefully protected from any kind of ceremonial pollution, and for the seissors (saranta) used in preparing the leaf. Pân of course finds a place in the popular wisdom of the country-side:—

Subbat achehhi baithé kháiyé Nagar pan. Beri subbat baithéé kataiye nak aur kan—" Sit in good company and eat Nagar betel: sit in bad company and you get your nose and cars cut off."

Bina vasilé châkari, bina dhái ké juda, ye tinou phike tagéa, bina tamáku pán—" Service without a patron, a young man without a shield, and betel without tobacco are all four tasteless."

Distribution of the Tambolia according to the Census of 1891.

					HINDU	š.
Distaio	75.		Barai.	Chan- maiya.	Juie- war.	Kath-	Others.	Muban madaza	Toril.
Dehra Dûn			24	69	12		37		135
Sabaranpur	+			7			97		104
Mozaffarnogaz			100	11	144		61	in	72
Meerut .		٠		111	184	200	820	3	323
Bulandshahr			207				28	77	171
Aligarh .				244		5	429	9	443

Distribution of the Tumbolic according to the Census of 1891-continued.

359

					H	INDUS.				y . r
Die	28101	eB.		Barni.	Chan- rasiya.	Jais- mar.	Kath- yar.	Others.	Muham	TOTAL
Mathura					24	1	181	510	13	548
Agra.			ų,		164	148	44	448	44	700
FarrukhA	haa				1,276		837	81	sec.	2,194
Mainpuri					178	13	404	241		835
Etáwah				25	721		84	162	en-	942
Etah				411	2		218	106	20	355
Bareilly	*		ě	18	805		579	20	-	922
Bijner					30	Zar	20	78		93
Budhun			1		411		253	95		847
Moradaba	d	.1			10,20			223	40	252
Shabjaha	pur			36	197		1,533	160		1,926
Pilibhit					51	8		401		548
Cawupur			7	68	5,261	52	6	363	100	5,738
Patchpur					2,688			269		2,927
Bànda			,	22	912	6	9	337	*	1,286
Hamirpur			,	17	702		*	172		891
Allabábád					183	344		141	201	183
Jbansi					25	2	454	33		614
Jálaun					440			500		949
Benarea			,		1.146	172	144	1,117	ne	2,435
Mirapur	. "				420			31		460
Jampar					11					11
Gházipur					2		in		39	41
Gorakhpu	r.			41	146	559		325		1,071
Basti.								217	11	228
Ammgar						in		60		80

Distribution of the Tambolia according to the Census of 1891-concluded.

					1	LINDUS,
Diag	PRI	CTS.		Barai.	Chan- rasiya.	Jain- war.	Kath-	Others	Muham madans	TOTAL.
Кирмар		3						35		85
Garhwal.			*	Nes.	974	146			70%	***
Tarki					1	100	16	127		143
Lucknow				101	5,307	492	50	749		6,598
Unão	é			105	8,500	9	1,029	340	244	9,976
Rãê Bareli					6,505	786	908	662		8,859
Sitapur				730	960	1,901	1,970	797		6,358
Hardoi					483			14		497
Kheri				183	1870	1,163	794	24	100	1,870
Vnizáh&d			li.		2	545		48		598
Gonda				300		847		18		362
Bahrfiich					30	3,933		1,825	6	5,608
Sultanpur					1	186		278		410
Bărabanki					3,517	1,963		884	946	5,394
	T	OTAL		1,257	39,228	12,120	8,965	12,671	270	73,911

Tank.—A sept of Rajputs in the Western Districts. Regarding the Tak or Takshak Colonel Tod has various curious speculations.\(^1\) General Cunningham\(^1\) says that the Takkas of the hills are Turanians, \(^1\) because they are certainly not Aryas.\(^1\) M. St. Martin identifies the Ganganoi or Tanganoi of Ptolemy with the Tangana of the Mababharat and the Tank Rajputs.\(^1\)

2. The Tank Rajputs in Mainpuri say that they are Yaduvansis, and claim kinship with the Yadava princes of Jaysalmir and Kuraoli. They originally settled in a cluster of twelve-and-a-half villages round Kosma, in the Ghiror Pargana, which still . Seillement Report, 21.

I Annais, I, 111; Dowson's Ellint, History, 7, 504, Appendix.

^{*} Archnological Report, 11, 8, 800. * Indian Antiquary, XIII, 376.

remains the seat of the clan. In former times they were noted for their predatory habits, and even now the character of the heads of the clan is not above suspicion. During the reign of Akbar, the Kosma men, headed by the two sons of their late chief, attacked and plondered some imperial stores passing through the District, and as a punishment for this daring robbery, one of the brothers was carried off to the capital and there compelled to embrace the Muhammadan faith.

3. This accounts for the singular division even now existing of the Kosma family into two sections: Kosma Musalman and Kosma Hindu. It is a curious fact that Ja'afar Khan, the head of the Muhammadan section, is, equally with Gulab Sinh, the head of the Hindu branch, looked up to by the whole Tank community, and his joint headship is fully recognised by every member in matters affecting the internal economy of the clan. The customs of the Muhammadan brotherhood still partake greatly of a Hindu character. At the ceremonies attendant on births, marriages, deaths, and at meetings of the tribal council amongst the Hindu brotherhood, Ja'afar Khan is always summoued and takes a prominent part.

Distribution of the Tank Rajputs according to the Census of 1891.

Die	VIIIO	r.		Numbers.	Die	T3010	T.	Numbers.
Sahikeanpur				13	Buddon			5
Meorut			14	58	Moradabad			43
Bulandshah	r .			21	Shahjabanp	UF		220
Mathum				52	Pilibhit			104
Agra				147	Cawnpur			159
Farrakhābā	d			128	Bånda	+		1
Mainpuri				1,104	Jhansi	÷		647
Etawah				110	Jálaun			97
Etah	4			52	Ghazipur			1
Bareilly	٠			4	Tarái			17
			- 13			To	Z4L	2,982

Tarkihâr [larki, "a woman's earring," so called because originally made of the palm (tar) leaf; kara maker]. - The caste who make women's car ornaments out of the palm leaf. They are a purely occupational caste. They call themselves in Mirzapur Bais Rájputs. In Gorakhpur they apparently pretend to be Bráhmans, as, according to Dr. Buchanan 1 "twenty-six houses of Brihmans, but of what kind is not known, have suffered disgrace by making earrings of palm leaves, and are excluded from intermarriage with others; still, however, they are entitled to receive the whole Gâyatri, and should be exempt from capital punishment," The Census returns show 37 endogamous sections of the Hindu and two of the Musalman branch, which are all of the type already familiar among these minor castes. They practise the ordinary rule of exogamy, which forbids marriage in the family of the paternal and maternal uncle and the paternal and maternal aunt for three generations. Girls are married between the ages of five and eleven. A mau can marry a second time while his first wife is alive, only with the sanction of the tribal council (panckdyat), but this permission is given only on the condition that the applicant gives two feasts to the clansmen.

2. To the east of the Province marriage is conducted in the four standard forms : clarkauwa for respect-Mauriage. able people, deta for poor people, sagdi for widows, and odala badala or exchange when two families agree to exchange daughters, which Dr. Westermarck calls the simplest way of purchasing a wife." In the regular forms of marriage the binding portion of the ceremony is the solemn giving away of the bride (kanyadda) to the bridegroom by her father and the rubbing by the bridegroom of red lead on the parting of the bride's hair (senddrddn). Widows can remarry by Sagás, which they assert to be a practice of comparatively recent origin among them. The levirate is permitted under the usual conditions, but is not obligatory. The only ceremony in widow marriage is the bridegroom eating with the friends of his future wife, dressing her in a suit of clothes and ornaments provided by her future husband; and giving a feast to his clansmen when he introduces her into his family.

¹ Eastern India, II, 454.

^{*} History of Human' Marriage, 390.

- S. They are orthodox Hindus and to the cast of the Province employ Tiwari Brahmans of the Sarwariya tribe as their family priests. They usually worship Devi in her form as Bhagawati, the Panchon Pir, and especially Ghazi Miyan: to the south of Mirzapur, Hardiha Deva or Hardaur Lala. These deities receive an offering of sweetmeats, cakes (matida), betel leaves, garlands of flowers, and occasionally a cock is sacrificed. This is not consumed by the worshippers but presented to a Muhammadan faqir. Bhagawati is sometimes worshipped by pouring a mixture of pepper, sugar, and water (wirekworsh) at her shrine.

- folded palm leaves nearly an inch in diameter and with an outer boss decorated with heads, etc., which is wern by low easte Hindu women stuck through a hole in the lobe of the ear. They also go about to fairs and sell red lead (sindar), and forehead spangles (tikuli), which are worn by married women. They also sell various kinds of spices. They use liquor and cat the flesh of sheep, goats, deer, and fish. Brâhmans will drink water from their hands. Only Chamars and menial tribes will eat kacheki or pakki cooked by them. They eat pakki cooked by all the Vaisya tribes, expect Kalwars, Telis, and Bharbhūnjas.

Distribution of the Turbihars according to the Consus of 1891.

		Dis	raior.				Hindon,	Muham- madans.	TOTAL
Cawapur	i		-		4		59		59
Fatchpur							105		105
Banda				4	4		309	8	317
Allahåbåd		,		+			347	6	353
Mirzapur		+					7	341	7
Jamper						3	48		48
Gorakhpur							13		13
Azamgarh							3	-	3

Distribution of the Tarbihars according to the Consus of 1891-concluded.

		Dist	BICT.				Hindus.	Muham- madana,	TOTAL
Lusknow		è					811		811
Unão							123		123
Rà5 Bareli							361		361
Faixābād							33		33
Gonda					+		B		9
Bahrůich							96		96
Sq!tknpur							147		147
Partabgach							200		200
Bărabaqki	÷	+			O.	ne.	62	344	62
			13	To	PAL		2,733	14	3,747

Tarmâli.—A sub-caste of Pâsis who have been separately enumerated at the last Census. They take their name from tār-maina "to press the toddy palm tree," They are recorded to the number of 27 only in Faizâbâd.

Tawâif (plural of taifa, "a troop or company of dancinggirls").—The caste of dancing-girls and prostitutes. The term is a general one, but is more generally applied to those who are of the Muhammadan faith. The Hindu branch is often called by the title Pâtar, Patoriva, Pâtur, Paturiya from the Sanskrit pátra,
"an actor." Kanchan, which is usually derived from the Sanskrit kanchana, "gold" (but this is far from certain), is usually regarded as the equivalent of Tawâif and denotes the Muhammadan branch. The ordinary prostitute, of whatever religion she may be, is often known as Randi (ránr), Sanskrit randa, "mutilated," "a widow," from which class, where widow marriage is prohibited;
the class is commonly recruited, or Kasbi (Arabic Kasb, harlotry).
The large class who prostitute rub rord or live as kept mistresses Mainly based on anguiries at Mirrapur and notes by Chandhari Dhyan Sinh, Meralabad; M. Chhote Lal, Lucknow; M. Sayyid All Bahadur, Partabgarh.

are generally known as Khanagi, "domestie" (khana, "a house") or Harjái, "a gadabout." The last Census classes most of the Hindu dancing-girls and prostitutes as Paturiya, and the Muhammadans as Tawaif. The lists of the so-called sub-castes of the Paturiya contain a number of names, no less than forty-nine in all, which it is impossible to class by any definite principle. Of these the best known are the Bharua (Sanskrit bhata, "wages"), who is a pimp or pander; Gandharap, who represent, in name at least, the Gandharva of the old mythology, who lived in the sky, prepared the some juice for the gods, were partial to women, over whom they exercised a mystic influence; Kanchan, Kashi, Kashmiri, who are usually classed with Nats, the Ramjani (Sanskrit rama-jani "charming woman,") whose name the English sailor and soldier corrupts into Rummy Johnny; and the Rasdhari, a name which means "singer," and is specially applied at Mathura to a set of Brahmans who perform a sort of miracle play describing the loves of Krishna and his consort Radha,1

- 2. Similarly the term Tawaif includes a number of distinct classes. Among these are the Gandbarap, Kanchan, Kashmiri, Paturiya, and Râmjani, already mentioned, among the Hindu class, and the Baksariya or "those who come from Baksar" in Bengal; the Hurukiya, who take their name from the kuruk (Sanskrit Audduka), the small drum, shaped like an hour glass, to which they dance; the Kabûtari, who is usually classed with the Nats, and is so called because she has the flirting ways of a pigeon (kabillar); the Mangta or "beggars;" the Mirssi, who is a Dom singer; the Miskâr or Mîrshikâr, "the chief huntsman," who is a Baheliya; and the Naik or Naika (Sanskrit wayaka, "leader"), a term specially applied to the mistress of a brothel. In addition to these is the Gannharin or "attendant" (Sanskrit gamanadh dra), who attends at festivals and occasions of rejoicing, and rings and dances to the music of the violin (saringi) and the drum (tabla); the Brajbasi or "resident of the land of Braj," who, like the Rüsdhäri, is associated with the dances in honour of Krishna and Rådha; and the Negpåtar, who receives dues (neg) for performances.
- Of such a miscellaneous class as this it is impossible to give more than some notes of the more interesting sub-divisions.

Growso, Malkura, 75, eq.

4. Of the Kumaun Naiks Mr. Atkinson writes :1-" The Naiks, whose pretty village in the Ramgarh valley The Naiks of Kumaun. and settlements at Haldwani are so striking, owe their origin to the wars of Bharati Chand with Doti, when the first standing armies in Kumaun took the field, and the soldiers contracted temporary alliances with the women of the place, whose descendants became known as Khatakwâla, and eventually, Naik. The offspring of these professional prostitutes, if a male, is called Nåyak or Nåik; and if a female, Påta. They soon became celebrated all over India, and in 1554 A.D. Shir Shall undertook the siege of Kalinjar to socure possession of a Pata kept by Kirat Sinh. Notwithstanding their origin the Nayaks contrive to belong to that well-abused gotro, the Bharadvaja, and to the great mid-Hind Sakka. They even wear the sacred thread, though with only three strands, like the common Khasiya. They marry their sons into Râjput families on paying a considerable sum, but devote all their daughters to prostitution. Nayaks live by cultivation and trade, and their villages in the Bhibar are about the best. The son can succeed to the property of his uncle, and the daughters can leave their property to any relative. If a daughter has a son, he performs her funeral ceremonies; if not, her brother performs them. They are attached to the left hand Sakta ceremonial, and eat animal food, and are, strange to say, reported to be careful in ceremonial observances. They have a story of their own; of a brother and sister going on pilgrimage to Badarinath, and the latter falling into evil ways; but the account first given is more probable, and has better evidence to support it."

5. According to another story one of the Kings of Kumann had two slave girls : one of whom married a Rajput, and her descendants are known as Rajkanya; and the other, who married a Hill Chhatri, was the ancestress of the Pâtars. The Pâtars are Hindus and worship Devi, Bholanath, Kallu Pir, and Bhairon. Their girls are trained in singing and dancing and prestitute themselves. They are not married in their own tribe, which procures wives by purchase from other castes. When they are nubile the Pâtar girls marry a pipal tree, and then commence their career of prostitution. The Rajkanyas dance in the temples of the Hindu gods, and among them prostitution is said to be rare.

Hinnelsynn Gazetteer, III, 413.

6. Of ten classes of prostitutes found ordinarily in the plains, two, the Râmjani and Gandharap, are practically all Other Hindu presti-Hindus : the Magahiya, Chhata, Janghariya Naurangi, Mirâsi, Gaunhârin, Domin and Akashkamini are nearly all Muhammadans. None of these marry their daughters. When their sons reach marriageable age they purchase a girl of some low Hindu or Muhammadan tribe and marry her to bim. These married women are not allowed to prostitute. sons, as they grow up, are supported by the earnings of the girls, and act as their pimps and attendant musicians (bianrus). wander about from one inn (sardi) and town to another in search of business, and attend marriages and festivals, where they sing and dance. Hindus have, generally, as their personal god (Ishtadee ata) Krishna, and as their guardian deity Mahadeva. They employ the very lowest class of Brahmans in their domestic ceremonics, and

7. Muhammadans admit any Musalman girl to their society, and Hindus, after they have embraced Islam.

Mahammadan prostitutes.

They are continually recruited from Hindu widows, and discarded or deserted wives.

When a girl is seven or eight years old, she is put under the instruction of a Dhārhi or Kathak, who teaches her to dance and sing.

At the commencement of her education, some sweetments are offered at a mosque, and then distributed among Muhammadan faqirs.

At the first lesson the master is given a present in money and some sweetments, and their fees are about four of five rupees per measem.

When the girl reaches puberty and the breast begins to develop the rite of angiya or the "assumption of the boddice" is performed.

On this occasion some of the brethren are feasted. After this the girl is sold to some rich paramour. This is known as Sir dhankii or "the covering of the head." When she returns after her first visit to her paramour, the brethren are feasted on sweetments. After this follows the rite of missi, which takes its name from the black powder used in colouring the teeth.

She is dressed like a bride and is taken in procession through the streets and afterwards takes her seat at a party (makkl), where the brethren assemble and sing and dance. Her teachers (notal) are remunerated, and the brethren are fed on kackeki and pakki according to the means of the family. This feast may be postponed; but in that case she cannot stain her teeth until it is duly performed, and some sort of entertainment of the brotherhood is obligatory. This rule is said now at Lucknow to be gradually relaxed. The missi represents the final initiation into a life of harlotry. After the rite of missi the girl ceases to wear the nose-ring, and hence the ceremony is sometimes known as untheir utarns, the taking off of nose-ring.

Temporary marriages. or usufructuary marriages (mut'ah). In the Ain-i-Akbari there is a curious account of a discussion in the presence of the Emperor Akbar as to the legality of such unions. The case was finally thus summed up by Badioni. Imâm Malik, and the Shiahs are unanimous in looking upon Mut'ak marriages as legal; Imâm Ash-Shâfi' and the great Imâm Ali Hanîlah look ou mut'ah marriages as illegal. But should at any time a Qâzi of the Malaki sect decide that mut'ah is legal, it is legal, according to the common belief, even for Shâfi's and Hanîfahs. Every other opinion on this subject is idle talk. This pleased the Emperor, and he at once appointed a Qâzi, who gave a decree which made mut'ah marriages legal.

9. One curious point as regards Indian prostitutes is the tolerance ance with which they are received into even respectable houses, and the absence of that strong social disfavour in which this class is held in European countries. This feeling has prevailed for a lengthened period. We read in the Buddhist histories of Ambapâta, the famous courtesan of Visala, and of the Princess Salawati, who was appointed courtesan, and the price of her favours fixed at two thousand masurans. The same feeling appears in the folk-tales and early records of Indian castes. It has been supposed that this idea is based on the prevalence of communistic marriage.

10. Tänsen, the celebrated musician, is a sort of patron saint of dancing-girls. He was a native of Patna and a disciple of the famous Hari Dås Gusåin, of Bindraban. He went to the court of Akbar, became a Muhammadan, Blochmann, Ma-4-Akturi, I, 173.

³ Hordy, Manual of BuddAtem, 244.

¹ Tawney, Katha Sarit Shyara, I, 354; II, 621: Dibistan, II, 154.

^{*} Durwin, Descent of Mass, 11, 261: Lubbook, Origin of Civilisation, 05: Wake-Serpent Warship, 149: Robertson Smith, Kinship, 143: Woutermarck, History of Human Marriage, 80.

and is buried at Gwalier. It is said that he used to listen to the men singing at the well and appropriate their melodies. His contemporary and rival Brij Baula was able, it is said, to split a rock with a single note. The story goes that he learnt his bass from the creaking of the flour-mill. It is believed that chewing the leaves of the tree over the grave of Tansen gives an astonishing melody to the voice, and singing girls make pilgrimages there for this purpose.

Distribution of castes of Prostitutes and Daucing-girls according to the Consus of 1891.

				HINDU.	,	CELLENAS.
Dis	9210	Œ,	ď	Paturiya.	Ta	wait.		TOTAL.
	ar	raidity	Baltariya. Harkaya. Others		Others.
Dehra Dûn		1100	20142)	2/1	11	11
SabAraupur		43	- 		707	7 75
Musaffaron			2	1	1	537	541
Meerut				+++	- an	,,,,	571	671 475
Bulandshab	Y			1	- 11		474
Aligarh				4	444	4	250	258
Mathura							8		87	90
Agra .	è	ä.			2		105	272	379
Farenkhābā	d			182	236		1,038	1,454
Mainpuri	÷					26	500	520
Etawah						513	681	1,094
Etah				411			1,080	1,080
Bareilly						*41	74	74
Bijner						989	260	260
Budána	è	2		98	100		591	689
Moradabad				8		200	211	210

Bholanáth Chandra, Travels, II. 68, sq.: Slooman, Rambles, 11, 333, sq.: Canningham, Archaelogical Reports, II, 379; XXI, 110.

Vol. IV.

Distribution of easter of Prostitutes and Dancing-girls according to the Census of 1891—continued.

				Нивр.	3	fusalmän.	1.11
Dist	PRIC	7.			Tr	whif.		TOTAL.
				Pateriya.	Bakariya.	Rerkeys.	Others.
Shabjakang	ur			59			593	652
Pilibhit							90	90
Cawnpur				106		7	943	1,056
Fatehpur				18	18		479	515
Bànda				75			89	164
Hamîrpur			4	7	VITU-		72	79
Allahabad			4	159	2111000	Om.	360	519
Jhānsi				313	40332		61	61
Jalann			16	11	11. 344	6	103	120
Lelitpar							9	9
Benares				501	-		125	428
Micrapur				74			84	158
Janupur				763			170	933
Ghāsipur				807			954	1,661
Ballia .				117	- 100		213	880
Gorakhpur		*		207			1,490	1,697
Basti .				69			27	96
Azamgarh			,	1,160			496	1,590
Kumaun	÷			68				63
Tarài .					200		21	21
Lucknow	٠			21	22		687	610
UnAo .				21	9		335	365
Rad Bareli				5		42	545	692
Sitapur				16	4	4	1,371	1,395

Distribution of castes of Prostitutes and Dancing-girls according to the Census of 1891-concluded.

				HINDU.	1	Musarman.
-	TRI	or.			Ta	walf.		TOTAL.
				Paturiya.	Bakariya.	Hurkaya.	Others.
Hardoi				7 2 180			1,801	1,808
Kheri.					100	- CO. M.	ben		830	850
Fairabad							2		199	87
Gonda						10	324 936 612	504 982 698
Bahrhich			,	36	***
Sultapur				86	***
Partabgarh					Televit	794	395	395
Barabanki				-	andtal.	2/4	684	084
	To	TAL		4,710	293	718	21,958	37,679

Teli¹—(Sanskrit tailika, taila, "oil expressed from sesamum, mustard, etc., ").—A large caste of pressers of oil and traders in various commodities. The caste is probably a functional group which Mr. Risley thinks must have been recruited from the respectable class of Hindu society, because "oil is used by all Hindus for domestic and ceremonial purposes, and its manufacture could only be carried on by men whose social purity was beyond dispute." Whatever the case may be in Bengal, in Northern India there is no special idea of purity attached to the Teli; in fact it is probably not too much to say that the reverse is the fact. Mr. Ibbetson says of the Panjāb:—"The Teli is of low social standing, perhaps about the same as that of the Julâha, with whom he is often associated, and he is hardly less turbulent and troublesome than the latter."

2. The tribe seems to be singularly destitute of traditions of origin. In most of our Districts all they can say is that they are indigenous. The

Based on enquiries at Mirzapur and notes by the Deputy Inspectors of Schools, Farrakhâbid, Agra, Azamgurh, Busti.

² Tribes and Castes, II, 305.

Panjib Bikasgraphy, paragraph 647.

Von IV.

relt. 372

sub-divisions with local names derive, of course, their origin from the places which supply their title. In Mirzapur they tell a story that there was once a man who had three sons and owned fifty-two makes trees (bassis lotifolis). When he became aged and infirm, he took his sons to the grove and told them to divide them among themselves. After some discussion they decided not to divide the trees, but the produce of them. One of them fell to collecting the leaves and he became a Bharbhûnja or grain-parcher, who still uses leaves in his oven; the second collected the flowers and corollas and, having distilled them, became a Kalwar; the third collected the kernels (koins), crushed them and became a Teli.

3. At the last census the Telis were classed in a number of endogamous sub-castes; Byahut, who are so Internal structure. called because they do not allow widow marriage and marry virgin brides by the standard form (byak); Jaiswar, named from the old town of Jais in the Rae Bareli district; Jaunpuri, who trace their origin to Jaunpur; Kanaujiya to Kanauj; Mathuriya to Mathura; Rathanr, which is the name of a famous Rajput sept; Svihastab from the ancient city of Sravasti, now represented by the ruins of Sahet-Mahet in pargana Balrampur of the Gonda district; and Umare, which is the name of one of the Banya sub-eastes. It will be observed how largely local designations appear in this list. Besides these among the Muhammadan branch, we find the Bahlim, Desi, Doasna and Ekasna. In Mirzapur we find the Kananjiya, Sribastava, Pachhiwaha or "Western;" Byahuta, Bhainsaha, who carry goods on the male buffalo (bhainsa), Chachara, who are said to take their name from their fondness for the chacker (Sanskrit, charchara), the special song sung at the Holi festival; and the Turkiya or Muhammadan Teli. In Benares, according to Mr. Sherring, the divisions are the Byahutbans, the same as the Bythuta mentioned above; the Kanaujiya; Jaunpuriya; Sribūstav; Banarasiya, or those of Benares, Jaiswāra; Lābauri, from Lahore; and the Gulhariya and Gulhani; of all of whom the Gullaini are the lowest. The Jaunpuriya are said not to deal in oil but in pulse (dal). In Farrukhâbâd we have the Râthaur, Parnāmi, Rethi, Jaiswar, Sriwar, Mathuriya, and Bhian. In Basti we find the Biahut, Jaunpuri, Kanaujiya, Turkiya, and Saithwar, which last is a Kurmi sub-caste. In Pilibhit are the Purbiya or

¹ Hindu Tribes and Castes, I. 201.

373 TELI.

"Eastern," Bhadauriya, which is a well-known Rhiput sept, the Råthaur, Tilbhurjiya or parchers of sesamum. In Azamgarh the sub-castes are Jaunpuri, Byahut, Kalaunjiya, which is possibly a corruption of Kanaujiya, Barbhaiya or "the greater brethren," Madhesiya or "dwellers in the middle land," Madhya-desa, which is, according to tradition, the country lying between the Himslaya on the north, the Vindhya range on the south, Vinasama or Kurukshetra on the west, Prayaga or Allahabad on the east; and Turk or the Musalman Branch. In Agra we have the Rathaur, Chamar Teli and Musalman Teli. To the east of the Province again they are divided into the Pachpiriya or worshippers of the Panahon Pir, and the Mahabiriya or devotees of Mahabir. All these sub-castes are endogamous. In Azamgarh it is said that this is certainly the ease with the Jaunpuri, Byahut, and Barbhaiya; but that the Kalaunjiya and the Madhesiya sometimes intermarry. The census returns show 742 sections in the Hindu and 239 in the Muhammadan branch. Of these those of the greatest local importance are the Kaithiya of Mainpuri, the Parasmi of Cawmpur, the Surahiya of Allshabad, the Batra of Jhansi and Lalitpur, the Mahor of Mirzapur, the Baraniya, Kaithiya, Mukeri and Parasmi of Jaunpur, the Dakkhinsha and Jhijhautiya of Gorakhpur and Basti, the Bahrsichiya of Bahraich, and the Makanpuri of Partabgarh. To the cast of the Province the rule of exogamy seems to be that a man cannot marry in his own family (int) or in that of the maternal uncle or father's sister until at least three generations have passed. rukhābād a man cannot marry a near relation or the descendant of a common ancestor or of a blood relation on the father's or mother's side as long as any relationship is remembered; he cannot marry two sisters at the same time, but he may marry the sister of his deceased wife.

4. Marriage customs of the Telis are of the usual respectable kind.

All except the Byhnut, allow widow marriage.

There are usually three forms of marriage:

Byh, Shadi, Charhana or Charheke, when the marriage takes place according to the orthodox ritual at the house of the bride; dola when the ceremonies are done at the house of the bridegroom; and dharanna or segái for widows. Among the more respectable families the preference is for the marriage of a girl in infancy (kunndri), and it is considered disreputable to keep a girl who has menstruated (rajazthala, rajasula) unmarried. To take the rules in Azamgarh as an example, in dharanna or widow marriage, the binding portion of the rite is "foot worship" (pde-pay), when the father of the woman puts her hand in that of the bridegroom. In ordinary marriages the rite of tilak is performed twice, and if after the first the boy dies. the girl will not be regarded as a widow and can be married by the rite of pád-pája. The two occasions on which the tilak rite is performed are at betrethal (mangani) and at marriage. At betrothal the form is that the bride's father comes to the house of the bridegroom; at the appointed time he washes, first the right, and then the left foot of his future son-in-law, and throws some rice at his feet. Next, with the point of his thumb directed towards the boy's nose, he makes four lines, with curds, on his forehead; on the curd mark he sticks seven grains of rice, and touches the boy's forehead with the sacred huse grass, water, curds, rice, and red sandalwood. During the tilak rite at marriage, if the bride be less than eleven years old, she is scated in the lap of her father; if above that age, on a leaf mat (pattal). After the tilak rite the girl's father puts her hand in that of her husband and lets some knea grass, water, rice and money fall into his hand. A widow generally marries the younger brother of her late husband ; but the levirate is not enfored, and the woman's right of choice is recognised. A wife can be divorced for adultery and a man for adultery with a woman of another easte. In both cases the sanction of the tribal council is essential.

TELI. 374

5, The Turkiya, Bahlim, Desi, Dolsna and Ekfisna Telis are Muhammadans; the others are Hindus, but Religion. they seldom procure initiation into one of the standard sects. Their clan deities to the east of the Province are Ghāzi Miyan and other members of the quintette of the Panchon Pir, Hardiya or Hardaur Lâla, the godling of cholera, Mahâbîr and Mahadeva. Ghazi Miyan is worshipped with an offering of goats, fewls, rice, boiled with pulse (khickeri), bread, garlands of flowers, a head-dress (muraith), and a small loin cloth (langet). The other members of the Panchon Pir receive similar offerings, Bread, a Brahmanical cord, and rose perfume ('itr) are offered to Mahâbîr and Mahâdeva. Hardiya receives, during cholera spidemice, a sacrifice of goats, fowls, and young pigs. In the Central Duâb a sacrifice of a goat or ram is made to Devi and to Shaikh Saddu, who is the women's godling. Any one can do the Devi sacrifice, but Shaikh Saddu is served by a Mujawar. Among god375 TELL.

lings of the aboriginal races they acknowledge Jakhai Deota, whose priest is a Dhānuk. They are served by Brāhmans of the usual officiant classes. They cremate their dead and perform the funeral rites according to the orthodox ritual.

6. Their special business is the manufacture of oil, and in almost every bazar the Teli may be seen driving his Occupation and social little blind-folded ox round his oil mill. But status. the recent extension of the use of foreign mineral oils must be seriously interfering with his business. Medicinal oils are made by the Gandhi. The Teli usually makes at least three kinds of oil. The first class includes linseed (alsi, tisi), mustard (sarson), poppy-seed (dánaposta, khashkhask), black mustard (tilga) mahua, cocounut (gola naryal), sesamum (til), eruca sativa, (Idhi), safflower (kusum), gehndu, a wheat grass yielding grain, and the berries of the wim tree (niwkanri). These are all crushed and oil expressed from them in the ordinary mill (kolku). Castor oil (rendi kd tel) forms a class in itself. The third class consists of some oils of a medicinal nature, such as that from the almond (badam). These who work the oil mill treat it as a sort of fetish and a representative of Mahadeva, and worship it at the Dasahra festival. Many of them have taken to shopkeeping of various kinds, moneylending, dealing in grain, and agriculture. As a rule Telis will eat goat's flesh, mutton, fowls, and fish. Those of the Sribastav sub-caste are said to eat pork. They will drink spirituous liquor. In Azamgarh the Barbbaiya sub-caste are said to be peculiar in refusing to wear any torn clothes, and if they cannot afford new clothes prefer to go partly unclothed. They are said to worship like Brahmans. As has been already said, the social position of the Teli is not a high one. Kakin Rija Bhoj, kaban Lakhu Teli? - "What comparison is there between a real gentleman and a Teli upstart even if he be made of money?" Teli kya jané mushk ki sar? - "What can a Teli-know of the smell of musk?" The women say Teli khasam kiya rukha khdwe-" Marry a Teli and live on dry crusts." The Teli's ox is, of course, proverbial, Teli ke bail ke gkar hi kes packas-" Though he stays at home the Teli's ox does his hundred miles," and Teli ka bail is the common term for the man who slaves for nothing.

¹ See Hoey, Monograph, 191, sq.

Distribution of Telis occording to the Census of 1891.

					HINDUG.	i							MURA	MUHANMADANE	d
Districts	d	Byhbat	Jakwie	Jacopari.	.avitaanaA	-aginaftalf	.Tradbett	.datainflas	.bramU	Others	Bahilm.	Den	Dolene.	Ekhana.	Othera	, IATOT
Dehra Dûn		. 437	618	1	:	1	-	i	308	96	167	1	1	1	2,668	8,564
Saltáranpur		,	91	:	1	-1	4	1	h	218	573	4,048	4,976	1,434	37,438	48,109
Musaffarnagar		*	:		-	- 1	1	1	1	un	50	326	8,550	I	3,368	12,292
Meerut		1	i		ŧ	-1	129	1	li	599	1	1	1,995	3,057	11,673	17,717
Bulandshabr		1	i			1	1	i	Ų,	783	498	1	1	I	7,369	8,650
Aligarh		*	*			E	1,197	ŧ	1	1,918	1,432	į	1		6,884	10,731
Mathura			1				629	i	1	1,274	:	i		1	4,437	6,360
Agra			1	546	4	1	7,204	-	1	1,417	1	1	i	1	4,513	13,139
Farrukhabad		. 15	1	:	88	28	14,743	83	i	260	:	1	1	1	ŧ	15,231
Malapuri		:			00	1	9,503	3,245	1	888	1	1	1	-	57	12,746
K(áwah			i	i	600	285	12,737	1	:	1,256	:	1	1	1	:	14,290

14,510	22,152	13,009	15,035	14,652	24,330	12,077	29,787	13,161	12,536	11,279	28,647	9,050	$21,04	6,963	20,450	25,233
1,861	8,382	12,750	3,703	14,183	1-	363	:	1.7	1		45	49	1	:	1	107
ŧ	:	355	:	1	1	1	ŧ	1	I			ŧ	*	1	;
•	ı	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	i	1	1	1	1	1	i
1	i	i	13	1	i	24	:	1	*	ŧ	i	:	:	ī	:	i
200	156	1	269	88	1	200	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	:	1	!
804	679	i	211	151	260	809	1,871	1,148	1,467	786	2,484	7,636	1,328	6,983	2,455	286
1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1,657	818	669'1	405	440	1	1	1	:	1
-	1	:	:	-	833	1	5,284	11,557	8,929	6,817	4,814	751	29			1
5,446	14,885	4	6,958	533	23,629	10,450	19,843	1	9	3,943	90	753	7,638	1	1	:
60079	8,150	i	8,773	ĭ	0	-01			0.4	80	1	ī	25	i	į	283
1	1	1	1	1	00	9-8	148	16	0	1	89	1	:	1	1,077	561
75	1	1	. 1	:	1	100	1	,1	1	3	1	1			1,978	330
-	1	ŧ	946		46	69	1,405	118	80	ł	1	9 .	1	:	1	45
8	i	1	-		ŧ	99	8	9	426	-	30,785	100	1,088	1	15,645	23,610
		,		*		*							- 14
	,									*		*
Etah .	Bareilly	Bijnor	Endåen	Moradabad	Shihjabanur	Pulbha	Cawnpur	Fatshpur	Eduda	Hanfrpar	Alishshid	Jbánsi	Jalann	Inlitpor	Рапатея	Mirkapur

Distribution of Telis according to the Census of 189 I-concluded.

AND.	-дутоТ	28,290	28,599	24,545	87,799	40,325	30,837	4,054	16,420	90,418	21,772	25,627
	Others.	201	i	:	1,437	4,930	1,803	2,652	710	ŧ	174	664
	Hkhana.	1	1	I	1		i	1	i	1	i
Monamadara	-wanted	i	1	ì	;	ŧ	1	:	1	1	1	,
Mon	Dest.	1	1	i	1	1	1	1	ī	1	1	;
	-mtldet	1	1	1	245	1,847	ŧ	16	1,549	_	27	_
	Ofhers.	19,381	3,886	254	6,056	2,934	2,819	893	1,664	818	8,217	808
Hindes.	Unart.	84	19	n	7,1	7/4	1	:	19	į	ŧ	105
	-databing	1	i	1	17	-	55	1	1	1	į	211
	Kenadiliki.	1	1	1	1	i	1	469	617	900'6	1	6,809
	Mathuriya.	1	1	1	4	ı	1	1	1	44	1	***
	-evilvancil	3,708	162,291	23,987	54,463	1,425	11,013	. 1	101	26	204	4.038
	Jangmat	1	3,925	526	24,040	6,469	14,989	ì	:	1	11	9
	Juliwite.	1	19	1	9	438	8	1	11,065	10,529	13,133	8,449
	Bykhnis	1	478	45	2,072	22,269	119	I	20	1	1
							*	•			*
Distract.			٠									,
		Janapar	Ghasipur	Ballia	Gorakhpur	Basti	Assungarh	Tarki	Lunichow	Unito	Rie Bareli.	Stlapur

9,857 1 73 738	191 478 1,396		11 51 2,776	229 1 2,177 3,079 65	1	I	4 5,865	8,435 11,750 194,071 41,157 4,630 95,500 34,656 4,307 14,321 4,746 143,964
		-						-
	1	_	1	-		-7	7.70	-
!	1	161	Ħ	1	ł			41,157
28,296	9,857	1	1	229	1	1	ı	194,071
7.	1	1	1	i	1	I	4	11,750
1	2,524	236	ŧ	10	260	123	4	119,435
1	i	00	2,318	107	4,450	403	1	67,455
760	5,604	1,523	627	5,433	3,733	81	9,939	74,420
1	:	4,482	19,850	4,931	6,364	11,202	1	132,989

Tharu. - A tribe which has its head-quarters in the Himalayan Tarâi and colonies in the Gorakhpur Division and Northern Oudh, Mr. Nesfield, who has given an elaborate account of these people, says :- "To the east they extend about as far as the river Kusi, where they come in contact with the Mechas, a tribe similar to themselves in habits and features, and inhabiting that portion of the Tarái which separates the plains of Bengal from the hills of Sikkhim. To the west they extend as far as the river Sarda, which flows between Kumaun and Nepâl. At this point they dovetail with another forest tribe similar to themselves in appearance and culture, the Bhuksas. The strictly Bhuksa country commences from the Gola or Kicha river, about thirty miles to the west of the Sarda, and extends westward as far as the Ganges, while a few straggling villages are to be found still further west as far as the Jumna. Between the Sarda and the Gola rivers there is a debatcable tract, about thirty miles wide, in which both tribes occasionally reside. In one village at least, and probably in more, the inhabitants are the progeny of mixed parentage, although intermarriage between the tribes is not openly allowed by either. "

2. Many attempts have been made to explain the origin of the Thâru, Some of these are sufficiently absurd. Thus some derive it from takré, "they halted," after their alleged flight into the forest; others from tarkus, "wet," in allusion to the swampy nature of the tract in which they live. A Pandit told Mr. Carnegy that it was derived from that (Sanskrit sthals, "firm ground"). They say themselves that they are Râjputs who ran away after the great fight at Hastinapur, and that their name means "Qnaker," from thathardes, "to tremble." Others say that the name simply means "residents of the Tarki." Another suggestion is that it is derived from the Hindi Athardes, "an eighth-day serf," a man who is bound to give his lord one day's labour in the week. "But," as Mr. Nesfield says, "this implies what is not true. The Thârus are remarkable Largely hased on Mr. J. C. Nesfield's valuable article in the Culcuite Review (XXX-I) and the Gaspet in Gondo by Rev. S. Knowles, with notes from M. Chhadi Lil, Deputy Inspector, Schools, Gorakhper; M. Mumtaz Ali Khan, Assistant Managur, Balrampur Batate, Gonda, and Babu Badari Nath, Deputy Collector, Kheri.

Oudh Gasetteer, II, 126; North West Provinces Ceneva Report, 1267; I, 61; Horth-West Provinces Gazetteer, VI, 358; Journal, Asiatic Society of Bengal 1847, page 450; Carnegy, Nates, 8, Knowles, Ioc. etc., 213.

381 THÄRU.

for their indolence, aversion to service, and incapacity for sustained field labour, and they have never been in the position of serf to any landlord. Had this been the case, they would have sunk long ago into the ranks of Arakhs, Pâsis, Chamèrs, Koris, and other Hindu castes of the lowest rank, who serve as field labourers or bond-slaves to landlords in the open plain, and have lost the free life of the forest which Thârus still enjoy."

S. A more probable attempt has been made to connect it with some local root. Mr. Knowles says that it comes from a verb used by the hillmen, tharva, "to paddle about;" and hence Thiru means "a paddler," By another account that means "wine, " and the name Tharn, or " wine bibber, " was given them by one of the Kshatriya Rajas of the plains, who, when he invaded the hill country, was amazed at their drunken habits. "Another etymology," says Mr. Nesfield, "suggested is from that, which, in the collequial language of the lowest classes, but not in the language of books, signifies, "forest;" and thus Thiru would mean "man of the forest," a name which correctly discribes the status of the tribe. On the whole, however, it is safer not to search for any Hindi etymology, but to consider the name as sprung from the language of the tribe itself, which is now for the most part obsolete. An aboriginal name underived from any Sanskrit or neo-Sanskrit source is the fit appellative of an aboriginal, casteless and un-Brahmanized tribe whose customs have been only slightly modified by contact with those of the Aryan invader."

4. The origin of the Thârus has formed the subject of much controversy. One account is thus given by Dr. Buchanan: 1—"The Gurkhas seem to have been soon expelled from Magadha by a people called Thâru, who are said to have descended from the hills and extended themselves over every part north of the Ghâghra at least. Of this people very numerous monuments are shown, and from these they would appear to have been an industrious, powerful race, as the number of great buildings in brick which they have left is very considerable. The Thârus, in fact, pretend to be the proper descendants of the Sun, and their having expelled the Gurkhas from their usurped estates, and their having descended for that purpose from the hills, are not incompatible with that protension. Their claims to rank are, however, treated with the utmost contempt, because they are an abomination to the Brühmans, and indulge in all the impurities of eating and drinking." He goes on to say that they retain in their features strong marks of a Chinese or Tartar origin, although it must be confessed that these marks are somewhat softened, and that the faces of the men especially do not differ so much from those of the Hindus as those of a pure Chinese do. Still, however, a difference is observable even in the men, and in the women and children is very closely marked.

¹ Eastern India, 11, 841, 19.

- 5. The tradition in East Oudh is that after the fall of the Buddhist dynasty of Kanauj, the Tharus descended from the hills and occupied Ajudhya. They dispossessed the Buddhists, called in Raja Sri Chandra, of Srinagar, in the hills about Badari Nath, who drove back the Tharus, and, marching north, founded Chandravatipur, now known as Sahet-Mahet, or, as Mr. Hoey would call it, Set-Met or Sravasti. Lassen, in his account of the later dynasty of Kanauj, describes an inscription which records that Sri Chandra Deva, the first of the great Rathaur Princes who came to the throne in 1072 A.D., was protector of the sacred places of Ajudhya and Kosala or Sravasti.
- 6. On the other hand they asserted to Mr. Knowles that they were immigrants from the Dakkhin or the south country. In Bijnor they claim Chithor as their place of origin and refer to Jaymal and Patta. They say that they were driven out, apparently in the third siege of Chithor, by Akhar in 1667 A.D., and that they were originally Râiputs, who lost caste by using intexicating liquor and rearing fewls. They never claim a Gurkha or hill origin. Interspersed with them are other tribes, generally called Thâru, but quite distinct, such as Gaharwâr, who also claim to be Râjputs. They never intermarry or eat with the Thârus, abstain from liquor, and never eat fewls. Others, again, as the Dangras, are looked down on as a lower caste by the Tharus.1 Regarding the Chithor story, Mr. Nesfield says:-"Some Tharus know nothing about this tradition, and those who do are not able to tell you whether it was the sack by Alânddîn (A.D. 1303), or that by Bahadur Shah (A.D. 1533), or that by Akhar (A.D. 1567). The story is absurd on the face of it; not the slightest allusion to Tharus in connection with any of these events is made by the Muhammadan historians. The fietion of having come from Rajputana was invented by some of the clans merely to raise themselves in their own and their neighbour's estimation. There is scarcely a hunting tribe or caste in Upper India which has not set up a similar claim." *

¹ Mr. W. C. Bonett, Indian Antiquary, II, 13, quoting Lauren: Merthamak, III, 751 Colchrocke, Brays, II, 196; Asiatic Researches, XV, 447, 457; Journal Asiatic Society, Bengui, X, 101.

² Loc. ett., 200.

383 THARU.

6. He quotes another legend which centres round Raksha or Rikheswar, their patron saint or founder. "Both names are evidently corruptions of some obsolete Tharu word which has been toned down to suit the Hindi accent. According to the legend in vogue among the Tharus of Kheri, this deified founder was a son of the renowned aboriginal King, Raja Ben or Vena, whose name is still rife in many of the oldest cities of Upper India and Bihar, as one who held the rank and title of Chakravartti or universal Emperor in the olden time. In Manu's Institutes he is stigmatised as the first king who allowed a man to marry the wife of his deceased brother. According to Manu he died from the effects of his unbridled lusts. According to the Vishnu Purana, he was beaten to death by a gang of saintly men armed with blades of holy grass, all of which had been consecrated with magic words. Benbans is still a title of several Dravidian tribes on the Vindhyan range. Rikheswar or Raksha was banished, it is said, from his father's court, and ordered, with his band of male followers, to seek for a new home in the north, from which they were never to return. Setting out on their wanderings, they took as their wives any women whom they could steal or capture on the road, and in this way the Tharu tribe was founded. It was not till they had reached the Sub-Himalayan forest, in which they still dwell, that they decided to rest and settle. The soul of Raksha is still believed to hover among the people of his tribe, just as in ancient days he led them safely through the wide sqq. ²Loc. ott., 33.

¹ Mr. E. Colvin, Course Report, North-West Provinces, 1865, L. Appendix 60,

³ IX, 60.

wilderness into a new and distant settlement; so in the present day he is said to be the guardian and guide of men travelling on a distant journey. No Thiru ever sets out from his village for such a purpose without first propitiating him with gifts and promising him a sumptuous feast of flesh, milk, and wine on his return. His presence is represented by a mound of mud, with a stone fixed in the middle, and he delights in sceing the blood of a live capon dashed against this stone and to feel its blood trickling down the side. One peculiarity of this god is that he is deaf, an emblem of his antiquity; and hence vows and prayer are addressed to him in a stentorian tone of voice. The title Gurua, which is generally prefixed to his name, implies that during his residence on earth he was famous as a wizard or medicine man, and acquired through this means the kingship or leadership of his tribe."

8. Dr. Oldham 1 believes that the Tharus are Indian aborigines and certainly very different from Ethnical affinition of the Tartar Highland races. That the tribe the Tharus. has suffered much admixture is quite certain. Mr. Nesfield writes :- "Owing to the intermarriages which have taken place within the last two or three centuries between There men and Nepalese women the physiognomy of the Tharn tribe has acquired, in some instances, a slightly Mongolian cast, which shows itself chiefly, but not to a striking degree, in slanting eyes and high check hones. In other respects their physical characteristics are of the strictly Indian type. have long, wavy hair, a dark, almost a black, complexion, and as much hair on the face and body as is usual with other natives of India. In stature, build, and guit they are distinctly Indian and not Mongolian; nor have they any traditions which connect their origin with Nepal." One of Mr. Risley's 1 correspondents remarks on the scantiness of their beards, but this peculiarity may be due to crossing with Nepalese or Mech. Mr. Knowles says that "some of the women are very fair, and are good looking both in face and figure; though they generally partake of the Mongolian style of features. They prove themselves genuine

¹ Nepál, 151.

² Lot. cit., 37.

Tribes and Oustes, II, 313, note.

⁴ Los, ett., 219,

385 THÂRU.

daughters of Eve by their love of finery. They love to adorn themselves with heavy silver armlets, bracelets, anklets, noss-rings and necklaces of heads and many coloured shells. They wear their long black hair, not tied up in a knot, but rolled into a long horn behind. A more frequent application of water would make their bright yellow skins look more fair and healthy. Their toe and finger nails are nearly all destroyed from being so constantly soaked in water during the rice-sowing season."

9. The most probable explanation based on the available evidence seems to be that the Tharus are originally a Dravidian race who, by alliances with Nepâlesc and other hill races, have acquired some degree of Mongolian physiognomy.

10. As might have been expected from the wandering habits Internal organisation. of the Tharus and the varying influences to which they have been exposed, they tend to break up into a number of sub-tribes which are very intricate and not easily analysed. Those in Muhamdi of Kheri are said to be divided into three endogamous groups; Bana, Batür, and Malwariya; the last of whom take their name from Malwara, a province of the Tara, lying east of Kanchanpur. In Gonda, according to Mr. Carnegy,1 they have six endogamous groups: (a) Gurbans Katheriya, who are said to take their name from being of the race of Guru Rikheswar. They used to wear the Brahmanical thread, but do not do so now. They drink spirits, eat fiesh and fish, but not pork, and they employ washermen, barbers, and oil-pressers. They marry by the rites of tilak and phalddn; (b) Dingoriya or Dingariya, who rear pigs and poultry, shave themselves and wash their own clothes, using for this purpose the ashes of the dean tree (Terminalia alata tomentora). They remove dead cattle with their own hands, and are their own oil-pressers. They disregard all marriage ceremonies, and all that is necessary is for the friends to assemble, kill and eat a pig, and make the girl over to her husband. They will smoke, but will not eat with the Manjhi Musahras; (c) Tharkomahra, who perform the same mean occupations and ceremonies as the Dingoriya, but in addition they make earthen vessels, and they smoke with none of the other sub-tribes; the name is a corruption of TharuKumhār; (4) the Mānjhi Musahra, who may be connected ethnically, as they are by function, with the Musahars of the Vindhyan plateau, who differ from the Dingariya in that they are fishermen and carry the litters of the Gurbans Katheriya, Dingariya, and Purabiya; (s) the Purabiya or "Eastern" drink spirits and eat fiesh, cultivate land and employ washermen, barbers and also Chamārs, to remove dead cattle. They smoke with the Dingariya and marry like Gurbans Katheriya; (t) Dhaikar, who are mendicants and get fixed annual alms from the other five classes. They eat with the Dingariya, and worship a godling of their own, named Kharag.

11. According to Mr. Nesfield, in Gorakhpur the Tharus divide themselves into two great sections: the Pachhami or "Western" and the Purabi or "Eastern ;" but what or where the dividing line is to be found has not been stated. The "Western," it is said, call themselves Chhatris, and refuse to eat with the " Eastern." The "Eastern, " again, divide themselves into the "Upper Eastern " (Barks) and the "Lower" (Chintha). Among each of these again is a large number of smaller claus, some of the names of which are Dagwariya, Nawalpuriya, Marchaha, Kupaliha, Jogitharu, Kositharu, Kawasiya, and Garhwariya." A different account of the divisions and sub-divisions of the tribe is given in the Gonda district. There the tribe divides itself into two great sections: the Dingariya (who are the Dingoriya of Captain Thorburn) and the Kathariya, the first of which indulges in pork, and the second, according to their own statement, abstain from it. Other witnesses, however, deny that the Kathariya abstain from swine's flesh. As to the smaller sub-divisions into which both sections are sub-divided, there are such diversities of statement that it is impossible to get at the truth."

12. The Jugi Tharus, according to Mr. Knowles,⁵ supply the Kanphatas or ear-pierced priests for the temple sacrifice at Tulasipur, as they are adepts in striking off by a single blow the heads of the goats and buffaloes brought as an offering to Devi. The two-fold division into Dangariya and Kathariya is also given

¹ Lan. cit., 20, ag.

¹ North- Western Provinces Gezelleer, VI, 358.

³ Lou. sit., 116.

387 THÂRU.

by Mr. Benett,1 and is confirmed by a correspondent from the Gonda district, who does not, however, admit that the Dangariyas abstain from pork. The names of the sub-sections, according to another authority in the Gonda district, are Purabiya, Dangariya Kathariya, Amara, Tharjogi, Khuna, and Dingar, A correspondent from Kheri gives them as Gorhwaliya, Pachhihan or "Western," Malwariya, Dangariya, Suhaniya, and Râji, which last is usually regarded as a separate tribe. In Gorakhpur, besides the list already given, another enumeration as follows was furnished: Pachhéha (Barka, Chhutka), Kathariya, Dangariya, Khon, Khusiya, Marchaba, Kachla, Kanpbata, Sarkohar, Nawalpuriha The Tharus of Kumaun gave another list which contains only five names : Thâr, Batta, Mahtam, Râwat, and Barwâik ; the last three of which seem to depend merely on status. The Tharus of Bhinga, on the edge of the Bahraich district, gave another list containing seven names : Dangariya, Kathariya, Khond, Dakhar, Râji, Musahar, Bot. In another part of the Bahraich district the names given were Kusmaha, Kathariya, Bantar, Dakhar, Dundwar, Kachia, Rotar, and Jogi.

13. Another carefully prepared list comes from Balrampur in the Gonda district. It gives Dangwariya, Katheriya, Umra, Jogi, Dhaker, Pûrahiya, Bater, Khusiya, Dhîmar, Unchdih, Kumhâr, Khun, Rautar, Detwar, Kuchhila, Rajbatar, Dhakwil, Mandaha, Musahar, Dendwir, Pradhin, Boksa. Of these it is said that the Dangwariya take their name from a place called Dang, which is somewhere in Nepál; the Kathariya from a place called Kathar in Deckhur. Of the Umra it is said that the name is a corruption of Dayamûr, " root of mercy," the title of the Kshatriya Chief who adopted the manners and customs of the Thârus and finally joined them. Of the Jogi Tharus the legend runs that a Sådhu once kept a woman of the Tharu tribe as his mistress, and their descendants became known as Jogi Thârn. They still perform some of the rites of the Jogis. Thus, they bury their dead and erect over the grave a mound (ramada). They eat and drink from the hands of the Dangwariya Tharus; but the Dangwariyas will not take food from their hands. This is rather like the relation of the Pathris and Manjhis. Formerly it is said that they used to admit to their clan a Dangwariya male who cohabited with one of their women or a Dangwariya woman who lived with one of their men. This custom has now ceased in British territory, but still prevails in the hills. The Dhaker are reported to be a branch of the Dangwariya. They are mendicants, who beg only from Tharus, and are endegamous. The Khun are hardly found in British territory. They live by fishing and by attending sacred places, where they dive for and collect fragments of gold and coral which are thrown into the sacred stream with the ashes of the Hindu dead. The Pradhan are found in the direction of Hardwar and are the same as the Mahton or Mahtam of the other lists. The Census returns show 73 sections of the tribe. Some of these are taken from Rajput septs or the names of other tribes, such as Bhagat, Gadariya, Jogi, Kathariya, Raghubansi, Rawat, and Rana; others are territorial, as Bijnauriya ("those of Bijnaur"), Jaunpuri, Kåshigauhan, Motipurha, Navalpurha; most of them are, however, purely local titles, which must await wider knowledge of the geography of the Tarai and its neighbourhood and the local patois of the tribe before their meaning can be ascertained.

THÂRU. 388

14. The truth seems to be that the tribal organization of the Tharus is not well established and is constantly changing under the influence of the local surroundings, and that the landmarks between the Tharus and allied tribes, such as the Bhoksas and Rajis, are very uncertain. The extensive lists given by Mr. Risley from Bihar contain some of the names which have been already enumerated, but it is fruitless to attempt to work out the analogies in detail.

Marriage customs of the Tharus, Mr. Nesfield writes:—"Until the nuptial ceremony has been completed, and the woman has become the recognised property of some individual man, she is regarded as the common property of the clan, and is treated accordingly; till then there is no restriction of intercourse. Even when the marriage knot has been tied, it is not very difficult to get it unlossed; for the contract is not binding for life, or invested with anything like a sacred character, as it is with the Hindus, and men can and do change their wives in a spirit of mutual accommodation.\(^1\) should be added, however, that so long as the contract between the man and woman lasts, the latter is as chaste and faithful as any wife could be." At the same time it should be stated that some of the Tharus repudiate the idea that pre-nuptial license or anything in the form of communa) marriage is tolerated.

¹ Outh Gaguiter, 111, 503; and not Leteurnean, Evolution of Marriage, 53.

16. The usual age for marriage on the woman's part is about seventeen or eighteen, and a man usually makes his first marriage at about that age. The Bengal Thirus practise both infant and adult marriage and one sub-division of them are said to tolerate sexual intercourse before marriage.1 There is no betrothal in infancy, except among some clans which have come more completely under the influence of Hinduism. According to Mr. Nesfield, " the marriage contract is arranged, not by the parties themselves, but by the fathers on either side; and the pair for whom the negotiation is made have no power either to choose or refuse. The father of the youth goes over to the village or clan in which the father of the young woman resides, and after making his proposals for the price to be paid for her, offers him a drink of wine, and if the present is accepted, the bargain is closed. The contract once made is faithfully kept by both parties. The price paid for the woman may be in cash or kind, and its value depends on the means of the purchaser or the attractiveness of the woman," In Bihar the bride-price is supposed to be nine rupses, but is liable to vary according to the means of the family. "The choice of the bride is limited by the rule of exogamy; in other words she must not be a blood relation to the husband chosen for her, nor of the same village, but of some outside village or clan. Wife capture is scoretly practised to some extent among the Tharus. Thay have been known to carry off girls by stealth from the Bhuksa tribe conterminous with their own borders on the Sårda river, and from the Nepälese tribes living on the outer spurs of the Himalaya mountains; and this practice of getting wives from Nepal will explain the slightly Mongolian cast of face which has now become rather common, though not universal, among the Tharn tribe. But though the fact of wife capture has become almost obsolete, the form is still preserved in the manner in which the bride is conducted to her new home. The father of the bridegroom never goes to take her away from her own class or village unless he is accompanied by a select bodyguard of fellow tribesmen. They enter the bride's house in the evening, eat and drink all they can get there in the way of pig, goat, wine, rice, and ghi; and then carry her off on the following morning led by a band of men dancers, men singers, and men musicians, while the bride herself screams and cries as if she were being led off by violence. All this implies a demonstration of force, though no such thing as force is really anticipated or intended."

¹ Hisley, toc. cit., II, 314.

390

17. It is needless to say that much the same fiction of capture is found in the marriage usages of other tribes Marriage by capture. as well as the Tharus. Thus, writing of the Eastern Districts of the Panjah joining on to these Provinces, Mr. Ibbetson 1 says : - The strict rule of tribal exogamy which still binds all classes, both Hindu and Musalman, excepting, however, the priests and traders, who observe only the prohibitions of the Sanskrit scriptures, especially the rule against marrying from neighbouring village, the formal nature of the wedding procession, which must be as far as possible mounted on borses, and in which males only may take part, the preparatory oiling of the bridegroom, the similar treatment of the bride being, perhaps, a later institution, -all point to marriage by capture. So does the use of the bloody hand at both villages. The marking all the turnings from the village gate to the bride's house may be a survival of a very common intermediate stage, where the bridegroom visits the bride by stealth. The rule that the procession must reach the girl's village after midday, must not enter the village, but remain outside in a place allotted to them, the fight between the girl's and boy's parties at the door of the bride's house, the rule that the girl shall wear nothing belonging to herself, the hiding of the girl from the boy's people at the wolding ceremony,-all point to marriage by capture. So does the rule by which the boy's party must not accept food at the hands of the girl's people after the wedding, and must pay for what they eat on the succeeding night, and the fiction by which the girl's father is compelled to ignore all payment of money by the bridegroom's friends. The bloody hand stamped on the shoulder of the boy's father by the girl's mother as he departs, and the oustom which directs the girl to go off bewaiting some one of her male relatives, Panjdh Ethnography, 184; and see McLennan, Studies, 38, sqq.; Primitive Marriage, 27, sqq.

who has lately died, saying 'Oh! my father is dead! 'Oh! my brother is dead ' are very marked; as is the fight with sticks between the bride and bridegroom. Finally we have the rule that after the ceremonial goings and comings are over, the wife must never visit her father's house without his special leave, and the fact that the village into which his daughter is married is utterly taboord for her father, her elder brother, and all her near elder relatives. They may not go into it, or even drink water from a well in that village, for it is shameful to take anything from one's daughter or her belongings. Even her more distant elder relations will not eat or firink from the house into which the girl is married, though they do not taboo the whole village. The boy's father can go to the girl's village by leave of her father, but not without. Similarly, all words denoting male relations by marriage are commonly used as terms of abuse, as, for instance, surra, sala, bahusi, jamai, or father-in-law, wife's brother, sister's husband, and daughter's husband. Of these the first two are considered so offensive that they are seldom used in their ordinary sense." It is necessary to say that many of the conclusions of Mr. Ibbetson, as thus given, have been disputed,1

18. Among the Tharus, to complete the analogy to the old custom of wife capture, there is no celebration of unptial ceremonies after the bride and bridegroom have come to their journey's end. As soon as they enter the house appointed for they are, ipso facto, man and wife. Mr. Risley " remarks that slight traces of the form of capture may perhaps be discorned in the ritual, but these are not very marked among the Tharus of Bihar. "Brahmans officiate as priests, and the brother-in-law of the bride usually takes a prominent part in the proceedings. In the Mardaniya and Chitwaniya sub-tribes the bridegroom's party, instead of being entertained by the bride's people, are expected to feast the latter for three days before the bride is produced. No second ceremony (gauna) is performed when the bride goes finally to live with her husband. When she is married as an adult, she goes to her husband at once, and in all cases it is deemed proper for her to spend one night at her husband's house immediately after marriage. On the occasion of this visis she and the relations who accompany her are entertained at a feast called duthi bhatdwau, giving rice to the bride, which celebrates her formal admission into the sept to which her husband belongs. If she is still an infant, she is taken back next day to her parents' house by her brother-in-law, and remains there until she has attained sexual maturity."

¹ Panidb Census Report, 1, 236.

² Loc. cit., II, 214, sq.

- 19. Among the Dangariyas of Gonda it is forbidden to introduce women of low castes, such as the Kori, Chamar, or Musalman; but if one of the sept can induce a woman of a caste higher than his own to live with him, the union is recognised, and children born of the pair are regarded as legitimate and enjoy full tribal rights.
- 20. In Gorakhpur the betrothal is arranged by neighbours and friends on both sides, and the pledge of the engagement is the sending of twelve cups (tarahi) of spirits by the father of the bridegroom to the house of the bride. When this is accepted the engagement is complete. There are three forms of marriage ceremony in vegue: the Pachhindhdu or "Western," the Parbiha or "Eastern" and the Bhoj or "Banquet." The most respectable form, in which the rites are done at the house of the bride, whose father provides a suitable dowry, is known as Pachhindhdu. In the Parbiha form no dowry is given. The Bhoj is the least respectable of all, and is only done by the very lowest members of the tribe. The binding portion of all three forms is the sendalrhaudhau, when the youth applies vermilion (sendal) to the parting (mdug) of the girl's hair.
- 21. There marriages are usually done in the early spring; but this is not essential, and they have not reached the stage when the rite cannot be done except on a lucky day selected by a Brihman astrologer. Polygamy, divorce in the form of the expulsion from the house of the faithless wife with the approval of the council, widow marriage, and the levirate under the usual restrictions are all allowed. Divorced women can marry again like widows, and both classes are distinguished by the title wari, or "selected," from women who were married as virgins by the full ritual. The social status of a married widow or divorceé is, however, inferior to that of a regularly married wife; but for the purposes of succession both rank alike.
 - 22. Of the Thâru birth rites Mr. Nesfield 'writes:—" After the birth of a child the mother is not allowed to taste food or water for two days. On the third day she is allowed to drink as much wine as she desires, and some is rubbed over her body. Tharu women assist each other at the time of childbirth. They are said to be very skilful in midwifery, and Chamar women are not employed for such purposes as among Hindus. They have a form of lustral ceremony or haptism for the benefit of new-born babes. On the day of its birth the child is immersed in water, while the oldest man in the family pronounces over it certain auspicious words. After the immersion ceremony is over, the child is furnigated with fire and smoke; a tuft of dry kans or kusa grass is dug out by the roots. After placing the head of a snake and the sting of a scorpion inside the tuft, they set it on fire, holding the flame as near as possible to the place where the child is lying. The ingredients taken from the snake and scorpion are intended to render the child proof for the remainder of his life against the attack of secret enemies of all kinds. An iron tool is kept in the room where the child sleeps to avert the Evil Eye. When the child is four or five months old, a name is selected for it, and this is bestowed before an assembly of friends by the oldest man in the household."

393 THÂRU.

- 23. Among the more Hinduised Tharus of Gonda, a Chamarin is sometimes called in at births, and after six days her place is taken by the wife of the barber. All Tharus, except the Kathariyas, starve the mother after delivery, and she is not fed without a preparatory offering of laddu sweetmeats to Bhagawati. On the twelfth day the birth pollution is removed by a bath. There is no trace of the couvade.
 - Adoption. Adoption. He assembles the clansman and taking the boy in his lap, he puts his cap on his head, which signifies that he is his son. Among the Dangwariya sept in Gonda, when a man marries a widow he very often adopts her son by her first marriage, and the son thus adopted receives a larger share of the inheritance than the issue of the marriage with his mother.
 - 25. Earth burial seems to have been the usual way in which the Death customs.

 Tharus formerly disposed of their dead; but cremation is now taking its place, except in the case of those who die of cholera or small-pox; these are always interred.

"After eremation the ashes are scattered in the nearest river. Before, however, the corpse has been disposed of by either rite, it is usual to paint it with vermilion and expose it for one night on a mound outside the house. From this mound, as from a stronghold, the spirit of the dead is supposed to scare away wild animals from the crops. Whether the body is buried or burnt, the ceremony is always performed on the southern side of the village, a notion probably berrowed from the Hindus, who consider that the north is the region commonly frequented by divine spirits, and the south by human souls.2 The man who puts the first fire to the funeral pyre is considered to be unclean from having brought himself within dangerous reach of the contagion of death. He is therefore, kept at a distance for ten days after cremation and compelled to live entirely alone. On the expiry of the tenth (or the thirteenth as some Tharus relate) the friends of the deceased meet at the house where he died, and after undergoing the ceremony of shaving, they hold a feast of the dead. The banquet prepared for this purpose consists of cooked flesh and wine, the scent and smoke of which are intended to refresh the departed soul; the solid parts, that is, the flesh and wine, themselves are consumed by the living." Mr. Nesfield b suggests that the funeral feast consumed by the relations developed into the feeding of Brahmaus, because while offerings to the dead should be made through fire. Manu taught that "there is no difference between fire and a Brahman," and that an oblation of food to such a holy man is "an offering in the fire of a sacerdotal mouth."

26. "In certain rare cases the burial rite is performed in a manner distinct from either of those already described. A man noted above his fellows for wisdom in counsel, bravery in the chase, or knowledge of the magical or medicinal arts, is buried under the floor of the house in which he was living before his spirit departed. The house thenceforth becomes a temple, and ceases to be used as a dwelling-place for man. The soul of the dead becomes its

With this compare Spancer, Principles of Sociology, I, 267, 1991. Tyler, Princities Ouldars, II, 150.

Manu, Jastitutes, III, 206; for the situation of Yamapura or Yamasodana, see Monier-Williams, Brithmanism and Hinduism, 200.

Spencer, ice. ett., I, 155, sqq. ; Tylor, ice. cit., 11, 30.
Institutes, III, 212, 91 : 168.

[&]quot;Spencer, les cit., I, 251.

395 THÂRU.

and neighbours of three or six months after the death, the friends and neighbours of the deceased assemble round his grave or temple and make an effigy in clay, parts of which are painted in various colours, intended to reproduce the appearance of resuscitated life. His worshippers fall down weeping and wailing before the image, and place offerings of cooked flesh and wine at its fact. Presently, at a given signal, as soon as the soul of the dead is believed to have been propitisted by the scent of roast meat and the fumes of wine, they commence to dance and sing with every expression of joy; and the proceedings of the day are closed with consuming the solid parts of the offering."

27. According to another account from Gonda, the dead are cremated, except those who have died without heirs, and these are buried. The Jogi Tharns, as already stated, raise a mound (samddh) over the graves of their dead. When a curpse is cremated, they bury the ashes on the spot or throw them into a neighbouring stream. Only a few, who are more completely Hinduised, carry the bones to the Ganges. When a person dies of pestilence, the body is buried for the time, and, when the plague is over, disinterred and cremated. They shave the hair of the corpee, out the nails, bathe it, and rub it with ubtan, consisting of ground mustard mixed with turmeric and water. It is then earried on a cot to the cremation ground. The mourners take with them some pulse, rice, ghi, and some earthen vessels. Before the corpse is burnt, they make two fireplaces on which they place two vessels, in which each of the mourners, by turn, cooks some rice and pulse. Then the corpse is placed upon the pyre, and the chief monracr walks seven times round it and sets fire to it. On their return to the house of the deceased, his widow and children wash some copper pice in water and sprinkle it over the party of mourners. The relatives supply some spirits and the friends sharbat, which are mixed together and drunk by all present. The man who burns the pyre secludes himself ten days in the case of a dead man and nine days for a woman. The Kathariya and Dangwariya septs keep a lamp burning in the house for ten days after the death to give light to the ghost when it comes to visit its home. On the tenth day they feast their clansmen, and on the thirteenth Brahmans. The other Tharus perform the rites in the ordinary Hindu way.

is based on a belief in ghosts and consists of little else; the Thirus of the plains are becoming rapidly Hinduised. The soul is believed to survive the body, wandering forth into space and frequenting the haunts of the living sometimes with malignant, sometimes with friendly, intentions. "One Thiru, on being questioned what became of the soul after death, gave an answer, which verifies, with remarkable closeness, the explanation of the ghost theory given by Dr. Tylor. He said that at the time of sleep his soul or second self leaves him and wanders about at will; and as he was not able to say where his soul goes to or what it does during the intervals of sleep, so he could not pretend to say what became of it after the final sleep of death had set in."

29. Mr. Knowles, whose knowledge of the beliefs of the Tharus is unique, writes "-" It was to be expected that this people would be very superstitious. The blats or demons lucking in the forest trees, especially the weird semalor cotton tree (bomban keptaphylla) and the pre/s or spirits of the dead lead there a very miserable life. When the last ray of light leaves the forest, and the darkness settles down upon their villages, all the Tharu men and women and children huddle together inside their fast-closed huts in mortal dread of these ghostly beings, more savage and cruel than the leopards, tiggers, and bears that now prowl about for their prey. Only the terrible cry of "Fire" will bring these poor fear-stricken creatures to open their doors and remove the heavy barriers from their huts at night; and even in the day time, amid the hum of human life, the songs of the birds, and the lowing of the cattle no Thâru-man, woman or child-will ever venture along a forest line without casting a leaf, a branch, or a piece of old rag upon the Bansati formed at the entrance of the deep woods, to save themselves from the many diseases and accidents the goblins and malicious spirits of the forests can bring upon and cause them. The Bansati or 'good spirit' of the woods is a square space cut in the ground six feet by six covered with pine branches."

80. The Tharu patron saint Raksha or Rikheswar has been already mentioned. Mr. Risley thinks that he is identical with the Nesfield, let. cit., 18, sq. ; Tylox, Primitive Culture, I, 490, 199.

^{*} Loc. ett., 214.

Rikhmun of the Musahar Bhuiyas. Malignant spirits "cause fever, ague, cough, dysentery, fainting, headache, madness, bad dreams, and pains of all sorts. In fact the Tharus have no conception of natural disease, and no belief in natural death, except what is faintly conceived to be the result of physical decay. Their state, therefore, would be one of utter helplessness, were it not for the reputed skill of medium men or serverors, who profess to have the power to control the spirits of the air, or to interpret their grievances or wants. In the Tharu language these men are called Bararar; but the titles of Guru, Gurua, Bhagat, Nyotya, Ojhait, all of which are borrowed from the Hindi, are now in common use, though even of these the last two are probably of shoriginal or non-Sanskritic origin. The power of the medicine man is tremendous. He has a host of liege spirits at his command. Not only can he expel a fiend from the body of a sufferer, but he can produce suffering or death by driving a malignant spirit into the body of his foe. In order to exoroise an evil spirit, he holds in his left hand some ashes of cowdung, or grains of mustard seed, or will nuts. and after breathing some mystical virtue into them by the utterance of a spell, he causes the patient to eat them, or has them attached to his arm. One of the spells uttered at such times is as follows. It is addressed to Kalika, the Tharn goddess of death and patroness of the magical arts :-

Gurhai Gur sair, Gur tautra mantra, Gur ; Lakhai niranjau; toku sohai phulka bhār; Hamka sohai gun vidya kai bhár;

Yahan kai vidga nahin,

Kamru Kam kai vidya ;

Jaisé vidya Kamru Kam kai lagai, waisé vidya lagai mor.

The language is that of bad and scarcely intelligible Hindi and may be rendered thus :-

"The Guru Kalika is great; she is everything; she is magic by deeds (tautra); she is magic by words (mantra). She points out the way to relief. Thou, O Kalika, deservest to be heaped with flowers! I too deserve to be heaped with secret wisdom, the wisdom of Kamru Kam, not the wisdom of the country. Whatever effect the knowledge of Kâmru Kâm produces, such effects let my knowledge produce also, "

31. Mr. Knowles 1 says :- "Their religion is as simple as themselves. A very primitive piece of wood in the shape of a Mahadeva stone, near which is erected a long stick, with a bit of red cloth fastened to the top, is all they have as an object of worship; and I found a very few in a village pay any attention even to this. They have some idea of a Supreme Being they call Nārāyan, who gives them sunshine and rain and harvests; but they have no proper idea how this great, far-off Being is to be approached and worshipped. I found about five Thārus, who had taken to themselves the luxury of a Brāhman Gura from Balrāmpur, and who carried on pāja in the usual Hindu orthodox way."

32. "The goddess who presides over life and death, and whom the Tharus believe to be the supreme power in the universe, is Kalika, one of the numerous forms of Devi, Durga or Kali, at whose name all India trembles, especially the low tribes and the casteless tribes, among whom she originally sprung. One of her titles in Oadh is Sonmat or Sonwat, "the crescent headed;" Chandika Devi is the goddess of the Bhars, and her name means the same. Mari, the patron goddess of Kanjars, is also worshipped by them. She appears to be identical with Samai or Samaiya, who, according to Dr. Buchanan,1 is a Tharu deity. Medicine men look to Kalika as the special patroness of their art. To the fair sex she is the goddess of parturition, and her aid is specially invoked by women who have had no children. All classes combine to give her a periodical ovation, accompanied by much dancing, banqueting, and drinking of wine, about the middle of October. Theres also take part in the huge animal sacrifice performed at the celebrated altar in Devi Patan, in the Gonda district. Such is her thirst for blood that at this time twenty buffalces, two hundred and fifty goats, and two hundred and fifty pigs are slaughtered daily, for ten days continuously. The sacrifice is vicarious, the blood of the buffaloes, etc., being intended as a substitute for that of human victims. This loathsome festival is thronged with visitors from the plains of India and from the hills of Nepal, Sikkhim and Bhutan."2

33. "Another deity revered by Thârus, and like Kâlika of indigenous or non-Aryan origin, is her consort Siva, known chiefly among Thârus by the name of Bhairava, 'The Terrible,' Thâkur, 'The Lord,' and amongst Hindus I y that of Mahâdeva, 'The

¹ Euglora India, 11, 389.

² Nusdield, lee, cit., 27.

399 THÅBU.

Great God.' He, like his spouse, is a god of destruction and thirst for blood. But he is chiefly worshipped by the Tharus as the author of reproduction, of which a stone lingam, as among Hindus, is made the symbol. It is more usual, however, for a Tharu to erect a mud mound in front of his house, and fix an upright pole in the centre, to represent the presence of this phallic divinity. Nature worship among Tharus is represented by two deities of some importance. One is Madhu the god of intexicating liquor, specially of the rice wine made by themselves. He represents the goddess Varunani, Varuni, Mada or Sura of Vaishnavism.1 The other is Dharchandi, 'the patroness of cattle,' though her name would imply that she was at first intended to personate the Earth. Her shrine, like those of the deities already named, is a mound of c'ay. The mound dedicated to Dharchandi is studded with short wooden crosses, on which rice, pulse, and other produce of the fields are offered, and always on plates of leaf. Her shrine is so placed that all the cattle of the village, together with the swine, sheep, and goats, pass it on going out to graze, and repass it on their return. When the cattle sicken or die, larger and more valuable offerings are made. Neither of these deities is known or worshipped by other natives of Upper India." In Champaran, Kuân is worshipped as a village deity by casting sweetments down a well (kndn) and smearing vermilion on its rim. 2

34. In Gonda, besides the worship of Mahideva and Bhāga-wati, the Jogi Thārus worship a deified worthy known as Ratināth. They have also minor village deities, known as Garar Bir, Kāli, and Deohār, or the collective village pantheon. Bhāgawati is worshipped on the tenth of Kuār with a sacrifice of a pig or a fowl and with an offering of milk and wine. At the same time the brethren are fed on sweetmeat. If there are several Thāru families in a village, they will each feed the brethren on successive days. Those who are poor feed only one member of each family of the brethren. Mahādeva is worshipped daily with an offering of sandal, washed rice (achkat), flowers, incense, a lighted lamp, and water. The worship of Garar Bîr and Kāli is done in the months of Jeth, Bhādon, and Aghan. In the months of Jeth and Bhāden the offering consists of a pig, goat, ram, fowl, wine, and milk. In Aghan they offer the maguri fish (macropteronatus magur), fowle, eggs, rats, wine, and milk. The above is the rule among the Dangwariya Thârus. The Kathariya offer a ram in Asârh, and in Aghan a mixture of new rice, ghi, and sugar. The offerings are consumed by the worshippers. The worship of these deities is often carried on by a general subscription among all the Thâru residents of the village.

2 Bisley, loc. vil., II, 316.

¹ Monior-Williams, Brahmanism and Hindnism, 106.

400

- 35. In Gorakhpur their chief objects of worship are Mahâdeva and Bhawâni. They have also a crowd of minor godlings, such as Sâwan, Lutta, Mangan, the Jâk and Jâkni, who are field godlings; Brahm, a deified Brâhman ghost; Mari, the goddess of death, and Bâgheswari, the tiger goddess. Of the origin and attributes of these godlings they are quite ignorant. Sâwan, Lutta, and Mangan receive a sacrifice of a cock at the Naurâtri; Bâgheswari is worshiped through a Gurua or Ojha with an offering of rice-milk. After sowing the autumn crops, Jâk and Jâkni receive an offering of some oilcake and a chicken. At the same time a cock is offered to Mari, Brahm is worshipped at any time of sickness or other trouble with an oblation of milk.
- 36. There sold three animals secred above all others, and these they would deem it a sacrilege to destroy—

 Animal and plant wor—the cow, the serpent, and the monkey,—of which the cow and monkey are probably adored through the example of their Hindu neighbours. The snake has a special service at the Nagpanchami. The only tree to which they appear to show any particular respect is the plant.
- 37. In the spring Tharus observe the annual festival of fire, an . observance " resembling, in many respects, the Postivals. Holi of the Hindus, and known to Tharus themselves by this and no other name. A mound of earth is prepared, in the centre of which a pole is fixed in a vertical position, the phallic emblem of reproductive energy. Offerings of tarmeric, hemp, dhatifra, and other pungent or odorous herbs are placed upon the pole and mound by the assembled people. Straw and stubble and sticks are then piled around the pole; and the oldest or most respected man in the assembly puts fire to it. After the bonfire has burnt itself out, they amuse themselves with dancing, playing the drum and cymbals, pelting each other with coloured powder, singing amorous songs, and cracking Inscivious jokes. The evening is spent in feasting on roast meats and rice and drinking wine. The only difference between this and the Hindu form of the Heli is that the same gods and demi-gods are not honoured in the one as in the other, and that the Thârus have retained the old phallic emblem, which among Hindus has gone entirely out of use." As has been shown elsewhere, this probably represents a more primitive form of the usage than that at present prevailing among Hindus. We have met a similar usage among the Dravidian tribes of Mirzapur, who burn the old year (sambat julina) in the form of a stake. In Gorakhpur, where the Thârus have come more completely under Brâhmanical influence, they observe all the ordinary Hindu festivals.

401 THÂRU.

88. Mr. Nesfield ³ has given an elaborate account of the social life of the Thârus. They live by hunting social states and occupation.

Social states and occupation, gathering forest fruits and vegetables, grazing cows and buffaloes, making ghi, keeping pigs, fowls, and goats, and practising a rude form of agriculture. "As hunters they despise and shan such vermin as jackals, snakes, and lizards. The animals which they chiefly hunt are the wild boar, the deer, the antelope, and other large game in which their forests still abound. They also lay snares for the percupine (sob) and eat its flesh, which is considered to bear some resemblance to that of the pig. Sometimes, but only when they are pressed for food, they will eat field rats. They are fond of hares when they can catch them, and they are not averse to the flesh of the river tortoise. When the stock of meat happens to become larger than they can consume at once, their mode of preserving it is by cutting it into strips and drying it in the sun."

89. Mr. Knowles * remarks that though the men and boys go about almost in a nude state, with only a piece of cloth hung loose in front, held by a string fastened round the waist, yet the wives and daughters of the tribe are so well clothed that only the arms and feet are left exposed.

40. In Gonda they cat pork, and the flesh of deer and those cloven-footed animals which ordinary Hindus cat, fowls, fish, both scaled and scaleless, tortoises, rats and hares. They will not cat beef, or the flesh of the monkey, crocodile, snake, lizard, jackal, and other vermin. This is also the case in Gorakhpur; but here there seems to be an increasing tendency towards the restrictions in force among Râjputs, of whom they claim to form a branch. In Gonda all Thârus will smoke together. The Kusumba, Dahel, Lampochhuz and Parpariya or Palpharaha septs eat kachchi and drink together. These will not eat with Kumhar Jogi and Dhaker. But the latter will eat from the Kusumha. The Dangwariya and Katheriya will eat pakki together. The Brahmans and Kahatriyas of the hills will not touch food from any Tharu; but they will drink water drawn by members of the Dangwariya sept. The Bråhmans of the plains will drink water drawn by the Katheriyas. Their chief fishing implements are the hook and line, the not and the funnelshaped basket. They often poison the water and catch fish in this way. Their favourite root is a plant of the yam species, which grows freely at the foot of the hills. Wild rice, the flower of the makna tree (bassia latifolia) and the fruit of the wild fig tree are gathered in their several seasons. Until recently they used to cultivate in a rude way by cutting and burning down the jungle, but now they cultivate the transplanted rice throughout the Tarki, and they have a valuable source of food in the plantain which grows plentifully around their villages. Mr. Knowles 1 writes that "the rice which is not carefully taken out of the husk and is therefore all broken, is their principal food. They eat three times a day. At what answers to our breakfast they eat a meal of boiled rice; at what we call our tiffin they make a meal of boiled rice-water, and at our dinner time they make a more substantial meal of pulse and rice and the meat of any game they may have shot or caught in the jungle. But they never eat bread of any kind. Little wheat is grown and that for market. The first meal is called kalwa or kalewa (Sanskrit kalya-varta); the second mingi and the third beri." The women do the largest part of the sowing, weeding and harvesting, while the men engage in hunting, fishing, etc., which they regard as the proper occupation of their sex. "The only kind of labour, which a Tharu will undertake, is that of elephant-driver to some Raja. Their skill as elephant-drivers is admitted everywhere; and latterly they have acquired the art of catching wild elephants from the forest and taming them for the Raja of Balrampur and other noblemen."

¹ Nesfield, loc, cit., 30.

^{*} Introduction to Popular Religion and Polklore, 301, 29.

¹ Loc, cit., 3, sqq.

¹ Loc. cit., 211.

403 THÂRU.

41. Their villages, according to Mr. Knowles, are from one to two miles distant from each other, and the Villages and houses. houses are all made of wood or grass. The outside grass walls of each house are plastered over with red mud, They never use cowdung for this and other household purposes as is usual with the people cutside the jungle; that they use only for The cattle sheds are protected from beasts of prey by strong wooden palings. The wells in the village are kept from falling in by boards being let down and fastened together. The houses are large, cool and commodions, and generally raised on poles, like those of the Dyaks described by Mr. Wallace," in order to protect the inmates from damp and malaria. They contain large jars of red clay in which food grain and seed rice are kept Dr. Buchanan a remarks that "the huts of the Tharus have straight ridges, and in general are much wider and longer than those of other natives. But one hut usually serves as the residence of a family, which in the southern parts of the District would have three or four hots round a yard. On one side of the hut is usually a garden, neatly fenced and containing tobacco, mustard and a few plantain trees. The Tharns keep cows, buffalces, sheep, goats, fowls, and pigeons, and this live-stock occupies an open end of their hut separated from the dwelling apartments by a hurdle wall."

48. "Every little village," writes Mr. Nesfield "is a self-governing community. Disputes are decided by a council of elders, and this is sometimes presided over by a headman who, in the Tharu language, was formerly called Barwaik, but who is now dubbed even by themselves with the ordinary Hindu title of Chaudhari. The office of headman is not hereditary. The man selected is one whose age, experience and knowledge of the magical and medicinal arts entitle him to more respect than the rest; and he acquires the status of headman by tacit consent and not by formal election. The decisions of the council or the headman are obeyed unreservedly; and there is no such thing known as a Thâru taking a fellow tribesman before a tribunal outside his own community. Litigation between Thârus and Hindus is equally unknown. Amongst themselves the Thârus are, for the most part, a peaceful and good-natured race,

¹ Loc. eil., 211.

Malay archipelago, 50.

¹ Eastern India, II, 40.

¹ Loc. cil., 6, sq.

тили. 404

following without question, as if by a law of nature, the customs and maxims of their ancestors."

43. Their strongest form of eath is placing the hand on the lingam of Mahâdeva or on the shrine of Kâlika. "A less potent eath, and one evidently derived from the Hindus, is by holding water in the palm of the hand, the water being supposed to have come from the Ganges. When two persons accuse each other of some fault, and it is known that one or other must be guilty, resort is had to the floating test. The two disputants are flung simultaneously into deep water, and the one who rises first is declared guilty. Another kind of ordeal practised by them consists of throwing a coin into a howl of boiling oil or boiling water, and thrusting in the arm to take it out. If the arm comes out unblistered the person is declared innocent."

by themselves. The share of the plough, the point of the spear, the blade of the axe or hatchet, and the blade of the bos with which they dig the yam are procured from Lohars. The recollection of stone weapons survives even in tradition. The curved knife (kinikini) is procured from Nepal. Their plough is of the same design as that used by Hindus, but more simple, for the upright pole (jangka), to which the exen are attached is in the same piece of wood with the curved part to which the iron share is fastened. They work in bamboo, reeds, and fibres, and make baskets, snares, nots, and similar appliances for hunting and fishing. A peculiar article of dress is the broad leaf umbrella worn over the head to keep off the sun and rain.

Dances.

Dances.

Dances.

Dances.

Or sixteen is dressed as a woman, and his partner beats a small drum suspended from the neck. The pair advance and retreat with a gliding motion, and represent with coarse fidelity the advances of the lover and the coyness of the maid. As they proceed they warm to the work; and I shall never forget the ecstatic but somewhat ludicrous rapture which shone in the face and spake in every limb of the drummer after two hours of the exercise and the infusion of a large amount of raw spirits. Every new and then the dancing gives place to a dramatic interlude, in which a dullard is made the butt of the rough and occasionally

405 THÁRU.

obscene wit of the leading actor. These scenes were invariably the vehicle of satire, and the Brahmans of the plains and Sir Jang Bahadur of Nepal were visited with unsparing ridicule." ¹

Intexicating drinks.

47. Like all secluded races the Tharus are notorious for witchcraft and in the plains, Tharubat or "the Screeny and witcheraft. Tharu country" is a synonym for witch land. "Every Tharu woman," says Mr. Knowles," "after the marriageable age, is supposed by those who live outside the Thard country to possess the tong or power of the Evil Eye to bewitch and enchant; so that she has the power to turn a desi or stranger into a wild animal or destroy him slowly by consumptive fever, This, I find, is one reason why all the natives outside the forest dread the Thârus and fear to live among them The forest officer has had the greatest difficulty in getting carpenters and masons to come out and build his house, because they were afraid of Tharu tons. The power of the Evil Eye displays itself in two forms : the major curse being known as lokus, which commences with violent wasting away, and results invariably in a rapid death. For the lesser (bej), recovery may be expected; it displays itself in a low fever accompanied with diarrhoss. The fever and dysentery of the Tarti keep the superstition alive. Both men and animals are supposed to be subject to this malignant influence; but a hardsome bachelor is considered the most likely victim. The souls of those who are thus affected remain for ever in the power of the enchantress, and when she dies she becomes a Bhukchm, a malignant demon, commanding a troop of the souls she has slain. Among the lower castes of Hindus, and especially the Kewats and Châis, whose traditional descent from the Kaivartas or Nishâdas stamps them as non-Aryan, are found individuals who possess the secret antidote to the fascination. At Pipra Ghât on the Rāpti, between Utraula and Tulasipur, there is an especially famous exoreiser, who has a large school of pupils."

Outh Gasetteer, III, 504.
Knowles, loc, cit., 212. It has been generally believed that the Thirus are proof against malaria: but the Bengal returns (Census Report, 173) shows that they are unusually short lived.
*Loc, cit., 214.

48. The only caste with whom the Tharus live on in intimate terms is that of the Banjaras. The honesty Social life. of the Thirus is proverbial. It is said that when a family flies into the hills they will always leave any arrears of rent that may be due tied up in a rag to the lintel of their descried house. It is said that husband and wife never quarrel. "This is not," says Mr. Knowles,2 "because the women are kept under; for they seem as free and independent in their movements as the men. A Thiru woman will look as straight at you when you speak of her as a European woman will, 'I noticed another good trait in the social character of these people. The parents seem as fond of the girls as of the boys, and make no degrading distinction as the natives of the plains do. The Tharu's word of endearment for his wife is jani. He calls his daughter a babu and his son a bhaiya-"My love," "my lord," "my brother."

Distribution of Tharus according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	STRICTS.			Number.	Dia	TMICT	THe .		Number.
Bareilly		,		8	Tarki .			1.	15,332
Pilibhit				46	Kheri .				1,975
Gorakhpur				3,072	Gonda				2,475
Basti .				208	Bahraich	×			2,311
Kumsun		٠		65		To	TAL		25,492

Oudh Gasetteer, III, 508.

² Loc. cit., 210.

Thathera 1—(Probably derived from Sanskrit tashta-kara, "one who polishes")—The caste of braziers and makers and sellers of brass and copper vessels. It is not easy to ascertain exactly the difference of function between the Kasera and Thathera. According to Mr. Nesfield: "The Kasera's speciality lies in mixing the softer metals (zinc, copper, and tin), and moulding the alloy into various shapes, such as cups, bowls, plates, etc. The Thathera's art consists in polishing and engraving the utensils which the Kasera supplies." In the Panjāb it would seem that the Kasera is the capitalist dealer, while the Thathera is the skilled artizan. But these functions seem to overlap, and in Mirzapur the term Thathera seems to be more generally applied to the craftsman who makes ernaments out of the alloy known as phil.

2. Curiously enough, there is, in Ondh, a widespread tradition that the Thatherns were lords of the land Tradition of origin. before the Rajput invasion. Mr. McMinn hazards the speculation that the Thatheras of Oudh legend were Bhars; others say that they were Tharus. But all this is mere speculation, and we really know nothing as to the people who are referred to. The tribe in Mirzapur say that they came from Bengal some three or four generations ago, and they name a place called Nasirganj in the Shahabad District as their head quarters. In Lucknow they say that they were originally Kehatriyas, and they have the stock story that, when Parasurama destroyed the Kahatriya race, one of their women, who was pregnant, was protected by a certain Kamandala Rishi, and that her offspring founded the caste of Thatheras. They add that their original home was a place called Ratanpur in the Dakkhin. In Benares, according to Mr. Sherring, they wear the Brahmanical thread and claim to hold a place intermediate between the Kahatriyas and Vaisyas. The caste is obviously purely occupational.

3. The internal organization of the caste is very complex. At the last Census no less than three hundred and fourteen sub-castes were recorded, but

Based on enquiries at Miraspor and notes by M. Chiloté Lal. Lucknew; Pandit Baldeo Praead, Deputy Collector, Campur.

[&]quot; Brief View, 29.

^{*} Johnstone, Monograph on Brass and Copper Wars, 17.
*Elliott, Chronicles of Unde, 25; Oudh Gaustier, 1, 22, 221, eq. 270, 275.
Hardet Seitlement Report, 75, 35, 100, 165, 227.

Hindu Tribes, I, 921.

it is at present impossible to say how many of these represent endogamous, and how many exogamous, groups. In Mirzapur there are two endogamous groups, Awadhiya or "those of Oudh," and Bhusantiya. In Lucknow the chief exogamous groups are Bhariya, Bangariya, Barwar, Daundiya Kheriya, who take their name from the famous Bais Rājput stronghold on the Ganges, Gurha, Barhariya, Tusaha, Gulraha, Dandiya, Jarseth, and Lodh.

- 4. The exogamous groups practise the usual rule which excludes the line of the paternal and maternal uncle and the paternal and maternal aunt for three or four generations, or until all knowledge of relationship is lost.
- 5. They marry in the orthodox way by the forms known as bydå or charsana and dola. Widow marriage and the levizate are allowed under the usual restrictions.
- 6. Some Thathems are Saivas; but most of them are Vaishnavas. In Mirzapur they worship Mahabir, Religiou. the Panchon Pir, and Devi in the form of Bhagawati, Mahabir is worshipped in the months of Sawan or Kuar and on the birth of a child with an offering of sweetmeats, fried gram (ghughurs), bread, and the erection of a fing (jhanda) in his honour. The Panchon Pir are worshipped at marriages and at the festivals of the Diwili and Khichari; at marriages with an offering of a head-dress (mant) and food, on the Diwali with parched grain (ldi, chura), and at the Khichari with khichari or rice boiled with pulse. They worship as a fetish the furnace (blatti) in which the metal they work up is melted. In Lucknow their anvil (niddi) and bammer represent a deity known as Kalawati Kanya or " the skilful maiden." Their domestic ceremonies are superintended by a low class of Brahmans, who, in Lucknow, are Tiwaris.
- 7. They drink spirits and eat goat's meat and mutton as well as Social customs and fish. They eat pakki cooked by Brahmans, Rajputs, and Halwais; but tacket only if cooked by one of their own caste. Banyas and all lower castes eat pakki cooked by them; but kacket cooked by them is caten only by Nais and other castes of similar social standing.

Distribution of the Thatheras according to the Census of 1891.

	Dage	BICTS.	ď			Hindus.	Musal- mas.	Total.
Dehra Důn .						9		9
Saharaapur			4			71	17	88
Muzaffarnaga			19.			91	253	343
Moerat .						37		37
Bulandshahr						10		10
Aligneh .				,	+	139	16-	120
Mathura .					0	347		347
Agra						133		133
Farrukbābād			50	n tra	10	304		204
Mainpori .		1	Df.	10,1	444	81	799	81
Etāwah .	4	20.	110	LQ0	13/	94		94
Etah	ik	10		14		39	200	39
Bareilly .				46	6	32	/ m	32
Bijner .				1	ь,	148	216	364
Budaun .				4	4	- 31		31
Moradahad .						80		60
Shāhjahānpu						356	994.1	356
Pilibbit .						29		29
Cawnpur .						247		247
Fatehpur .						492		492
Banda .						250		259
Hamirpur .					-	86		86
Allahábád .						1,398	101	1,398
Jhansi .						546		546
Jalaun .						87		87
Lalitpur .						137	200	187

Distribution of the Thatheras according to the Census of 1891 -concluded.

		Diar	MICTO.				Hindus.	Musal- mans,	TOTAL
Bennzea							470		470
Mirsapur							143		148
Jaunpur	+				4		207		907
Ghāziper							808		800
Ballia							414	104	414
Gorakhpur	i						1,631		1,631
Basti .							1,605		1.605
Ammgarh							1,826		1,826
Tarki					20		12	97	49
Lucknow				30	10	14	702		702
Unko .					ngH	153	1,333	A 100	1,233
Råå Bareli		- 10	6				129		120
Sitapar		- 1	10		1		347	V	347
Hardof						2	55		55
Kheri .					7		777		777
Falzabåd							354	346.	354
Gonda					4		2,136		2,126
Bahrálch							533		533
SeltAnpur		+				-	513		513
Partabgarh						-	490		430
Barahanki				•			547		547
				To	TAL		20,823	522	21,345

Thavai—(Sanskrit *thapati, "a master-builder").—The caste of masons and bricklayers. At the last Census they appear to have been included under Rhj (q. v.). They are the Thavi of the Panjah, who is a mason and bricklayer in the hills, and claims to have been originally a Bråhman, who was degraded because he took to working in stone. The easte is purely occupational and contains both Hindus and Muhammadans; the latter say that their first asted or teacher was Båba Ibrahim, or father Abraham. The Hindu branch say the same of Viswakarma, the architect of the gods. The Muhammadan branch worship their tools at the Id festival, and offer sweetment to them. The Hindu Thavais, when they commence work in the morning, say Viswakarma ki jay ko, "Glory to Viswakarma."

Tiyar, Tiar. - A Dravidian boating and fishing tribe in the Eastern Districts, sometimes classed as a sub-tribe of the Mallah. The word is possibly derived from Sanskrit Moura, "a hunter or fisherman," According to Mr. Risley's account 1 their customs on the whole correspond with those of the allied fishing and boating tribes. They are apparently the same as the so-called Techurs of Oudh, who furnish one of the stock instances of communistic marriage. They are said to "live almost indiscriminately in large communities, and even when two people are regarded as married the tie is but nominal." Though there may be considerable laxity of sexual intercourse among a people, the males of whom are compelled by their profession to leave the women for considerable intervals, the statement is perhaps exaggerated. The Tiyars also furnish one of the best modern cases of human sacrifice. The account given by Mr. Goad," after describing how the bodies of two murdered men were found in 1865 in a hut in the Benares district, goes on to say :-"Two of the Tiyar caste had been down to Bengal in charge of some boats; when they returned they brought a lotter addressed to the Tiyar caste calling on them to become vegetarians (blagat); they were not to kill fish, nor eat them any more. This letter appears to have been circulated among the Tiyar caste in the Benares, Azamgarh, and Ghazipur districts, and which resulted in the above assemblage, on which occasion they acted a regular play by five men representing five deities,-Ram, Mahabar, Mahadeo Senior (sic.), Zetbut (sic.), and Mahideo Junior (sic.) - that is to say, the three defendants-Beni, Pirthi Pål, and Bassi represented the deities

¹ Tribes and Castes, sug., II, 323.

⁹ Lubbook, Origin of Oivilization 89, quoting Watson and Kays, The People of India, II, plate 85.

² Quoted by Dr. Chevers, Medical Jurisprudence, 406, 294., from Lemin's Police Guide, 205.

Râm, Mahâbîr, and Mahâdeo Junior, and the deceased Shiubharat and Râm Sewak, Mahâdeo Senior and Zetbut; and by the order of Râm, Mahâdeo Junior, and Mahâbîr slew Zetbut and Mahâdeo Senior, Râm having promised to bring them to life again. This appears to be a most curious case, as nothing of the kind has been heard of before. The actors in this affair are a low caste, and next to savages, so that it is difficult to get a proper meaning to the catastrophe."

2. The same is the name of a clau of Rajputs in Sultanpur, Mr. Millet¹ describes them as nearly an extinct race, who are said to have been at one time lords of Pargana Sultanpur. "They succeeded the Bhadaiyans, the conquerors of the Bhars and were in turn overcome by the Bachgotis, whose star is at present in the ascendant. The order of succession is chronicled in the following doggerel lines:-

Bhar már Bhadaiyán : Bhadaiyán már Tiyar : Tiyar már Bachgoti.

The Tiyars gave their name to one of the old sub-divisions of the pargana, Tappa Tiyar, and this, perhaps, rather than the entire pargana, was the extent of their dominions. At present they have nothing more than a right of occupancy in a few acres in their own Tappa. Regarding the Tiyars very little is known. Mr. Carnegy ² considers them to belong to the Solar race; they themselves say that they are descended from immigrants from Baiswara, who received a grant of the Bhadaiyans territory from the Raja of Benares. Mr. Millet suggests a connection between their name and the Tarai or Tirabhukti (Tirhût).

Tomar (Sanskrit towara, "a club") Tunwar.—A famous sept of Räjputs. Though a sub-division of the Yadubansi they are usually reckoned as one of the thirty-six royal races. They furnished India with the dynasty of Vikramaditya. Delhi was rebuilt by Anangpâl Tomar in A.D. 731—736 and became his capital and that of several of his successors; but, according to General Cunningbam, there is reason to believe that subsequently the Tomar capital was removed to Kanauj, where it remained for several generations prior to the invasion of Mahmûd of Ghazni. Shortly after that the small town of Bâri, north of Lucknow, became the Sullingur Settlement Report, 134, sq.

³ Notes, 27.

Archaelogical Reports, I, 141, sqq. : 283.

eapital till about 1050 A.D., when the Tomars returned to Delhi before the growing power of the Råthaurs; and then Anangpål, the Second, rebuilt the city and erected the Lålkot There is an inscription of his on the iron pillar, dated 1052 A.D., and just a century after Anangpål III was defeated by Visala Deva, Chauhān, in 1151-52 A.D. The history of the dynasty has been worked out with great detail by General Cunningham.

- 2. The Tomar dynasty of Gwâlior was founded by Bîr Sinh Deva, who was probably a member of the Delhi family, and, according to the annalists, declared his independence in the time of Alâ-ud-dîn Khilji; but there is a difficulty about the dates, and General Cunningham, believes that the rise of the Tomars must have taken place during the few troubled years that immediately preceded the invasion of Timûr. His successor, Dungar Sinh, who came to the throne in 1424, raised the kingdom to great prosperity and began the great rock sculptures. Their power reached its zenith in the reign of Mân Sinh, who succeeded in 1486 A.D., and the kingdom was finally destroyed by Ibrahim Lodi in 1519 A.D., who captured the capital.
- 3. In these Provinces the present status of the clan does not correspond with the splendour of its traditions. The Janghāra of Budāun claim to be of this stock; but their genealogical lists do not substantiate their assertion. They fix their immigration in the time of Shahāb-ud-dîn (1202—1206 A.D.). In Morādābād² they fix their settlement at Sambbal at 700 A.D., where it is said to have lasted till 1150 A.D., the time of the rise of the Chauhāns. The Bareilly clan claim to have entered the district under their leader Hansrāj, and expelled the Guâlas in 1388, and the Ahīrs and Bhīle between 1405 and 1570 A.D.¹ The Batola of Garhwâl claim to be another branch of the same stock.¹ In the Eastern Districts they are not considered to be of high rank, a fact which Dr. Buchanan¹ explains in his quaint way by alleging that the last princes of the race were "ahominable heretics."
- In Sitapur they marry girls of the Gaur, Ahban, Báchhal, or Janwâr septs.

^{1 164}d, 11, 381, 19.

² Settlement Report, 3.

¹ Settlement Report, 224.

⁴ Atkinson, Himaldyan Gazettser, III, 276.

^{*} Rastern India, II, 463.

	d	Dinta	1078.				Hindus.	Mulam- madans.	TOTAL.
Saharanpur							1,005	16	1,021
Muzaffarus	pir						907	1,362	1,669
Mearut							mel	444	391
Bulandahah						Į,	483	8,344	3,826
Aligarh							1,486		1,436
Mathura				. 2			1,042	38	1,080
Agra							5,521	87	5,558
Fairnkhâb!	d			,			789		789
Mainpuri							2,976	2	2,978
Rthwah				r. Oak	3.1	U.	2,128	15	2,143
Etah			100	-11	200	13	2,285	57	2,322
Bareilly			ĸ.				20		20
Bijner		0			1		67	207	269
Buddun		-31				5.	2,957	70	9,057
Morddahad				V	0	1	1,901	107	1,308
Shābjahān	ur						989		989
Pillblit							280	2	282
Campur							958		958
Fatshpur							911		911
Banda				,			584	23	607
Hamirpor							76	-	76
Allabábád							268	190	988
Jhansi			4	•		-	270		270
Jálaan							4		4
Lalitpur							184		184
Benares							157		157
Ghazipur							2	5	7

Distribution of the Towar Rajputs according to the Census of 1891-coneid.

	Dist	RIOTS.				Hladus.	Maham- madans.	TOTAL.
Ballis						389		389
Gorakhpur						86	135	321
Basti			,				408	408
Azamgarh						1	171	172
Tarti						158		158
Lucknow						105	8	108
Unão .						115	27	143
Raé Bareli				7		177		177
Stapur			+			1,882	1	1,883
Hardui		4	Del.	190	W)	1,927		1,227
Kheri		170	.3	Bell	119	1,164	. 0	1,173
Faizābād .	- 4	1				151		151
Babraich	- 1		-	4	-	29	344	29
SultAspur		4		.2	5.	12		12
Part&bgarh					-	61	m	61
Bûrabanki			•			09		- 69
			To	TAL	,	32,915	6,039	38,054

Turk (Sanskrit turnshku), a term properly applied to the Mongolian Turkomâns of Turkistân. Sir H. Yule 1 shows that the distinction which we now make between Turk and Turkomân was popular as early as the twelfth century. On the Biloch frontier the word Turk is equivalent to Mughal, and it is often used by Hindus for any official of foreign birth. In the Panjâb even Hindu clerks of the Kâyasth caste are sometimes called by this name. The Dravidian tribes very often call any Muhammadan a Turk.

In these Provinces there is a large cultivating caste in the Tarāi known as Turk, and in Azamgarh the term is applied to a Marco Polo, I, 14.

section of the Koeris. Those in the north of Rohilkhand are described as a more manly people than the Naumuslim and appear to have come into the district at an early period with some of the Sayyid colonies,1

8. From a report received from the Râmpur State it appears that the Turks claim to be originally emigrants from Turkistân, whence they came in the train of the army of Shahâb-ud-din Ghori. They deny that they have ever admitted converts from Hinduism; but they are more Hindu in their customs than other Muhammadans. They marry early, earlier than even the many Hindu castes, and for the ceremonial shaving of their children prefer the month of Baisâkh. They care little about the seclusion of their women. They are endogamous, and if a Turk marries a woman of another Muhammadan tribe he is put out of caste. The women wear a peculiar dress, the scarl and drawers, which are generally of coarse cloth, being dyed blue and lined with red. The drawers are very loose above the knee and tight over the ankle. They have sections whose names are derived from local appellation and do not influence marriage. Their profession is agriculture.

Distribution of the Turks according to the Consus of 1891.

Districts.				Number.	TRIC'S	re.	Number.
Allahábád				7	Tardi .				4,953
Gorakhpur				7	Lucknow				9
Garhwall				18	Rampur				34,008
						To	ZAL		29,002

¹ Mortifibild Settlement Report, 22; Asumgarh Settlement Report, 34.

U

Udasi (Sanskrit udas, " to sit separate or apart from"). - An order of Hindu asceties who are said to have been founded by Sri Chand, the son of Nanak.1 "The Udasis were distasteful to the third Guru, Amer Das, who excommunicated the order; but it appears to have been revived by Baba Gurditta, the son of the sixth Gurditta proclaimed his mission in the follow-Gurn, Har Govind. ing manner: There was on a hill near Rawalpindi a Muhammadan fagir called Budhan Shah, to whom Baba Nanak had entrusted some milk to be kept till his successor should come to claim it. This fagir, seeing Gurditta approach, requested him to appear in the form of Båba Nånak, and Gurditta having acquissced, carned the title of Baba and a claim to considerable sanctity. He lived mainly at Kirtarpur, but he died at Kiratpur, where there is a handsome shrine in his honour, built on an eminence commanding a fine view. At Kiratpur there is also a shrine known as Mauji Sahib, where Baba Gurditta is said to have discharged an arrow, which fell in the plain below at a place called Patalpuri, long used as a burning ground for the Sodhis. Gurditte is said also to have been known merely as Babaji.

- 2. "The Uddsis are divided into four orders (called Dhuân, 'smoke,' from the fires round which they sit), named after four noted Uddsis, viz., Phûl Sâhib, whose shrines are at Bahâdurpur and Chini Ghâti in the Hoshyârpur district; Bâba Hasana, whose shrine is at Charankaul, near Anandpur; Almast Sâhib, who is represented at Jagannâth and Naini Tâl; and Govind Sâhib, who is represented at Shikârpur in Sindh and at the Sangalwâla Gurudwâra in Amritsar. There are also sections called Bhagat Bhagwân and Sangat Sâhib, but it does not appear clearly whether these are separate sections or subordinate to, or identical with, some of the above. The Bhagat Bhagwâns are said to have a Gurudwâra at Patna. They are the followers of one Bhagat Gir of that city, who was converted by Dharm Chand, the grandson of Nânak.
- "The Sangat Sabibiya will not eat with others. They were founded by Bhai Bhalu, who, according to one version of the story, was a Jat merchant of the Malwa country; and, according to another, a carpenter of Amritsar. He was, while yet in darkness, a follower of Sultân, but was persuaded by Guru Govind Sinh to throw over the form of worship and adopt the name of Sangat Sâhib. Another legend ascribes the origin of the Sangat Sâhibiya to Bhâi Pheru. It is said that a large number of Jâts, carpenters, and Lohârs belong to this section. They have a Gurudwâra in the Lahors district, and the Brahmbhût Akhâra at Amritsur. Each sub-division of the Udâsis has a complete organization for collecting and spending money, and is presided over by a principal Mahant, called Sri Mahant, with subordinate Mahants under him.

UDASI. 418

- 4. "The Udasis are recruited from all eastes and will eat food from any Hindu. They are almost always celibates and are sometimes, though not usually, congregated in monasteries. They are generally found wandering to and fro from their secred places, such as Amritsar, Dera Nâcak, Kirtârpur, and the like. They are said to be numerous in Mâlwa and in Benares. In the Panjâb returns they appear strongly in Jalandhar, Bohtak, and Pirozpur. It is a mistake to say that they are not generally recognised as Sikhs; they pay special reverence to the Adi-granth, but also respect the Granth of Govind Sinh and attend the same shrines as the Sikhs generally. Their service consists of a ringing of bells and blare of instruments and waving of lights before the Adi-granth and the picture of Baba Nanak. They are, however, by no means uniform in their customs. Some wear long hair, some wear matted locks, and others out their hair. Some wear caste marks (tilak); others do not. Some burn the dead in the ordinary Hiudu way ; some, after burning, erect monuments (samdah); others apparently bury the dead. They are for the most part ascetics, but some are said to be engaged in ordinary secular pursuits. The ordinary dress of the ascetics is of a red colour, but a large section of them go entirely naked, except for the waist-cloth, and rub ashes over their bodies. These, like the naked sections of other orders, are known as Nange; they pay special reverence to the ashes with which they smear their bodies and which are said to protect them equally from either extreme of temperature. Their most binding cath is on a ball of ashes.
- 5. "In Ludhiâna the Udâsis are mostly Jâts by origin, the disciple and successor (chela) being usually chosen from this tribe and are found to be in possession of the Dharmeâlas in Hindu villages, where they distribute food to such as come for it and read the Granth, both of Baba Nanak and of Guru Govind Sinh, though they do not attach much importance to the latter. The head of the college is called Mahant and the disciples chelas. They live in Sikh as well as in Hindu villages, and it is probably on this account that they do not quite neglect Guru Govind Sinh. They rarely marry; and if they do so, generally lose all influence, for the dharmsala becomes a private residence closed to strangers. But in some few families it has always been the custom to marry, the endowments being large enough to support the family and maintain the institution; but the eldest son does not in this case succeed as a matter of course. A chela is chosen by the Mahant or by the family. If a Mahant whose predecessors have not married, should do so, he would lose all his weight with the people."

419 UDÁSI.

6. In these Provinces perhaps the most important Guradwara of the Udasis is that at Dehra, which was built in 1669 A.D.1 The Mahant is the richest man in the Dun. His election from among the disciples (chels) of the last deceased Mahant was formerly guided by the Sikh chiefs of the Panjab, a fee (aasardna) of five hundred rupees being presented by the British Government at the installation with the complimentary gift in return of a pair of shawls. The distinctive head-dress of the seet worn by the high priest and his disciples is a cap of red cloth, shaped like a sugar loaf, worked over with coloured thread and adorned with a black silk fringe round the rim. Some of the more ignorant Udasis have a legend in defiance of all chronology, that Gorakhnath was the first disciple of the order, and was converted by Nanak. Once, they say, there was a contest between Nanak and Gorakhnath which of them was the greater. To try his power Nanak assumed the form of a fish, and Gorakhuâth failed to catch him. But when Gorakhuâth took the shape of a mosquito, Nanak seized him. Then Gorakhnath admitted his inferiority and became the disciple of Nanak. The form of initiation is that the Guru bathes the disciple and smears his body with ashes, and with the same substance makes a long and slightly curved mark on his forehead. Then the initiate washes the feet of the Guru and four of his senior disciples with water which he drinks. If he can afford it be then feasts the brethren. will eat and drink from the hands of all but the lower class of Hindus. They always repeat an invocation to the Creator in the words Satya Sri Kartár; and they salute the brethren in the words Gor lagdia bán—"I salute your feet." The use of intoxicants is strictly forbidden by the rules of order, but many use gánja and opium. Here they appear always to cremate their dead. Some of the ashes are occasionally kept, and a monument, which they call jantri, is crected over them.

Distribution of the Uddain according to the Census of 1891.

Distric	TW.		Number.	Dist	BICT	ги.		Number.
Dehra Dün .			652	Hamirpur		,		1
Saharlapur .			357	Allahābād			,	70
Muzaffarnagar		14	86	Jhansi .				6
Meerut .			158	Benares				9
Bulandshahr		4	8	Micespur				23
Alignrh .	16		3	Janupur	-	۸.		33
Agra		14	10	Gbåzipur				66
Parculchábád	- 1		39	Ballia .		/.		227
Mainpuri .			11	Azamgarh	~			13
Btawah .			5	Garhwall			9	14
Etah	9		29	Tarki .				17
Bareilly .		4	64	Lueknow				35
Bijnor .			105	Bas Bareli				. 3
Budauu .			9	Stapur				204
Morådåbåd .			270	Kheri .				46
Shahjahanpur			3	Falzābād				58
Pilibhit .	à.		64	Genda .		•	+	17
Cagnpur .			7	Bahrdich	è		á	73
Patehpur .			18	Sultanpur	4			42
Bånda	٠		5		To	PAL		3,791
				Females				770

Ujjaini.—A sept of Rājputs who take their name from the city of Ujjain, the Ozene of the Greeks. In Azamgarh 1 they can tell no more of their history than that they emigrated sixteen generations ago; they once held the greater part of pargana Gopālpur, but were obliged to give way to the Kausiks. In Cawapur 2 they carry back their first settlement to the arrival from Ujjain of Sûr Sâh, a Panwâr Rājput, by invitation of his connection Jay Chand, of Kanauj, who invested him with the title of Rāja of the Ujjainis. They are thus really of Panwâr origin. In Sultânpur 3 they are said to have succeeded the Bhars. It may be noted that some of the Bais and other Rājput septs in Oudh also claim their origin from Ujjain.

2. In Farrukhābād they claim to belong to the Garga gotra; give girls to the Chandel, Bhadsuriya, Kachhwāba, Chanhān, and Pramār; and marry their sons to the Chamar Gaur, Rāthaur, Gaharwār, and Sombansi. In Ballia their gotra is Saunak. They take wives from the Haihobansi, Barwār, Nikumbh, Kinwār, Raghubansi, Sengar, Sakarwār, Chandel, Maharwār, and Pachhtoriya. They give brides to the Bisen, Sirnet, Rājkumār, Baghel, Bais, Kausik, Nāgbansi, Raghubansi, Chanhān, and Haihobansi.

Distribution of Ujjaini Rajunts according to the Canana of 1891.

Dr	VERIC	TH.	Number.	Di	erni	CTS.	- 1	Number.
Farrukhābā	4		740	Basti	ē.			211
Mainpuri			40	Azaugarh				551
EtAwah			121	Lucknow		6		38
Shahjahanp	uir		40	Unão				482
Cawnpur			5	Sitapur	4	*		105
Hamfrpur			3	Hardoi		*		260
Allababad			5	Faizābād				77
Benares			157	Gonda				15
Miczspur		+	4	Bahraleh				19
Janapar			19	Sultaupur				207
Ghazipur			242	Partabgarh				4
Ballia .		4	775				- 1
Gorakhpur			457		To	TAL		4,596

³ Sattlament Report, 80.

^{*} Ibid, 22, 25.

³ Oudh Gasatleer, I, 25.

Ummar .- A sub-caste of Banyas found in considerable numbers, except in the Meerut, Agra, and Kumaun divisions. An attempt has been made to connect their name with that of the Umras, who are described by Colonel Tod as a branch of the Sodbas, and who gave their name to Umarkot. Those to the east say that they emigrated from the neighbourhood of Ajudhya about three generations ago. To the east they are divided into three endogamous groups-Til Ummar, Derh Ummar, and Düsra, of which the last holds an inferior position. Widow marriage is not allowed. They agree in their customs with the Kasaundhan (q. v.). Their clan deities to the east of the Province are Mahabir, Mabadeva, and Devi. To Mahadeva and Mahabir they offer sweets, Brahmanical cords, gram, and flowers on the twenty-eighth day of Sawan. They worship Devi at the Nauratri with offerings of cakes (sohāri), sweetmeats (halve), and a burnt-offering of camphor. Their priests are Sarwariya Brahmans.

2. The Ummar are shopkeepers and usually sell provisions and tobacco. The use of meat and spirits is prohibited. Their priests, but not other Brahmans, cut pakki prepared by them. Banyas eat pakki but not kack-chi cooked by them. They will cut pakti cooked by Brahmans and by other Banyas, but kachchi only if cooked by one of their own sub-caste.

Distribution of Ummar Banyas according to the Census of 1891.

Dist	nier	DE.		Number.	Number. Disenters.				Number.
Bolandahahr		i	,	1	Pilibhit				689
Mathura				17	Cawnpur				7,548
Agra				35	Fatebpur				2,972
Farrukb&bAd				983	Banda				622
Malopuri				1	Hamirpur				4,373
Rthwah		+		168	Allahábád				645
Bareilly		+		61	Jhausi	٠		4	1,178
Moradabad	÷	4		1	Jalaun				302
Shabjahanp	ır	à.		1,752	Lalitpur				1

Distribution of Ummar Bangus according to the Census of 1891-concld.

Dist	nict	14.		Number.	Disvi	sict	S.		Number.
Bentires				424	Hardoi	·			2,744
Mirsapur				3,893	Khori		,		1,114
Jaunpur				3,731	Paizābād			-	14
Gorakhpur			4	611	Gooda		8		969
Bastl			-	537	Bahrtich				1,447
Azamgarh	÷			270	Sultanpur	٠			216
Lasknow				3,122	Partabgarb				2,934
UnAo	,			819	Bhrabanki				1,655
Sitapur				823		To	TAL		46,513

Unai, Unaya.—A sub-easte of Banyas chiefly found to the east of the Province. They take their name from their did or place of origin, Unao. To the east they have formed two endogamous groups: the Unai and Unawa Unai, the latter of whom are held in higher estimation because they prohibit widow marriage. They are practically all Hindus, the Jainas being very few among them.

Distribution of Undi Banyas according to the Consus of 1891.

Dist	RIC	8.	Number.	Diez	BICT	76 -		Number.
Farrakhābā:	1		3	Båê Bareli	ì			1
Shabjabanpu	ır		27	Stiaper				2,268
Pilibhit			284	Hardei		4		10
Cawapar		. '	4	Khari		3		1,073
Beuarea			38	FaizAb4d				- 31
Jauspur			1,501	Gonda				661
Gomkhpur			4,857	Bahraich				2,966
Basti .			241	Parthbgarh				8
Azamgurh	•		2	Barabanki			-	2,354
Lucknow			1,768		To	TIL		17,895

Utkala .- A tribe of Brahmans who take their name from Odra or Orisea, of whom a few are found in these Provinces. According to Mr. Beames 1: "Tradition relates that all the original Brahmans of Orissa were extinct at the time of the rise of the Gangavansa race of kings, but that ten thousand Brahmans were induced to come from Kanauj and settled in Jaypur, the sacred city, on the Baitarani river. The date of this immigration is not stated, but the fact is probably historical, and may have been synchronous with the well-known introduction of Kanaujiya Brahmans into the neighbouring province of Bengal by King Adisura in the tenth century. When the worship of the idol Jagannath hegan to be revived at Puri, the Kings of Orissa induced many of the Jaypur Brahmans to settle round the new temple and conduct the ceremonies. there sprang up a division among the Brahmans, those who settled in Puri being called the Dakkhinatiya Sreni, or Southern Class, and those who remained at Jaypur the Uttara Sreni, or Northern Class. The latter spread all over Northern Orises. Many of the Southern Brihmans are also found in Balasore, and the divisions of two classes are fairly represented in most parts of the district, though the Southern Class is less numerous than the Northern. The former are held in greater esteem for learning and purity of race than the latter."

2. The divisions of the Utkala Brâhmans are most extensive and intricate. As they are scantily represented in these Provinces, it will be sufficient to refer the reader to the lists given by Mesars, Sherring, Risley, and Dr. Wilson.⁹

Distribution of the Uthal Brahmans according to the Census of 1891.

Dis	PERIC	78-	Number.	Dian	MICT	76	Number.
Sabhranpus			4	Fatchpur			3
Mazaffarna	gar		1	Jálaun			2
Mathura			26	Gorakhpur			6
Mainpuri			185	Lucknow			1
Bareilly			8	Sitapur			1
Shahjahanp	NIN		11
Campur			2		To	TAL	250

Rialey, Tribes and Castes, I, 160.

[&]quot;Hindu Tribes, I, 78, sq., Indian Caste, II, 223, eq.

V

Vallabhacharya, Gokulastha Gusain, - A sect who take their name from the great heresiarch Vallabhacharya, who was born in 1479 A.D., being the second son of Lakshman Bhat, a Talanga Brâhman of the Vishnu Swami Sampradaya. "By the accident of birth, though not by descent, he can by claimed as a native of Upper India, having been born at Champaranya, a wild solitude in the neighbourhood of Benares, whither his parents had travelled up from the South on a pilgrimage. Their stay in the holy city was cut short by a popular emente, the result of religious intolerance; and the mother, who was little in a condition to encounter the distress and fatigue of so hasty a flight, prematurely gave birth on the way to an eight-months' child. Either from an exaggerated alarm as to their own peril, or as was afterwards said, from a sublime confidence in the promised protection of Heaven, they laid the babe under a tree and abandoned it. When some days had clapsed and their fears had subsided, they cautiously retraced their steps, and finding the child still alive and uninjured on the very spot where he had been left, they took him with them to Benares." By another form of the legend the scene of Vallabhacharya's miraculous deliverance is fixed at Chungr, and the parents are said to have thrown the child into a well which is known as the Achâraj kûp, or "wonderful well." Hence the place is visited by large numbers of Vallabhacharya pilgrims, who have erected a temple there dedicated to Maha Prabhu. The slaughter of fish and other animals is specially prohibited within the sacred precincts and bathing in the sacred well is supposed to be a remedy for leprosy and barrenness in women.

2. The sect has acquired rather disgraceful notoricty in connection with the famous Maharaja libel case which was tried in Bombay in 1862. The proceedings of this remarkable trial have been reprinted in a book entitled "The History of the sect of the Maharajas of Vallabhacharyas in Western India," which gives a full account of their history, tenets, and religious practices. From this authority we learn that a "Vallabhacharyan temple consists of three separate compartments. The central one is larger and more open than the other two, being intended for the accommodation of the numerous worshippers who daily throng there. Of the remaining two, one is the residence of the Maharaja, and the other is dedicated to the worship of the image of Krishna. The temples are numerous all over India, especially at Mathura and Brindaban. In Benares there are two very celebrated and wealthy temples, one of which is dedicated to Krishna under the name of Lalji, and the other to the same god under the name of Purushottamji, Those of Jagannath and Dwarika are also particularly venerated, but the most celebrated of all these establishments is that at Sri Nåthadwara in Mewar, The image is said to have transported itself thither from Mathura, when Aurangseb ordered the temple it stood in to be destroyed. The present shrine is modern, but very richly endowed, and the high priest, a descendant of Gokulnáthji, is a man of great wealth and importance.

3. The image Thakurji, or the idol, in the different temples is either of stone or brass, and represents Krishna in various attitudes, corresponding to those which he is alleged to have assumed in the several periods of his earthly existence, either when performing uncommon feats and miracles, or living at particular places, or engaged in particularly interesting scenes. Each of these is worshipped under a different name ; that of Sri Nathji, being the most important and most honoured, is at Nathadwara. Krishna is here represented as a little boy in the act of supporting the mountain Govardhan on his little finger, to shelter his playmates from a heavy shower of rain which had overtaken them when at play. This image is always splendidly dressed, and richly decorated with ornaments, which are often of the value of several thousand pounds." For further particulars of the sect generally full information may be obtained in the authority from which this quotation has been made.

4. Of the sect at Mathura Mr. Growse 1 writes :- "Unlike other Hindu sects, in which the religious The Mathura Vallabhacharya. teachers are usually unmarried, all the Gusains among the Vallabhacharyas are invariably family men and engage freely in secular pursuits. They are the Epicureans of the East, and are not ashamed to avow their belief that the ideal life consists rather in social enjoyment than in solitude and mortification. Such a creed is naturally destructive of all self-restraint, even in matters where indulgence is by common consent held criminal; and the profligacy to which it has given rise is so notorious that the Maharaja of Jaypur was moved to expel from his capital the ancient image of Gokul Chandrama, for which the sect entertained special veneration, and has further conceived such a prejudice against Vaishnavas in general, that all his subjects are compelled, before they appear in his presence, to mark their foreheads with the three horizontal lines that indicate a votary of Siva. However, as in many other forms of religion, and happily so in this case, practice is not always in accordance with doctrine. Though there may be much that is reprehensible in the inner life of the Gusaîns, it is not at Gokul obtruded on the public, and has never occasioned any open scandal, while the present head of the community, Gusain Parushottam Lål, a descendant of Bitthalnäth's sixth son Jadunath, deserves honourable mention for his exceptional liberality and enlightenment."

5. At all Vallabhachārya temples, the daily services are eight in number, vis., 1st, Mangala, the morning levée, a little after sumise when the god is taken from his couch and bathed; 2nd, Sringāra, an hour and a half later, when the god is attired in all his jewels and seated on his throne; 3rd, Gwâla, after an interval of about three-quarters of an hour, when the god is supposed to be starting to graze his cattle in the woods of Braj; 4th, Rāj Bhog, the midday meal, which, after presentation is consumed by the priests and distributed among the votaries who have assisted at the ceremonies; 5th, Uttāpan, about 3 p.u., when the god awakes from his siesta; 6th, Bhog, the evening collation; 7th, Sandhya, the disrobing at sunset; and 8th, Sayan, the retiring to rest. Upon all these occasions the ritual concerns only the priests, and the lay worshipper is only a spectator, who evinces his reverence by any of the ordinary forms with which he would approach a human superior.

6. On the full moon of Asârh there is a curious annual ceremony for the purpose of ascertaining the agricultural prospects of the year. The priests place little packets of the ashes of different staples, after weighing them, in the sanctuary. The temple is then closed, but the night is spent in worship. In the morning the packets are examined. Should any of the packets have increased in weight, that particular article of produce will yield a good harvest; and should they decrease, the harvest will be scanty in proportion to the decrease.

VALLABHACHÂBYA.

428

Distribution of the Gokulastha Guidins according to the Census of 1891.

Districts.				Number.	Districts.			Number.
Patehpur				1	Faira Md			26
Gorakhpur				3		TOPAL		30

CASTE INDEX.

[The references are to paragraphs. The castes to which exterisks are attached are the subject of special articles.]

Abâdpura—Balihar I. Abakahon—Banarwar. Abar-Ahir 3. 'Abbâsî-Bihishti 1: Habashi: Sayyid 2: Shaikh 2. Abhira-Ahir 1: *Abhyagat. 'Abidi-Sayyid 2. Abkår-Kalwir 1. Ablapuriya—Halwai 2. Ahri-Gandhila 2. Achârwâla—Halwâi 6. Achârya-Bhát 2: Brâhman 9 : Dasuâmi. Adhana-Gâjar 6. Adhaniya-Madári 1. Adhela-Kanjar 8. Adhoi-Bhoksa 4. Adhrij-Arakh 8. Adl Gaur-Gaur: Joshi 7. Afridi-Pathan 6. Agari, Agariya-Dom 42. *Agariya-Darzi 2 : Sunir 7. *Agarwal Beldår 2: *Agarwâla J Bhatiya 6: Chhipi 3 : Darzi 2 : Kanjar 5 : Kewat 2 : Kumhar 2: Mallah 3: Mochi 3: Patwa 3. *Agastwâr. *Aghori. "Aghorpanthi Aghwan-Banjara 12.

*Agnihotri. Agrabansi-Beldår 2. *Agrahari } Chhipi 2. Agrehri Agwariya - Barhai 2. Ahalpuriya-Halwhi 2. *Ahar-Ahîr 10. Ahāriya-Gahlot 1. Aharwar-Barai 3 : Chamar 4: Gaddi 2: Joshi 4: Kewat 2: Kori 2: Tamboli 2. *Ahban. *Aheriya - Pasi 8: Tamboli 2. *Ahir-Gadariya 2 : Gaddi 2 : Musahar 11. Ahîrbansi-Kasera 2. *Ahiwâsi. 'Ahl-i-Quraish-Banjara 12. Airan-Agarwala I. Ajmar-Chamar 3. Ajmeri-Khāgi : Mahesri 2. *Ajudhyabâsi) Agrabari 2 : Ajudhya Barni Beldår 2 : Boriya : Chhîpi 2: Dhobi 2: Dhuniya 4: Halwali 2: Håbûra 3: Kanjar 5 : Kasers 2 : Kathak 3: Kewat 2: Khatik 1 : Koiri 2 : Kumhar 2 : Kurmi 5 : Lohar 4 : Luniya 3: Manihar 2: Sunar 6: Tamboli 2.

"Akâli - Nânakpanthi 4. Akâsh Bhânwari - Banarwar.

Akâsh Kâmini-Tawâif 6.

"Akâshmukhi.

Akhpuriya-Halwai 2.

Akrethlya-Kurmi 6.

*Alakhgir.

Alakhiya.

Alakhnâmi,

Alandiya-Ahar 2.

Alapuriya-Manihar 2.

Alâgeband-Patwa 1.

'Alawiya-Sayyid 2; Shaikh 2.

'Alipuriya-Halwai 2.

Aliya-Banjara 12.

Alamnagari—Halwii 2,

Alampuriya-Manihar 2.

Allahâbâdi-Kanjar 1 : Mochi 3 : Also see Illahâbâdi.

Alona-Sunfir 7.

Alwi-Banjara 12.

Amalpuriya—Halwai 2.

Amara-Tharu 12.

Amargarh - Jadon 2.

Amariya-Kachhi 2.

Amawatiya-Sunar 7.

Ambashtha—Kâyasth 10.

*Amethiya—Dhobi 2 : Raståogi : Suntr 9.

Amisht-Kayasth 10.

Amlakhiya - Bhat 3.

Amlohiya-Sunar 7.

Amrapuriya—Beriya 3.

Amritpuriya—Halwâi 2: Khagi 2.

Amrutiya-Chamâr 3.

Anad-Khatri 15.

*Anant panthi.

Andhārī ka khatanga—Sunar 7.

Anfi-Iraqi 2,

Angarkha-Manihar 2.

Angi - Iraqi S.

Angiras-Bhuinhar 11: Joshi 8.

Anguriya-Sunar 7.

Anrukh-Gandbarb 2.

'Ansari-Dafali 2: Dhaniya

4 : Gâra : Shaikh 2.

Antarbedi) Bhangi 20:

Antarvedi Boriya : Chamar

3 : Lodha 2.

Antavâsin Bhangi 2. Antêvâsin

"Apapanthi.

Aphariya ? Aphiriya } Ahîr 5.

Aradhya-Jangam 2.

Arakh - Boriya : Gandharb

2 : Pasi S.

Aranya-Dasaâmi,

Aril-Dharkûr 1.

Arjariya kot-Jhijhotiya 2.

Majhwar 3.

Arora-Ror.

Arpatti-Majhwar 3.

Aryapanth - Kanphata 2,

Asadpuriya - Halwai 2.

Asandhhāri—Gusain 7.

* Ashiqan—

Asrama—Dasnāmi,

Asrent - Dom 7.

Astāwar - Dasnāmi.

Asthâna-Kayasth 11,

Astiva-Basor 1.

Astra-Chaubé 2.

Asuriya—Bhulnhûr 11.

Aswâl-Gangâri. Atariha-Dhánuk 2. Ateriya-Kahar 5. Athariha Bhuinhar 11 : Athariya | Kumhar 2 : Kurmi 5. Athbhaiya—Bhadauriya. Athsaila Bhat 3, 4. Athsela i Atit-Kingriya 2. Atishbaz-Darzi 2. Audha-Barai 3, Audhār-Kurmi 6. Audhbâsi-Bharbhûnja 1. Audhiya-Chhipi 2 : Dhârhi 2 : Dhuniya 4 : Gaddi 2 : Halwâi 2 : Koîri 2 : Meo
4 : Nâi 2 : Sunâr 9 : Thathern 3.

Audhiyâr—Bhangi 21.

Augar—Mahesri 2.

Aughar—Aghorpanthi : Jogi
2.

Auji—Dom 41.

Aurana—Agarwâla 1.

Aurangâbādi—Halwâi 2.

*Awadhût.

Awasthi—Jhijhotiya 2.

Ayâziya—Madâri 1.

*Azâd.

Azamgarhiya—Chamâr 4 :

Koiri 2.

В

Bâba Hasna-Udâsi 2. Bâbhan-Bhuinhar: Sunar 7. Bach 7 Bais 7 : Gandharb Bacha J 2. Bachanwar-Bhangi 21. "Bachgoti-Beldår 2 : Musabar 11 : Nat 7. Bachgotra Chauhan-Luniya 3. Bachguar-Bohra 4. Báchhal Ahir, 10: Arakh 8: Beldar 2 : Darzi Bâchhar) Bâchhil 2: Gaddi Kathak 3 : Kurmi 6 : Manibår 2 : Parwil 1 : Taga 6. Bachhiliya-Parwar 1. Bachhrájpuriya-Sunár 9. Bachor-Pasi 8.

Badahré-Khatri 15. Badalna-Kumhar 2. Badan 7 Banarwar: Banjara Badana J 12. Badhai-Dom 41. Badhak, Bharbhinja Badhik Darzi 2 : Habura 3 : Kanjar 3. Badhuriya-Mallah S. Badhauliya - Sunar 9. Badhl-Barbai. Bâdi-Bhât 8 : Dom 42 : Nat 9, 37. Bâdipuriha-Sunăr 7. Badlan-Bhangi 21. Badniyar-Bawariya 7. Bagauliya-Sahariya 2. Baghâri-Baidguar.

*Baghban-Rain 2. Bâghdâdi-Sayyid 2, *Baghel) Balahar 1 : Basor Baghela > 1 : Belwar : Bagheli) Dhanuk 2 : Gadariya 2 : Ghosi 1 : Kathak S: Musahar 11: Tamboli 2. Baghochhiya—Bhuinhar 11: Musahar 11. Bâghwân-Kunjra 2: Murão 2. Bågri-Arakh 5 : Bhangi 20: Chhîpi 3 : Jâdon 2 : Joshi 4: Kadhera: Mochi 3: Sayyid 2 : Sunår 6. Bagula-Nat 9. Bagulha-Luniya 3. Bagura-Bawariya 6. Bahadsiya-Hahûra 3. Bahådurpuriya - Kathak 3, Bahajbana - Gandharh 2. Bahâli-Hâbûra 3. Bahaniya - Habara 3. Bahâri-Mahesri 2. Bahariya - Bais 7 : Harukiya. Bahariyâbâdi-Sunâr 7. Bâharwâla Bhangi 1: Bâharwâr) Chamâr 3. Bahas-Habara 3. Bahel-Khatri 15. *Baheliya-Beldår 2 : Boriya: Dhuniya 4: Dusadh 5: Kanjar 1: Kumhâr 2: Manihâr 2 : Pási 8. Baheniya-Kāchhi 2: Māli 3 : Saini. Baheriya-Ahar 2.

Bahika-Kathi 1. Bahlim , Banjara 12: Bha-Bahlimi f thiyara 2: Bihishti 1: Gara: Nai 2: Shaikh 2 : Teli 3. Bâhman-Barbai 2 : Muzão 4: Nat 8. Bâhman Gaur—Balahar I. Bâhmangot-Basor 1. Bahmaniya—Hurkiya: Kurmi 5. Bahraichi) Dafali 2 : Dho-Bahraichiya) bi 2 : Dhuniya 4 : Gaddi 2 : Harjala : Julaha 2: Kumhar 2: Manihar 2 : Teli 3. Bahrāri-Banjāra 12. Bahri-Khatri 13. Bâhuki-Banjâra 12. Bahrup Banjara 11: Bahrûpiya Bhand. Bahunaina-Nat 11. Baid-Darzi 2: Kanjar S: Nat 33. *Baidguar-Banjara 20. Baiga-Bhuiyar I. Baikata-Gadariya 2. Baira-Baranwar, *Bairagi - Koiri 2. Bairswa-Dom 42. *Bais-Balabar 1 : Beriya 3 : Bhangi 20: Bihishti 1: Chhipi 3: Churihar 2: Dalera 2 : Darzi 2 : Dhobi 2 : Gaddi 2 : Joshi 4 : Julaha 2 : Kahar 5 : Kanjar 5 : Kathak 3 : Khagi 2 : Kharsdi 2: Mochi Musahar 11: Nái 2: Nat 8 : Tags 6.

Baisgari-Ahar 2. Baiswâla-Tamboli 2. "Bisawar , Arakh8: Barai 8: Baiswâri } Beriya S : Bhangi 20, 21: Boriya : Chhîpi 3: Darzi 2: Kadhera: Khagi 2 : Kanjar 3 : Kori 2 : Koiri 2 : Kurmi 5 : Manihar 2. Baja | Baranwar. Bajaniya-Nat 7, 11. Bajauriya-Marwari 6. Bajbhan-Gandharb 2. Bajdhar-Baheliya 2. *Bâigi. Bâjpei,-Jhijhotiya 2. Bajutheb-Agariya 3. Bakaiya-Ahîr 10, Bakandar-Munio 2. Bakarha-Bhand. Bakarkasâu-Gadariya 2. Bakarqassab-) Khutik Bakargassái J Questlb. Baksariya-Balahar 1 : Bhuînhâr 11: Dhuniya 4: Dom 7: Churihar 2: Kathak 2 : Tawaif 2. *Balâhar-Arakh 3: Basor 1. Balahi Behra 4. Bâlakchamariya-Bhangi 20. Balant-Meo 4. Balapura—Gaddi 2. Balbhadaraut—Kachhwaha 2. Baldua-Maheeri 2. Balgal-Dom 8. Balipuriya-Halwai 2. VOL. IV.

Baliyan-Chamar 3: Jat 19. Ballái - Kahar 6 : Kori 2. Ballamtiriya-Kandu. Balliya-Mallah S. Bálmik > Káyasth 12: Bálmíki S Bhangi 21. Baloch-Biloch. Balot-Meo 4, Balrâmpuri—Dhârhi 2. Baltent-Bhar 4. Bâmhan-Chôrihâr 2 : Darzi 2 : Gaur Râjput 2. Bamhaniya - Bhand Chamar 8 : Gadariya 2. Bamhila-Basor 1. "Bammargi. Bamra-Ramaiya 2. Bana-Tharu 10. Banaj-Kol 4. Banal-Gandharb 2, *Banaphar. Banarasi Boriya: Banârasiya J Lohar 4: Teli 3. "Banarwar. Banjara 14 : Banaudh Banaudhiya J Bhangi 20: Chamar 3 : Sunar 7. Banâwar - Chhîpi 2. Banbheru-Nú 2. Banbîrpota—Kachhwaha 2, Banchhor-Kapariya 2. Bandariya-Barhai 2. Bandarwar-Banarwar. *Bandhalgoti Bandhilgoti Bandhugoti) *Bandi Bandi-Iraqi 3. Bandichhor-Klintik I.

Bandijan—Bhât 3.
Bandwâri—Banjāra 12.
Bangachwâr—Agariya 3.
*Bangâli—Beriya3; Kanjar 5.
Bangâli Gusâin—Gauriya.
Bangar—Mahesri 2.
Bangariya—Thathera 3.
Bangash—Bihishti 1: Pathân 8.

Banghar—Mahesri 2.
Banha—Balāhar 1.
Banhchariya—Kingriya 2.
Banhkata—Kingriya 2.
Bani Fātima—Sayyid 2.
Bani Hāshim—Hijra 2.
Bani Isrāîl—Shaikh 2.
Baniwāl—Bhangi 30: Halwāi 2.

wâi 2.

*Banjāra } Ahar 2: Barai 3:

Banjariya } Bihishti 1: Bis
âti: Dhuniya 4: Hâbûra

3: Jhojha 1: [Kanjar 5:

Manihâr 2: Ramaiya 2.

Banjhalwâr—Agariya 3.

Bank—Ramaiya 2. Bankar—Dabgar 1 : Dhalgar 1.

Bankarwâr—Manihâr 2. Banmânush—Musahar 2.

Bannait—Baiswar 2; Chûrihâr 2.

Banchra - Hábûra 3. Banráj - Musahar 2.

Bansit-Baiswar 2.

*Bânsphor—Bhangi 21: Dhârhi 2: Dom 7: Domar,

Banswariya Bhát 4: Banswariya Kori 2. Bantar Thâru 12:
Bantariya Kându,
Banthela—Bhând.
Banwâr Bâwariya 7:
Banwariya Hâbûra 3.

*Banya-Barai 3 : Beriya 3 :
Julâha 2 : Khâgi 2 : Pâsi 8 .
Banyâna—Darzi 2 .
Bâori—Kadhera : also see
Bâwariya .
Baragwâr—Agariya 3 .
Baraha—Bhând .
Barahhazâr—Chero 6 .
Barahi—Saraswata 2 .

*Bârahseni.
Bârahzâti—Khatri 13.
Baraî—Dalem 2: Tamboli 1,
2.

Baraik—Panka 1. Baraiya—Barai. Baramkali—Harjala. Baraniya—Teli 3.

*Båranwål Bhangi 20.

Barâr \ Basor 1 :
Barariya \ Kanjar 3.
Barasi—Bhuînhâr 11.
Bara Sudaya—Gujarâti
Brâhmau 9.

Barauniya-Patwa 3.

Barausiya—Ahîr 5. Barbhaiya—Teli 3.

Barchandi -Habara 3.

Barchi-Bhangi 21.

Bardbansi-Chero 6.

Bardhân-Chero 6.

Bardhiya Bardhiya Bardiha Kurmi 5.

Bardwar > Chamar 3: Bardwari j Koiri 2. Bareiya - Gadariya 2. Bareli--Darzi 2. Barendra-Bangâli. Bareriya-Ahar 2. Baresra-Kumhár 2, Bargadda—Banjāra 12, *Bargah Bargâha Ahir 4, 9, 10. Bargâhi J Bargaiyan-Kurmi 6. Bargala) Dhuniya 2: Taga Bargali J 6. "Bargi. Bargotiya-Khangar 3. Bargpuriya - Halwai 2. *Bargûjar-Bhangi 20, 21: Bhât 2 : Bhoksa 4 : Dalera 2: Darzi 2: Dhuniya 2, 4: Gara: Julaha 2: Kadhera: Kathak S: Khatik 1: Manihar 2: Meo 4: Mochi 8. Bargyan-Bhat 2. Barh-Jat 21. *Barhai. Barhaiya-Barhiya Barhaniya-Bhoksa 4. Barharlya-Thathers 3: Bivår 1. Barharwâr-Gadariya 2. Barhauliya-Barholiya: MAli S. Barhel-Dom 7. Barhi-Barhai. "Barhiva. *Barholiva.

Vot. IV.

Bâri-Joshi 4: Kahâr 5: Nåi 2. Bariya-Nat 7 : Saiqalgar. Barjatwa-Chamar S. Barla-Mughal 3. Barlang - Bhangi 21. Barmaniyan-Barhai 2. Barmar-Bawariya 7. Baroda-Dom 41. Barohi-Bhangi 30. Barothi-Ahir 5. Barpagwa-Bhat 4. Bartun-Jadon 2. *Barua-Bhat 3 : Dharkar 1 : Kanjar 3. Barubansi-Chero 6. Barwa-Ahir 10 : Bhât 3. Barwaik-Tharu 12. *Barwar-Bhangi 21: Bhat 3: Bhuinbar 11: Biyar 1: Dusådh 5: Joshi 4: Kol 4: Mochi 3: Thathera 3. Barwariya-Lodha 2. Barya-Dom 42. Baryal-Mahesri 2. Basgarh-Basor 1. Bashara-Azld. Bâsil-Parwâl 1. Basobiya-Basor 1. Basodhiya-Bhat 3. Balahar 1 : Bhan-"Basor gi 21 : Bhat 3 : Basora Dangi 2: Do-Basoriya mar: Khangar 3: Mochi 8. Bata-'Iraqi 3. Batal-Dom 41. Batar-Gajar 6.

2 12

Batham | Bharbhûnja 1 : Bathawa | Bohra 4 : Darzi Bathma | 2 : Dhobi 2 : Ka-Bathmi | dhera : Kahâr 5 :

Kalwar 4: Kanjar 5: Kewat 2: Kisan 1: Kurmi 6: Lodha 2: Mallah 2: Manihar 2, Batsil—Agarwâla 1.

Batra—Teli 3.
Batta—Thâru 12.
Batur—Thâru 10.
Baturha—Gandharb 2.
Baurâsi—Pâsi 8.
Bauri—Bâwariya 9.
Bâwan —Kamboh 3.
Bâwan Goli—Kamboh 3.
Bâwan jati —Khatri 13 : Sarraswata 2.

Bawar-Nai 2.

*Bâwariya.

Bazâz Bartya-Marwari 6.

Bâzigar-Nat 4, 8.

Bedbåf-Dom 39.

Bedi-Khatri 13.

Bediya - Beriya.

Begi - Bihishti 1 : Mahesri 2.

Behara-Kahar 1.

Behåri-Dom 8.

Behna-Dhuniya: Ghosi 1.

Bel - Kamboh 3.

Belbhariya-Chamar 3.

*Beldår-Dhångar 2 : Kanjar 1.

Belhariya-Bhulnhar 11,

Belkhariya-Kumhar 2.

*Belwar—Bhātiya 6; Dhāngar 2: Dhobi 2: Dusādh 5. Belwariya—Khatāk 1. Bem-Dom 41.

Bemuwar Bhuinbar II.

Benawa.

*Benbans } Aldr5: Bânsphor Benbansi } 2: Dabgar 1:

Darzi 2 : Dhålgar : Dhån-gar 2 : Dharkar 1 : Domar :

Jhojha 1: Kharwar 2.

Bendpåri-Kamboh S.

Bengâli-Bangâli.

Bengar-Dabgar 1,

Bentbansi-Dharkar 1.

Beonriha-Bluiyar 1.

Bera-Dom 41.

Beri-Khatri 15.

*Beriya-Banarwar: Kanjar 1: Nat 8.

Berwar-Barwar.

Beshara-Azâd.

Bhadana-Gûjar 6.

*Bhadauriya—Beldâr 2 : Beriya 3 : Bhangi 20, 21 : Bharbhûnja 1 : Bhât 2 : Chamâr 3 : Darzi 2 : Dhobi 2 : Gad-di 2 : Kāchhi 2 : Kori 2 :

Lodha 2 : Murão 2 : Nat 8 : Pâsi 8.

Bhaddal—Agarwâla 1.

Bhaddali-Joshi I.

Bhaddari—Jogi 3.

Bhadesiya—Tambeli 2.

Bhadohiya-Kathak 3.

Bhadwariya-Bhadanriya.

*Bhagai } Ahîr 5 : Barai 6 : Bhagta } Bhar 4 : Bhât

Bhagtaha 4: Bhuinhar

11: Chamar 22; Kachhi 2;

Luniya 3 : Murão 2 : Râdha : Thâru 15. Bhagat Bhagwan—Udasi 2, Bhagawatiya Bhangi 21: Bhagwatiya Kori 2: Luniya 3.

Bhâgîrathi—Lodha 2: Luniya 3: Mâli 3: Saini.

Bhagri - Ahar 2.

Bhagulpuriya - Darzi 2.

Bhainhar - Kori 2.

Bhainiwál-Ját 17.

Bhains)

Beriya 3 : Gha-

Bhainsaha siya 2 : Kanjar 3 : Sânsiya 2 : Teli 3.

Bhainsara-Ahir 5.

Bhainswâr-Kalwar 4.

Bhaiwadh-Bhainhar 11,

Bhaiyator—Gadariya 2.

Bhaktiya - Koiri 2.

Bhakwa-Gandharb 2.

Bhâl-Gára.

Bhâlê-Bhâtiya 6.

*Bhâlê Sultân.

Bhalira-Ramaiya 2.

Bhall-Blmiyar 2.

Bhalle-Khatri 15.

*Bhand.

Bhandâri—Kurmi 5: Mahesri 2.

Bhaudauliya-Kori 2.

Bhandela-Bhand.

Bhanes-Kanjar 8.

*Bhangi—Beriya 2 : Gaddi 2 : Julaha 2.

Bhangiwâla-Kanjar 5.

Bhaniha-BhuiyAr 2.

Bhankawat-Kachhwaha 2,

Bhanolê-Mêli 3.

Bhanr-Bhand.

Bhanreriya—Husaini: Joshi 1.

*Bhântu.

Bhânwag-Bais 7.

*Bhar.

Bharadih-Bais 7.

*Bhâradwaj a Bhar 4: Bhât Bhâradwaja 2, 4: Bhatiya 5: Bhuînhâr 11: Chanhê 2: Joshi 4: Kathak 3: Sejwâri 1.

Bharariya-Gadariya 2.

Bharat-Bhar 1.

Bharatduâri-Kumhar 2.

Bharati-Dasnāmi.

Bharatwâr-Chaubê 2.

Bharauniya-Ahir 10.

Bhar Bhuinhar - Bhar 4.

*Bharbhûnja-Kandu.

Bharda—Khangar 3. Bhardela—Rasor 1.

Bharê-Pâsi 8.

Bhareriya Tiwari-Jhijhotiya 2.

Bhârgava—Bhûinhûr 11: Dhûsar 1.

Bharil - Parwill 1.

Bhariya—Kasera 2 : Thathera 3.

Bharka-Dhohi 2.

Bharmare-Mulláh 3.

Bharosiya-Ahir 10.

Bharpatwa-Bhar 1.

*Bharsaiyan.

Bharsiya—Dusadh 5: Kahar 6.

Bharsiyan-Bharsaiyan.

Bharta-Khangar 3.

Bhartari-Jogi 3.

Bharthariya-Ahar 2.

Bhartrinath - Kanphata 2.

Bharu-Kanjar 4.

Bharua-Kathak 1: whif 1.

Bharwariya - Chamar a.

Bhasiru-Khatri 15.

*Bhat-Darzi 2 : Gaur Rajput 2: Julaha 2: Mos 4: Ramaiya 2 : Rangrez 1.

Bhatara-Bhat 3, 4.

Bhatela-Radha 1.

*Bhathiyara.

Bhatiya-Bohra 4 : Nat 9.

Bhatkariya-Bais 7.

Bhatkhauwa-Sunir 8.

Bhatnagar—Bharbanja 1 Bhat 2: Kayasth 8.

Bhatra-Mabesri 2.

Bhatti-Ahir 10: Banjara

12 : Bihishti 1 : Gadariya

2 : Gaddi 2: Gâra: Gûjar

6 : Habûra 3 : Ramaiya 2.

Bhâtu-Bhântu : Kanjar 1 : Nat 7.

Bhaura-Gurkha.

Bhawâni-Mali 3.

Bhayar-Chamar 3.

Bhemua-Kachhi 2.

Bheniya - Nai 2.

Bhenriha-Musahar 10,

Bherihara-Barai 4.

Bhian-Teli 3.

Bhijauriya-Alar 2.

"Bhikha Sahib.

Bhikhpuriya—Halwai 2.

"Bhil-Barhai 2 : Bhathiyara 2 : Påsi 8.

Bhllaur-Bhangi 21.

Bhimbru-Nai 2.

Bhimpuriya-Koeri 2.

Bhirgudi-Ahir 5 : Kahar 6.

Bhitari Bais 7 : Nat 35.

Bhitariya S

Bhogta-Kharwar 2.

Bhoi-Kahar 1.

Bhojpuri Rawat-Bhangi 20.

Bhojpuriya-Churihar 2:

Dhobi 2: Joshi 4 · Kalwar 4 : Luniya 3.

Bhok-Mallah 8.

Bhokar-Bhangi 21.

*Bhoksa.

Bholiya-Sunar 9.

Bhomlyan - Mali 3.

Bhond) Belwar.

Bhonda J Kahar 6.

Bhongiya - Babeliya 2,

Bhonrele Dûbê-Jhijhotiya

Bhontiya-Mallah 3.

Bhorak—Ahiwasi 2

Bhorar-Bhatiya 6.

Bhosiya-Ledha 2.

"Bhot-

Bhotiya-Bhot : Gurkha,

Bhrigubansi—Bhùinhar II.

Bhudl-Bhatiya 6.

Bhugta-Kharwar 2.

Bhuinganiya-Suntr 9.

*Bhuinhar-Bhuiya 4 : Bhuiyar 2 : Kunjra 2 : Luniya 3.

*Bhuiya-

*Bhuiyar.

Bhû j-Bharbhûnja 1.

Bhujkalaura-Kalwar 4.

Bhujua-Bharbhûnja 1.

Bhujwar-Sunar 9. Bhukarsi-Kurmi. Bhukarwâl-Murão 2. Bhukiya-Banjara 12. Bhuksa-Bhoksa. Bhûl-Dom 42. Bhulnihai-Kanaujiya. Bhumiyan-Bhangi 21. Bhunsaiha-Kathak 3. Bhur-Kurmi 6. Bhurji-Bharbhûnja 1. *Bhurtiya—Ahîr 8 : Boriya. Bhusangar-Abar 2. Bhusautiya-Thathera 3. Bhūsar-Bhuiyar 2. Bhusela-Dhanuk 2. Bhusiya-Chamar 3: Lo dha 2. Bhutta-Rain 2. Biår-Biyar. Bichauri-Rådha I. Bidaniya-Kumhar 2. Bidâwati-Bawariya 2. *Bidua. Biganandi-Bairagi 2 Bigwa-Sunår 7. Bihâni-Mahesri 2. Bihâri-Pasi 8. Bihârwâla—Kanjar 5. Bihipuriha-Kalwar 4. *Bihisti. Bijaniya-Khangar 3: Nat 7. Bijaypuriya-Musahar 11. Bljhoniya-Bais 7. Bijilwar-Gangari. Bijmargi - Bammargi 2.

Bijnauriya-Tharu 18.

Bikwans-Taga 3.

Bilaiya-Sunar 7.

Bilâlpuriya—Sunâr 7. Bilâra - Sunâr 7. Bilehniya-Ahfr 5. Bilgotiya-Khangar S. Bilkhariya-Bâri 3 : Bhangi 20, 21 : Dharkûr 1. Billimär-Khatri 14. "Biloch. Bilpurwar-Bhangi 30. Bilûch-Biloch. Bilupuriya—Halwai 2. Bilwar-Belwar. Bin - Kol 4. Binaunan-Lodha 2. "Bind-Bhar 5: Kanjar 5: Kewat 2 : Luniya S : Mallah 3. Bindrabani Tamboli 2: Bindrabanbâsi Barai 3: Bindrabâsi Musahar 11. Bindwar - Beldar 2. Binnâni-Mahesri 2. Birha-Dom 2. Birhariya-Ahîr 10 : Bhûfahår 11 : Chamår 3. Birmbhat-Bhat 8. Birramiya-Bhûmhar 11. Birthariya-Golapûrab 1. Birtiya-Kurmi 6, Biruar-Bhuinhar 11. *Birwar-Barwar Rajput : Berwar. Bîsa-Agarwâla 1 : Taga 6. Bisaill-Chamar 3. Bisari-Barhai 2. *Bisati—Ramaiya 2. *Bisen - Gaddi 2 : Julaha 2. Bisensob-Bhangi 20.

*Bishnoi. Blshnpuriya-Kathak Manihar 2: Musahar 11. Biswân-Taga 6. *Biyar-Bhar 5. Bodala-Kahar 6. Bodiwâla-Nânakpanthi 3. Bodlê Dasnámi : Ját 19. Bodlân Bohat-Kanjar 4. Bohra-Bhatiya 6. Bora-Dazzi 2. Boriya-Dharhi 2 : Pasi 8. Bot) Bhot: Kahar Bota J Kurmi 5. Boxwâla-Bisâti. Brajbāsi-Beriya 3 : Bariya : Kanjar 3 : Kasera 2 : Koiri 2 : Nat 6, 8 : Tawaif 2. Brempuri-Harjala. Brahma-Kanphata 2. *Brâhman. Bråhmaniya-Bhåt 4. Brahmbhât—Bhát 4. Brijbāsi-Brajbāsi. Brindabani.

Bûchar-Gûjar 6: Khatîk 1: Nat 8. "Bughana. Bujar-Luniya 3. Bukarra-Halwái 2. Bukhâri-Sayyid 2. Bulahar-Balahar. Bulbulha-Chhipi 2. Bulchra-Nai 2. Bunbun-Bhuiyar 2. Bundel , Bhat 2: Kathak *Bundela Bundeliya-Bhangi 20. Bunerwal-Pathan 9. Bungariya-Dusadh 5. Bunjahi-Khatri 13. Bunkar-Kori 2. Burbak-Banarwar. *Burhela. Burki-Banjara 12. Burkiya-Bhand. Burtiya-Banjara 12. Buzgassáb-Qassáb. Byadha-Nat 9, 21: Pasi 8. Byahta , Kalwar 4 : Lohar 4: Byahut J Nai 2 : Toli 3.

Chachara—Teli 3.
Chagāba—Gond 3.
Chagtai—Mughul 2.
Châhu—Barwar Râjput.
*Ohâi
Bhar 5: Bind 2.
Châin
Chaini
2: Mallâh 3.
Chailta—Halwâi 2.

O

Chak—Gadariya 2: Mughul 3. Chakardiya—Sahariya 2. Chakauriya—Dângi 2. Chak Bais — Bais 7: Kumhâr 2. Chakchainiya—Küchhi 2.

Chakhri-Kumhar 2 Chakirâba-Banjara 12. Chakiya-Ahir 10. Chakseniya-Kåchhi 2. Chalanmahrão - Khatik 1. *Chamar—Agarwâla 8 : Chhîpi 3 : Darzi 2 : Dom 41, 42 : Gaur : Julaha 2. Chamarbans-Gaddi 2. Chamar Barhai - Barhai 2. *Chamar Gaur-Balahar 1: Joshi 4. Chamar Gautam-Nat 8. Chamariya—Bhangi 20: Kumhar 2. Chamarmangta—Chamar 3 : Kanjar 1 : Nat 8, 33. Chamarmunda-Nai 2. Chamar Nat-Nat 8. Chamar Sangla-Nat 8. Chamar Sû jiya - Darzi 2. Chamar Teli-Teli 3. Chamarwa-Nat 8. Châmi-Bawariya 6. Chamkel—Bansphor 2. Chamoli-Gangari. Chamrel-Dom 7. Chanahiya-Bhangi 21. Chanâl-Kanjar 4. Chanamiya-Bais 7. Biyar 1 : Kur-Chananawa J mi 5. Chanau-Kurmi 5. Chanchara-Kandu. Chandak - Mahesri 2. Chandal Bhangi 2, 21, 30: Dom 1: Chandála Chandaliya) Kanjar 4.

Chandan Biyar 1: Ga-Chandanawa J dariya 2. Banjara 12 : Chandaul Chandauliya Chamar 3: Chandauriya ' Sunar,9. Chandbharag-Kanphata 2. *Chandel Babeliva Chandela Bhangi 20: Chandeli Chamar 3: Chandelwäl Darzi 2: Chander Gadariya 2: Gaddi 2 : Gåra : Gåjar 6 : Kahar 5: Kapariya 2: Khagi 2 : Kurmi 6 : Manihar 2: Meo 4: Musahar 11: Nat 8: Rangrez 1: Taga 6. Chandpuriha , Halwai 2: Chandpuriya J Khilgi 2: Kurmi 6. *Chandrabansi-Bhan 2. Chand Råe - Chamar 3. Chandraseniya—Bhadaurivar. Chandrauliya , Kori 2: Chandrawal J Kurmi 6. Chandwar-Kamkar 2. Changlie-Bhat 4. Chanwar—Ahir 10. Chapar-Kori 2. Châran-Banjâra 2 : Bhát 8. *Charandasi. Charandha-Kalwar 4. Chargoriha—Bhuiyar 2. Charkha-Banjara 12. Charokota-Sunår 7. Charwar-Bohra 4. Chāryāri-Dhuniya 4. Chârzâti-Khatri 13. Châsa-Sadgop.

Chatbanûri } Sayyid 6, Chatrauri } Sayyid 6, Chauâna—Sombansi 2, Chaubê—Bharbhûnja 1; Jhijhotiya 2.

Chaudhari Baiswār 2: Chaudhariya Banarwār: Bhuinhār 11: Chero 6: Dom 8: Ghosi 1: Jhojha 1: Kapariya 2: Kurmi 6: Mallāh 3.

*Chauhan-Baidguar: Banjara 11, 12, 15 : Barai 3 : Barbai 2 : Bâri 3 : Bâwarriya, 6, 7, 12: Beldår 2: Beriya 3: Bhangi 20, 21, 23: Bharbhûnja 1; Bhsthiyara 2 : Bhoksa 4 : Bihishti 1: Bind 2: Boriya: Chamar 3 : Chhipi 3 : Chûribar 2 : Dalera 2 : Darzi 2 : Dhobi 2: Dhuniya 2, 4: Dom 8: Gaddi 2: Gandhila 2: Gâra: Ghosi 1: Golapürab 3: Habashi: Hâbûra 3 : Jât 20 : Jhojha 1 : Jogi 3 : Joshi 4 : Julâha 2 : Kâchhi 2 : Kadhern: Kahar 6: Kanjar 5: Kathak 3 : Khagi 2 : Khatik 1 : Kunjra 2 : Luniya 3: Manihar 2: Meo 4: Musahar 11 : Nat 8 : Rangrez : Sânsiya 2 : Taga 6. Chauhâniya Misr-Kumhâr 1.

Chauhatt-Agrahari 2.

Chauhela-Bhangi 21.

Chaukhar-Chaubé 2.

Chaunsathiya-Ahir 10.

Chaupata Khamb.

Chaurasi. 7 Bhat 8, 4:

Chaurasiya Barai 3:

Chamâr 3 : Dhârhi 2 : Gâra : Halwâi 2 : Julâha 2 : Kamboh 3 : Lohâr 4 : Luniya 3 : Monh 3 : Pâsi 8, Chaurâsi Goli -- Kamboh 3.

Chaurâsi Kanha-Kamboh 3.

Chausaki-Kalwar 4.

*Chauseni-Khatik 1.

Chelaha-Chûrihar 2.

Chenr-Bhand.

*Chero-Kol 4.

Chhachhûndar-Khangar 3.

Chhagoriya-Chamar 3.

Chhâhari-Beriya 3.

Chhahzāti—Khatri 13.

Chhakrê-Ahar 2.

Chhânchdih-Sânsiya 2.

Chhaniyan-Patwa 3.

Chhappariya—Kurmi 5.

Chhata-Tawaif 6.

Chhatarpurlya-Chhipi 2.

Ohhatrabhujant—Kåohhwäha 2.

Chhatri-Baheliya 2:

Beriya 3 : Chhipi 3 :

Darzi 2 : Gaddi 2 :

Gandharb 2: Kamboh 3:

Kasera 2 : Kuthak S : Nat

8 : Rauniyar : Rajput 1 :

Sunar 6 : Tamboli 2.

Chhiânavê—Agarahri 2;

Chhibari-Joshi 4,

Chhijariya-Nat 9.

Chhilatiya-Dhannk 2.

"Chhîpi-Bhangi 21. Chhiraura—Chubé 2. Chhirkllat - Meo 4. Chhokarzáda-Jádon 2. Chhonkar-Dhobi 2 : Jat 21. Chhota Samudaya-Gujarâti Brâhman 9. Chhoti Sen-Gadariya 2. Chhotkana-Gûjar 6. Chhunkari-Dhuniya 2. Chhuriyapel-Chhipi 2. Chichâm-Majhwar 8. Chik-Khatik 1 : Pankha 1. Qassab. Chikaniya - Sunar 7. Chikbarâlk—Pankha 1. Chikchikwa-Kharwar 2. Chikwa-Gadariya 2: Qassab. Chirar-Gahlot 8. Chirauncha-Sahariya 2. Chirklot-Meo 4. Chiryamar-Ahar 1: Baheliya 2 : Chhîpi 3 : Dalera 2 : Bhathiyara 2 : Habûra 3 : Pfisi 8. Chithauriya.) Dhobi 2: Chithoriya. J Kachhi 2 : Nat 8. Chishti. Madari 1: Chishtiya, J Sayyid 2.

Chitlangya-Mahesri 2. Chobdar—Arakh 3 : Kalwar 4 : Sejwári 1. Chodsi-Kamboh 3. Cholimargi -Bâmmargi 2. Chopar-Ghosi 1. Chopra-Khatri 15. Chotya Chauhan—Banjara Chuadha-Khatri 15. Chuhan-Bhangi 24. Chûhar. Chohara Bhangi 1. Chuhra . Chûlat-Tage 3. Bhangi 21: Chunar. Chunăra. Dom 41 : Pasi Chunarha, Chungelé-Bhat 3. Chunyāra—Barhai 2 : Dom 42. Churel-Jat 21. Churcle-Bhangi 21 : Káchhi 2. Chureliya-Dom 7. Churiha-Kumkar 2. Chûrihâr. 1 Chhipi 5; Chûrihâra. | Sunâr 7. Churiya-Kamkar 2. Churiya Guâl-Ahîr 7. Chutelê—Bhangi 21.

Dabas—Bâwariya 6. *Dabgar—Musahar 11. Dâbi—Bâwariya 6. Dadai—Gangâri. Dadaichi—Majhwâr 8. Dadavê—Gond 2. Dadhich-Gaur 2.

*Dâdupanthi.

*Dafâli.

Daga-Mahesri 2.

Dagwariya-Tharu 11.

Daiha-Jat 20.

Dahait-Kol 4.

Dahariya-Kahar 5.

Dahima-Ahir 5.

Dahman-Barhai 2.

Dahngal-Meo 4.

Dahuna-Jat 20.

Dakaut-Husaini : Meo 4.

Dakhar-Tharu 12.

Dakkhinâha-Barai 3 : Bar-

hai 2: Bâri 3: Biyar 1:

Chamar 3: Charibar 2:

Dhobi 2 : Kahar 6 : Kalwar

4 : Kathak 3 : Kharot : Koiri

2 : Kumhar 2 : Lohar 4 : Manihar 2 : Sunar 8 : Teli 3.

Dakkhinatiya Sreni-Utka-

la 1.

Dakkhini- Dafáli 2.

Dakkhinwâr-Bhát 2; 3.

Daksha-Chaubé 2.

Dalâmau - Agrahari 2.

Dalât-Meo 4.

Dalé-Bawariya 7.

Dalel-Gujar 6.

*Dalera-Khagi 2,

Dali-Habara 3.

Dalpuriya-Bhât 2.

Dalwariya-Bhangi 28.

Dammari-Mahesri 5.

Damrauniya-Kahar 5.

Danderi-Banjara 12.

Dandi-Dasnami.

Dandiya-Thathera 3.

Dandwâr—Bhuiya 4.

Dangan-Kamboh 3.

Dangarha-Kachhi 2.

*Dângi.

Dankmardan-Bhangi 21.

Danya-Joshi 8.

Daras-Dhalgar.

Dargal-Ramsiya 2.

Dari-Dabgar 1.

Dariya-Nat 9.

Darji-Chhîpi 3.

Dars-Kori 2.

Darshani 7 Kanphata 1:

Darshaniya J Mali 5.

Darsiya -- Gadariya 2.

Darswar-Ahir 10.

*Darvesh.

Darwar - Meo 4.

Darya-Dom 42.

Daryâbâdi – Kumhâr 2 ; Nat 8.

*Darya Dâsi.

*Darzi - Dom 41, 42: Manihar 2.

Das-Dom 41.

Dasa—Agarwala 1 : Golapürab 4 : Taga 6.

Dasati - Bohra 4.

Dasaundhi 7 Bhát 8, 4:

Dasaundhiya J Luniya 3.

Dasghar-Bhat 4.

Dasgopāl-Kanphata 2.

*Dasnāmi.

Dasput-Bhuiyar 2.

Dastarband-Darzi 1.

Daswân- Jât 19 : Taga 6.

Datta-Dasnami.

Dâûdzai - Pathin 10.

Daundiya Kheriya-Thathera 3. Dauraha-Dorha.

Daurâni-Mahesri 2.

Daurha-Dorha.

Dauriha-Dharkar 1.

Dauwa-Ahir 5.

Dê-Jat 11.

Dehâti Dehi } Musahar 10.

Dehiya-Jat 12.

Dehliwâl) Beldâr 2 : Dhobi

Dehliwala 1 2.

Demrot-Mee 4.

Deobansi-Patwa 3.

Deodinâik-Nat 11.

Deogayan - Sunar 9.

Dechariya-Bhuiyar 2.

Deoraj-Luniya 3.

Deosiya - Musahar 2.

Derhummar-Ummar 1.

Deriya-Banarwar.

Desi-Bari 3: Beldar

Bhand: Bhangi 21: Bharbhûnja 1 : Chamar S : Dhârhi 2 : Jhojha 1 : Koiri 2 :

Kumbar 2: Rangrez 1:

Sunar 9 : Teli 3.

Deswâl > Beriya 8 : Bhangi

Deswâla J 21; Bohra 4 : Jât

11, 18 : Manihar 2 : Nai 2 :

Rangrez 1.

Deswâli-Bawariya 2 : Bhan-

gi 21: Gandhi 1: Ghosi 1:

Jhojha 1 : Kahar 6 : Lohar

4 : Máli 3 : Sunår 6.

Deswar-Ahir 10 : Dhobi 2.

Deswari-Chhipi 2.

Detwâr-Thâru 13.

Devdås-Bhatiya 5.

Dewaiya -- Sunar 7.

Dewar-Gond 3.

Dewasi-Kamboh 3.

Dewat-Kalwar 4.

Dhaba-Dhalgar.

Dhâighar-Khatri 13,

Dhaikar-Thám 10.

Dhajpanth-Kanphata 2.

"Dhakara-Dhanuk 2: Kananjiya.

Dhakarya—Chhipi 8.

Dhakauliya-Bhangi 21: Káchhi 2.

Dhaker-Tharu 13.

Dhakeri—Dhuniya 2.

Dhaki-Dom 41.

Dhâkra-Dhâkara.

Dhakwal-Tharu 13.

*Dhalgar-Dabgar 1.

Dhâlwâl-Barhai 2.

Dhaman-Chamar 3: Kamboh 3 : Kori 2 : Lohar 4.

Dhandara—Bāwariya 6.

Dhandhal-Bawariya 6. Dhandin—Bawariya 7.

Dhanesh-Darzi 2.

*Dhangar-Banarwar : Dhuniya 4.

Dhangra-Bhoksa 4.

Dhângya-Banjara 12.

Dhani - Kamboh 8.

Dhankikya-Banjara 12.

Dhankûta-Banjara 12: Bharbhûnja 1.

Dhaman-Barbai 2,

Dhanor-Kahar 5.

*Dhânuk-Basor 1 : Bânsphor

2: Beriya 3: Bhangi 21:

Darzi 2 : Kadhera : Påsi 8.

Dhanwan-Khatri 15.

Dhanwariya-Barai 4.

Dhanyasha—Agarwâla 1.

Dhâr-Mallah 3.

Dharaun-Chamar 3.

Dharavnê-Chhipi 2.

Dharbansi-Ahîr 10.

*Dhârhi—Dom 42: Dusidh 5: Kathak 3: Nat 9.

*Dharkar—Bansphor 2 : Dom 7 : Dusadh 5.

Dharm-Gaur 3.

Dharora-Ahîr 10.

Dhauma-Agarwâla 1.

Dhaunchak-Kahar 6.

Dhaunsiya-Dom 7.

Dhauriya-Dangi 2.

Dhê-Bhangi 19: Jat 11.

Dhelana-Agarwâia 1.

Dhelphor-Bhangi 20: Bhar 4: Dharhi 2: Kurmi 5: Mallah 3.

Dhenk-Banarwar.

Dhenkaliya-Kichhi 2.

Dhenwar-Gurkha.

Dhlman-Kori 2.

Dhîmar—Kahâr 1, 5: Mallâh 1: Nat 8: Thâru 13.

Dhindhor—Ahir 5: Chamar 3.

Dhindhwar-Kurmi 6.

Dhingar-Gadariya 2.

Dhînwâr-Kahâr 5.

Dhiyar-Dom 41,

*Dhobi-Dom 17, 41, 42; Kathak 3; Nat 8.

Dhobibans-Kanjar 4.

Dholakiya-Kûchhi 2.

Dholdhar-Kamboh 3.

Dholi-Barhai 2: Dom 41, 43: Gond 2. Dholri-Ahîr 10.

Dhongiya-Bhar 4,

Dhorpahi—Banjara 12.

Dhuma-Chaubé 2.

Dhuna—Dhuniya : Kadhera : Mochi 3.

Dhunar-Dom 41 : Khagi 2.

Dhundhal-Gûjar 6.

Dhundhiya-Chamar S.

Dhundhiya Khera—Kharådi 2,

Dhuneb-Basor 1.

*Dhuniya-Joshi S.

Dhûnsar-Dhûsar.

Dhurana-Gangari,

Dhuriya—Ahîr 10: Chamâr 3: Kahâr 2, 5: Kându: Mallâh 3: Musahar 10.

*Dhûsar.

Dhusiya—Bind 1: Chamár 4.

Dhut-Mahesri 2.

Dibhan-Barhai 2.

Dichhit-Kewat 2.

Dihlawi-Kayasth 18.

Dikhit Beldår 2: Bhåt 2:
*Dikshit Bhuinhar 11:

Jhijhotiya 2 : Kathak 3 : Taga 6.

Dilazâk-Pathân 11.

Dilliwâl—Bhât 2: Bihishti 1: Dabgar 1: Darzi 2: Manihâr 2: Kumhâr 2: Lodha 2: Máli 3; Mochi 3.

Dilwari-Banjara 2:Chhîpi 2.

Dimar Råthaur-Bhoksa

11.

Dimri-Gangari.

Dina-Kahar 6.

Dinar-Gandhi 1.

Dingal-Meo 4.

Dingariya-Hàru 10.

Dingoriya-Haru 10.

Dirhor-Ahir 5.

Dirhwar-Ahar 2.

Disauriya-Dingi 2.

Diswar-Ahir 5.

Diwân-Joshi 8.

*Diwana.

Doâsna-Teli 3.

Dobhal-Gangari.

"Dogar.

Doghar-Dogar.

Dohar-Ahir 10 : Chamar 4.

Dojwar-Dhanuk 2.

Dokhar-Gadariya 2.

Dolidhauwa - Chamar 4.

Dolkarha-Musahar 10.

*Dom-Bhangi 21 : Dharkar

1: Hábûra 3: Kanjar 1: Nat 8.

Domahra-Dom 7.

Doman-Ahar 2.

*Domar-Balâhar 1: Bhangi 21: Chamâr 3: Gaddi 2.

Dombari-Nat 2.

Domin-Tawkif 6.

Domkatår—Bhuinhår 11: Dom 1.

Dom Miråsi-Miråsi.

Domra-Dom 7, 20.

Domtikâr-Dom 1.

Domwar-Dom 1.

Donrwar-Chaubé £.

*Donwar - Barai 3 : Bâri 3 : Bhuînhâr 11 : Musahar 11. Dophansiya-Bharbhunja 1.

*Dor-Musahar 11.

*Dorha.

Dospuriya-Bhat 4.

*Dravira.

Drigpuriya-Halwâi 2.

Duâlbandhi-Kharwar 2.

Dûbê—Bhuînhâr 11 : Halwâi 2.

Dûbêpuriya—Halwîi 2.

Dugal-Khatri 15.

"Dugdha.

Dugugiya-Bhoksa 4.

Dukauha-Bhat 4.

Dûm-Dom 41.

Dûmar-Bhantu.

Dûm Mirâsi-Mirâsi.

Dundwar-Tharu 12.

Dunhan-Dhinuk 2.

Dûnr-Ahîr 5.

Dunsua-Chhîpi 2.

Dunwar-Donwar.

Dunwariya -Bhoksa 4.

*Durgbansi.

Durki-Banjara 12.

Durrani-Pathan 12.

*Dusådh-Bhar 4: Chamár

3: Dhanuk 2: Dharhi 2:

Kadhera.

Dusaya-Chhipi 2.

Dûsra-Kâyasth 7 : Ummar

1.

⊕Dûsar.

Dutiya-Kahar 6.

Dyas-Bawariya 7.

Dyondi-Gangari.

E

Ekâsna-Teli 3. Ekka-Dhângar 2. Eksariya—Bhuinhār 11. Ekthauliya—Kanjar 3.

F

Faizâbâdi—Chamâr 8; Julâha 2. Farîdi—Shaikh 2.

Farûqi—Bihishti 1: Shaikh 2. Fatehpurl—Sunår 9. Filwån—Nat 8. Firdosiya—Madåri 1.

G

Gadahla-Gandhila 1.

Gadar-Ját 21.

*Gadariya—Bhangi 20 : Dom 39 : Kathak 3 : Meo 4: Thêru 13.

*Gaddi—Ahîr 5 : Banjûra 12 : Ghosil.

Gaddi Gûjar-Ghosi 1.

Gaderiya—Barai 8: Gadariya.

Gadh-Bhat S.

Gadhaiya - Chhipi 2.

Gadhara-Kisan 1.

Gadhara—Kåehhi 8; Kumhår 2.

Gadhila—Kumhār 2. Gadhwa—Bhāt 3. Gadi-Kamboh 3.

Gadiya-Lobar 3.

Gadol-Sejwari 1.

Gagoliya-Nat 11.

Gagra-Bhangi 30.

Gaharwâr—Beldår 2: Kathak 3: Kurmi 5: Musahar 11: Tamboli 2.

*Gahlaut 7 Banjara 12 ; Barai

Gahlot J 3: Bhangi 21:

Ghosi 1: Jogi 8: Kadhera: Kahār 6; Meo 4: San-siya 2.

"Gahoi.

Gaiduha-Pasi 8.

Gairola-Gangari.

Gajbhim-Bhat 3.

Gajgoti-Khangar 3. Gajra-Ramaiya 2. Gamel > Ahîr 5 : Kadhera : Gamela J Lohar 4. Ganaiti-Kamboh 3. Ganda-Panks 1. Gandena-Gandhila 2. Gandharap | Beriya 3 : Tawhif 1. Gandhary *Gandhi—Teli 6. Gandhikar-Gandhi 1. Gandhila-Khatik 1. Gandwal Ahir 5: Gandharb 2. Gandwar J Ganga - Gadariya 2 : Sunår 9. Gangâl-Gangâri. Gangapâri—Beldâr 2 : Bharbhûnja 1 : Bihishti 1 : Chamår 3 : Dhuniya 4 : Juláha 2 : Kori 2 : Kurmi 5 : Nat 8. *Gangaputra-Bhat 2. Gangarâmi - Hijra 2. *Gangâri. Gangaur-Oswal 8. Gangauri-Tink 1. Gangelé-Jhijhotiya 2. Gangoha-Bhar 4. Gangwani—Agrahari 3. Gangwar-Bhit 3, 4: Kanjar 5. Gangwati-Bhangi 21. Ganreriya—Gadariya.

Gâorâni-Bhând.

Garali-Bawariya 7.

Garariya-Gadariya.

Vol. IV.

Garauthiya-Bhangi 21.

*Gåra.

Garag Agarwala 1: Bhu-*Garg înhâr 11: Bind Garga J Gargbans-Bais 7: Bhuinhår 11; Garg. Gargeya - Chaubê 2. Gargya-Bhulnhar 11 : Joshi Garhwapāri—Bhāt 4. Garwariya - Thâru 11. Gariya-Kahar 5. Garoi-Sejwāri 1. Garoriya—Ahîr 10. Garpetha-Dhanuk 2. Garuhaiya-Dhanuk 2. Garwâla - Agarwâla 1. Gatru-Kamboh 8. Gauda-Gaur: Kayasth 17. Gauharna-Nat 11. Gaunharin-Tawaif 2. Gâugassâb—Qassâb. *Gaur-Arakh 3 ; Bandi ; Banjāra 15: Bāwariya 7: Beldar 2 : Belwar : Beriya 3 : Bhat 2 : Bhatiya 6 : Bihishti 1: Darzi 2: Dhobi 2: Dhuniya 4 : Ghosi 1 : Julaha 2 : Kadhera ; Kathak 3 : Kayasth 17: Kewat 2: Kumbar 2: Mochi 3: Nai 2: Nat 8: Ramaiya 2: Rangrez 1 : Taga 6 : Tamboli 2. *Gaurahar-Khagi 2. Gaurithân—Banjâra 20. *Gauriya-Barai 8: Dusadh 5 : Hâbûra 3 : Mallah 3 :

Patwa 3.

*Gaurua-Bargala.

Gausel-Bansphor 2.

*Gautam > Agarwala 1 : Bel-

Gautama J dar 2 : Bhuin-

hår 11 : Joshi 4 : Kapariya

Gautamiya-Bhuinhar 11; Jhijhotiya 2.

Gauthiwara > Gauthwära Jät 19 : 21.

Gawal-Agarwals 1.

Gawagassâb—Qassâb.

Gaya-Chero 6.

Gaymar-Dom 7

Gel-Abîr 10.

Gemar-Dom 7.

Generāli-Bhangi 52.

Gepar-Dom 7.

Ghairkameladar—Qassab.

Ghamra-Kanjar 4.

Ghanik-Kahar 5.

Ghara-Nat 32.

Gharê - Banjara 12.

Gharbâri—Atît 1 : Binsphor 1.

*Gharûk-Kahûr 5.

*Ghasiya.

Ghasiyara—Ghasyara.

Ghaskata-Golspürab 3.

*Ghasyara.

Ghatiya-Chamar 3 : Gangaputra 1.

Ghatkiya-Sunar 7.

Ghatwâl-Jût 14.

Ghatwariya-Kahar 6.

Ghâzi-Jhojha 1.

Ghâzipuri Râwat-Bhangi

Ghâzipuriya—Musahar 11.

Ghei-Khatri 15.

Ghildyâl-Gangāri.

Ghilzāi-Pathan 13.

Ghissára-Lohar 3.

Ghogh - Kewat 2; Mallah 3.

Ghoi-Kurmi 6.

Ghoraha-Bhat 4.

Ghorcharâo-Khatik 1.

Ghorcharha-Ahîr 5 : Bâri 3 : Chamar 3.

Ghorgotiya-Khangar 3.

Ghorgushti-Pathan 15.

Ghori - Banjara 12 : Bihishti 1 : Gâra : Jhojha : Nat 8 :

Pathán 16: Rangrez 1.

Ghoriwal-Banjara 12.

Ghosi-Ahfr 5: Beldar 2: Boriya: Dharhi 2: Gaddi

2: Manihar 2: Meo 4:

Nat 8.

Ghosiwal-Sunar 7.

Ghosiya-Ahar 2 : Beriya 8 : Chamar 3.

Ghughasiya-Nat 32.

Ghulam-Barhai 2 : Barwai 1.

Ghurcharha-Boriya,

Ghussar-Kanjar 2.

Gidhiya-Mochi 3.

Gidhle-Agariya 3.

Gidhmar-Beriya 3.

Gidiya-Bawariya 6.

*Gindauriya.

Gird-Ahir 5,

Girdaha-Kalwar 4.

Girdharpuriya-Ahîr 10.

Giri-Dasnami.

Gobbil) Agarwala 1 : Bhu-

Gobhila J inhar 11.

Gochhar-Ahar 2.

Godhi-Jat 21.

Godiya-Bhar 5.

Gohal Gandbîla 2 : Kanjar Gohar 3 .

Goher-Kanjar 3.

Gohil-Parwal 1.

Gohiya-Khangir 8.

Gohorwariwal-Bhat 4.

Goil-Agarwâla 1 : Parwâl 1.

Goin-Agarwâla 1.

Goirar-Agariya 3.

Gokain-Barhai 1.

Gokulastha Gusain—Vallabhacharys.

Gokulbansi-Barhai 2.

Gokuliya-Ahfr 10,

Gola – Bāwariya 7 : Chhîpi 2 : Kahâr 5 : Kumhâr 2 : Luniya 3 : Mâli 3 : Nâi 2 : Saini.

*Golahrê.

*Golapûrab.

Golar-Kasera 2.

Golherê-Kalwar 4.

Goli-Bhuksa 4.

Goliwâla-Dabgar 1.

*Gond-Kalwâr 4 : Kahâr 6 : Nat 8 : Sejwâri 1.

Gonda-Ahir 5.

Gondal-Kurmi 6.

Gondar-Barai 3 : Dusådh 5.

Gondhi-Blwariya 6.

Gondiya-Ahîr 10,

Gond Majhwar-Majhwar.

Gonr-Gond 1: Halwåi 2: Kahâr 5: Kându.

Gonraha-thak 3.

Gonthi-Sunar 9.

Gopálpuriya—Churihár 2.

Gorait-Chamaz 3.

Gorakhi—Dhuniya 4. You. IV. Gorakhpanthi-Jogi 2.

Gorakhpuri—Barai 8 : Bel-dår 2 : Gaddi 2 : Kasera 2 : Kunjra 2.

Gorchha-Gurchha.

Goré-Kamboh 1.

Goriya—Bhar 4: Kewat 2: Mallah 3: Nat 9.

Gorkha-Gurkha.

Gotela-Basor 1.

Gothalwâr-Chhipi 2.

Gotiya—Kahâr 5 : Lohâr 5 : Sunkar 1.

Gotwâla-Jât 19.

*Govindpanthi.

Govind Sāhib-Udāsi 2,

Goyit-Kurmi ö.

Gozruniya-Madári 1.

Grihasti-Sanjogi.

Guăl-Banjara 12 : Bihishti 1 : Chamar 5 : Ghosi 1 :

Meo 4: Musahar 11: Nat

6, S : Pāsi 8.

Gualbans , Ahir 5, 7, 10

Gualbansi J Ghosi 1: Harjala: Musahar 11: Nat 8.

Gualiyari-Nat 7.

Guál Pathán-Rangrez 1.

Guár—Arakh 8 : Banjára 11, 12.

Gudar-Ahîr 5.

Gugâwat-Kachhwâha 2.

Gujahna-Dusadh 5.

*Gûjar—Bêwariya 7 : Bihîshti 1 : Boriya : Dhuniya 4 : Gaddi 2 : Gaur : Kadhera :

Mee 4: Nat 8: Pasi 8: Ramaiya 2.

Gujara-Bind 2.

2 1 3

Gujaran—Ramaiya 2.

Gûjar Gaur—Darzi 2 ; Jhoshi 7.

Gujarâti—Dhârhi 2 : Joshi 4 : Kori 2 : Kurmi 5 : Mochi 3.

Gujarha-Bhand.

Gujariwāla-Bhāt 3.

Gujariya-Dom 7.

Gulâbdâsl-Sain.

Gulahla-Nat 9.

Gulfarosh-Måli 5.

Gulhani-Teli 8.

Gulhârê-Kalwir 4.

Gulhariya-Teli 3.

Gulraha-Thathera 3.

Gundaka-Marwari 6.

Guninatha-Kandu.

Gunnar-Beriya 3.

Guranawa-Bhil 1.

Gurbans-Thâru 10.

*Gurchha-

Gurer-Kalwar 4.

Gurha-Thathera 3.

Gurhâbâdi-Lohir 4.

Guriya-Goriya: Mallah 3.

*Gurkha-Dalera 2.

Guror-Kalwar 4.

Gursariya-Basor 1.

Gurunatha-Kahar 6

Gurung-Gurkha.

Gurwâl-Kahâr 6.

*Gusain-Musahar 11.

H

*Habashi.

Habibiya-Madari 1.

Habshi-Habashi.

*Hâbûra-Kanjar 3, 5.

Hadoti-Jadon 2.

Hagiya-Nat 9.

Haidarəbadi-Julaha 9.

Haihobans-Hayobana.

Hairi-Aheriya I.

Hajâri-Baheliya 2.

Hajipuriha 7 Halwai'2 : Su-

Hajipuriya J nar 7.

Hajjâm-Nâi.

Halâlkhor—Bânsphor 2:

Bhangi 1.

*Halwâi.

Hamar-Güjar 6.

Hamîrpuri | Bharbhûnja 1: Hamîrpuriya | Bhût 2.

Hanafi-Bihishti 1 : Habashi.

Hândê—Khatri 15 : Kamboh 1.

Hânri-Bhangi 19.

Hanriyânwa-Kol 4.

Hans-Gadariya 2.

*Hara—Boriya: Meo 4: Sejwūri 1.

Haraihila-Sunår 9.

Haral-Rangrez 1.

Haranwâl-Gadariya 2.

Harchanni-Dom 7, 23.

Hardaha-Chero 6.

Hardainiya-Kâchlii 2.

Hardåspura—Chanbé 2. Hardiha | Kåchhi 2: Kahâr Hardiya) 6: Kisan 1: Koiri 2 : Kurmi 5: Māli 3: Murāo

*Hardoi.

Hardoiri-Ramaiya 2.

Hardwar-Sejwari 1.

Hardwâri 7 Darzi 2 : Joshi Hardwariya J 4 : Kurmi 5.

Hargadi-Chaubé 2.

Hari-Bhangi 19.

Haridás—Jádon 2.

Haripuriya-Dhârhi 2.

*Harischandi.

Hariya-Manihâr 2.

Hariyana-Gaur.

Harjāi-Tawaif 1.

*Harjala-

Harphor-Chamar 3.

Harwariya-Kol 1.

Hasani-Sayyid 2.

Hasain-ul-HusainI-Sayyid

Hasanpuri—Bhånd : Kathak 3 : Julaha 2.

Hashimi-Sayyid 2 : Shaikh

Hastinapuri-Bhat 2.

Hatâr-Bunjara 2. .

Hatheliya—Kumhar 2.

Hathgotiya-Khangar 3.

Hathichighar-Dhanuk 2.

Hatkar-Dhangar 1.

Hatthi-Kamboh 3.

Hatwâl-Gangâri.

Hatyara-Dom 1, 7, 21.

Haulaniya—Jat 12.

*Hayobans.

Hazāri—Baheliya 2 : Dhānuk

2 : Dom 8.

Hâzirpuriya-Halwâi 2.

Hela-Bhangi 21: Bhar 4:

Gûjar 6 : Jật 11.

Heri-Aheriya 1.

Heriya-Mahesri 2.

Hethjhauli-Kanphata 2.

*Hijra.

Hindiya-Banjara 12.

Hindoliya - Kathiyara 1.

Hinduaiya-Bhangi 26.

Hindubalana—Habûra 8.

Hindulya - Bâri 3.

Hirangot-Khangar 3.

Hirnotiya-Kathiyara 1.

Hiwan-Gandharb 2.

Hotri.

Hubariya—Madári 1.

Hurkha-Bhind.

*Hurkiya 7 Dom 43 : Gaddi

Hurukiya J 2 : Kathak 8 :

Koiri 2 : Tawaif 2.

Husainábádi-Sunár 7.

*Husaini-Sayyid 2.

Husrente-Nai 2.

Ilâqêband—Patwa 1. Ilha-Dhangar 2.

Illahabadi 7 Ahir 7 : Gada-Illahâbâsi J riva 2 : Halwai 2 : Koiri 2.

Imdådnagari—Halwåi 2. Imiliya—Kahår 5. Inäyati—Jådon 2. Indauriya—Balåbar 1: Halwåi 2: Joshi 5: Nat 8: Sunår 9. Indrapati—Raståogi. Irâki *Irâqi } Kalwâr 4. Islâmpuriya—Halwāi 2. Ismâilpuriya—Meo 4. Itrfarosh—Gandhi 1. Itrsâz—Gandhi 1.

J

Jachoriya-Sahariya 2. *Jådon Banjara 11: Jadonbansi Bhangi 20 Bihishti 1: Darxi 2 ; Kadhera : Kathak 3: Kamboh 8: Kanjar 5 Kurmi 6; Meo 4; Mochi 3 : Nat 8 : Tambeli 2. Jadua-Kurmi 6. Jaduar-Habura 3. Jadubans) Ahîr 5: Barai Jadubansi J 3: Bhangi 20: Bhoksa 4: Chhîpi 3: Dalera 2 : Ghosi 1 : Jádon 4. J'afari-Sayyid 2 : Shaikh 2. Jaga-Bhat 3, 7. Jagarhar-Manihar 2. Jagatpuriya—Halwai 2. Jagawa-Bhit 4. Jagbasa-Gandhi 1. Jagiya-Chamar 3. Jagjadon-Bharbhûnja 1. Jagneri-Sayyid 6. Jagu-Mahesri 2. Jaimini-Agarwâla 1. Jaini-Chhipi 2.

*Jais-Kadhera. Jaisari ka Bhatra-Bhat 4. *Jaiswar Barai 3 : Bar-Jaiswâra J hai 2 : Beriya 3 : Bhangi 20: Bhat 2 : Bhatti 4: Bhil Chamfir 4: Darzi Dhobi 2: Golapürab 3: Kalifir 5: Kalwar 4: Kanjar 5: Kewat Khilgi 2: Kharadi Koiri 2 : Kori 2 : Kunjra 2 : Kurmi 5 : Lodha 2 : Manihar 2: Mochi 3: Musahar 10, 11: Nat 8: Pági 8 : Sunār 9 : Tamboli 2 : Teli 3. Jaitha-Majhwar 3. Jaithariya-Bhuinbar 11. Jaiwar-Maithila 2. Jajapuriya-Halwai 2. Jajahutiya-Jhijhotiya. Jakhar-Jat 15. Jálak-Mallah 1. Jalal-Bhoksa 4. *Jalali-Dhaniya 4 : Sayyid 2.

Jalaliya-Dhanuk 2. Jalálpuriya-Darzi 2. Khág; 2. Jalchhatri-Dhobi 2 : Mallah Jalesariya - Barhai 2 : Sunār 9. Jaliyan-Kahar 6. Jalkhatri-Bhathiyara 2. Jallad-Dom 1, 7, 21 : Kanjar 3, 5. Jalpachhar-Dhohi 2. Jalwar-Bhoksa 4. Jamaduva-Chaubê 2. Jamalpuriya—Bhangi 20 J amnapâri-Bhangi 20: Dharhi 2: Kasem Kharadi 2 : Tamboli 2. Janakpuri-Bhangi 20: Halwai 2. Janeudhāri—Barhai 2. Jangall-Beriya 3: Kathak 3: Musahar 10. *Jangam. *Janghara (Barbai 2. Janghariya (Bhangi 21 : Bihishti 1 : Tawaif 6. Janghra-Barhai 2. Jangria-Bhat 3. *Jangra. Janjariya-Ahîr 5. Janta-Ghasiya 2. Janwar-Beriya 3 : Chamar 3 : Darzi 2 : Dhangar 2 : Meo 4 : Mochi 3 : Tamboli Jaraliya-Sunkar 1. Jarant-Kharot.

Jariya-Gurkha: Kisan 1: Kumi 6 : Mallah 3. Jaroha Jaroyan Bhand. Jarrah-Nai 6. Jarseth-Thathers 3. Jaruhâr-Kurmi 5. Jarwariya-Ahir 5. Jasaundhi-Bhật 4. Jasawat-Jadon 2. Jasnubali-Bhangi 21. Jashar-Dhipuk 2. *Jât-Banjâra 12 : Bihishti 1 : Bind 2: Dafali 2: Gaddi 2 : Mochi 3. Jatarni-Jat 19. Jati-Dabgar 1 : Dasnami. Jatlot-Chamar 4. Jatua-Chamar 4: Kori 2. Jauhari-Manihar 2. Jaunpuri) Barai 3 : Bhangi Jaunpuriya 20 : Bharbhûnja 1: Bhat 2: Gadariya 2: Halwai 2 : Kalwar 4 : Kasera 2 : Koiri 2 : Kunjra 2: Tamboli 2: Teli 3: Tháru 13. Jaypuri Gaur-Joshi 7. Jaypuriya-Halwai 2: Nat Jaysalmer-Bhatiya 6. Jebkatra-Châi 4. Jeni-Chhîpi 2. Jeorahiya-Patwa 3. Jethwant-Bind 2: Kahlr. 6. Jhaloi-Banjara 12. *Jhamaiya-Kurmi 6. Jhanjhiya-Sunar 7.

Jharkat-Mahesri 2. Jhatwatiya-Banarwar. Jhlihautiya) Kanjar 4: Teli *Jhijhotiya Jhinjhariya-Nat 37. Jhitiya-Basor 1. *Jhojha-Dafali 2. Jholiya-Lohar 4. Jhuar-Dhangar 2. Jhunjhunwâla-Mârwâri 6. Jhura-Kurmi 6. Jimichhiya-Nat 32. Jodhpuriya-Aheriya 1. Jog-Maithila 2. Jogeli-Bengali 2. *Jogi-Bhil 7: Kanjar Kingriya 2: Patua Thâru 18. Jogila-Nat 6. Jôg! Thâru-Thâru 11.

Jogiya-Bhangi 20. Jogran-Ror 1. *Johiya Joláha-Juláha. Jonkáha Arakh 3: Bhar Jonkâra 5 : Kori 2 : Jonkiya Nai 6. Jonkiyara Jonmane - Chaubé 2. Joriya-Kori 2. *Joshi-Bind 2. Jugelé-Dhanuk 2. Jugir-Dom 7. Jugud-Gaur 3. Jujhaina-Bhat 3. *Julaha-Churihar 2 : Gâra : Meo 4. Junediya-Madari 1. Juriya-Kahar 6: Kori 2: Manihar 2. "Jyotishi.

K

Kabara-Mahesri 2. Bharbhûnja 1: Kabári Káchhi 2: Kabariya) Khatîk 1: Kunjra 1. Kabirbansi > Kadhera: *Kabîrpanthi J Kori 2. Kâbuli-Nat 8. Kabûtara Kanjar S. Kabûtari Nat B. Kabûtarwâla J Tawâif 2. Kachcha-Kayasth 13. Kachhâr-Beriya 3.

*Kachhi-Baghban: Bohra 4: Hurkiya: Kadhera: Murão 2. Kachhiya—Chhipi 8. Kachhiyana-Manihir 2. Kachhlohiya-Lohar 4. Kachhmâli-Mâli 3. Kachhot—Chhipi 2. *Kachhwâha Banjara 15. Kachhwáhiya Beriya Kachhwaya Bhangi 20 : Bhat 2 : Darzi 2 : Dhanuk 2 : Gadariya 2 : Golaparab 2 : Jogi 3 : Kadhera: Kåchhi 2: Kahar 6: Kanjar 5: Kewat 2 : Koiri 2 : Kumi 5: Mallah 1: Meo 4: Mochi 3 : Muržo 2, Kachhwana-Churihar 2. Kachhwar-Kori 2: Sejwiri 1. Kachla-Thâru 12. Kachni-Banjara 12. Kadam-Chamar 3. Kadha-Kahar 6. Kadhar) *Kadhera J Kâfir—Habashi. Kahar-Chamar 8 : Tamboli 2. Kahariya-Kunira 2. Kahatwar-Bhuinhir 11. Kaho II—Kamboh 3. Kahto-Biyar 1. Kâi--Mughal 3. Kâin-Bhatiya 6. Kainswat-Plui 8. Kairâti-Barhai 2 : Kurmi 6-Kalthal-Gaur 3. Kaithela Bhànd : Dom 7. Kaithiya-Bharbhunja 1: Boriya : Dhinuk 2 : Dhobi 2 : Halwâi 2 : Kori 2 : Teli 3. Kaithla-Bhand. Kaithwans-Boriya: Pasi 8. Kaivarta-Kewat 1. Kaiyan-Bohra 1 : Chamár 4. *Kâkan-Chûrihâr 2. Kåkar-Pathån 17.

Kakara-Joshi 4.

Kakariya-Banarwar.

Kakhar-Khatri 13. Kakhera-Nat 9. Kakli-Kamboh 3. Kalabaz-Nat 6, 32. Kalâl-Traqi 1 : Kalwar 4. Kâlapaltan—Bhangi 32. Kalaphartor-Murão 2. Kalar-Kalwar 4. Kalaunjiya—Teli 3. Kalawant > Bhangi 21: Kalawata J Manihar 2. Kaldâr—'Iraqi 3. Kalesa-Meo 4. *Kalhaus-Gurobba 2. Kalka-Sansiya 2. Kalkamaliya—Bawariya 2. Kalkanaur-Habûra 5. Kalkatiya-Kunjm 2. Kallani-Mahesri 2. Kâlpi-Hurkiya. Kalsa-Bhat 4. Kalsakhi-Meo 4. Kaisi-Bansphor 2. Kalsiyān—Gūjar 6. *Kalupanthi. Kalûri—Kamboh 3. *Kalwar—Halwai 2: Tamboli Kalyanaut-Kachhwaha 2. Kalyaniya—Banarwar. Kâma-Bohra 4. Kamangar—Kadhera : Rangrez 1. Kamani-Pilsi 8. Kamar-Dom 41. Kamarha—Bhand. Kamariha-Ahir 5, 7: Kori 2 Kamariya—Ahir 5 : Keri 2. *Kamboh-Gaddi 2.

Kamboja—Kamboh 2. Kâmchor-Beriya 3. Kamdhaj-Kanphata 2. Kameladâr—Qassib. *Kamkar-Kahar 5. Kampuwala—Dhohi 2. Kamro—Majhwar 3. Kanak-Sunür 9.

Kanas-Gajar 8.

Kanaudha-Ahir 5.

Kanauj-ke-meharê-Khatri 14.

*Kanaujiya—Ahîr 10 : Barai 4: Bari 3 ; Beldar 2 ; Bhar 4 : Bharbhûnja 1 : Bhât 3 : Bihishti 1: Bind 2: Biyar Chamar 8: 1 : Boriya: Chhîpi 2: Churihar 2 Dabgar 1: Darzi 2 : Dharhi 2 : Dhobi 2 : Dusadh 5: Gaddi 2: Gandharb 2: Ghosi 1: Gurchha 2: Halwai 2 : Joshi 4 : Julaha 2 : Kâchhi 2 : Kahâr 6 : Kalwar 4 : Kandu : Kanjar 3, 5 : Kusera 2 : Kathak 3 : Khatîk I : Koiri 2 : Kori 2: Kumhar 2 : Kurmi 5 : Lobâr 4 : Mâli 8 : Manihâr 2: Mochi 3 : Murão 3 : Musahar 11: Nai 2: Nat 8: Sunăr 8 : Tamboli 2 : Teli Kanchan-Hurkiya: Nat 8: Tawâif 1.

Kanchhariya—Ahir 10. Kandera—Dhuniya.

*Kandewâl. Kandewâla, Kandiya-Bharbhûnja 1.

*Kandu Bharbhunja 1. Kandua

*Kanet.

Kanghigar-Nat 9.

Kanghiwala-Kanjar 3.

Kanha Thâkur-Kharādi 2.

*Kanhpuriya-Barai 3: Beriya 3 : Bhangi 20 : Chûrihar 2: Dalera 2 : Darzi 2 : Juliha 2 : Kadhera : Kewat 2 : Meo 4.

Kanîkê—Banjara 13. Kaniwala—Bhand.

*Kanjar—Bharbhûnja 1 : Nat 9.

Kanjriwal-Bhat 7.

Kanju—Gandhi 1.

Kankani-Mahesri 2.

Kankauriya-Ahîr b.

Kankhandi—Ját 19.

Kanmailiya—Nai 6.

Kanothi-Banjara 12.

*Kanphata-Jogi 2: Tharul 2.

Kans-Dhúsar 2.

Kantaha—Mahabrahman.

Kantak-Darzi 2.

Kanwar-Dhangar 1.

} Gångari. Kanûrî

*Kanyûri

Kapahi—Banjara 12.

Kapālika-Aghori : Kanphata 10.

Kaparchirua—Kingriya 2

Kapariya—Beriya 3: Gandhi

1 : Nat. 33.

Kapilâni—Kanphata 2.

Kapilgotri-Bhuinhar 11.

Kaprahti-Goli.

Kapri—Måli 3.

Kapriya—Bawariya 2.

Kapûr—Khatri 13.

Kapûri-Nat 7.

Kar-Dasnāmi.

Kara-Ahar 2.

Karai-Kamboh 3.

Karaihila-Sunår 9.

Karaiya-Kalwar 4.

Karan—Kâyasth 16.

Karandha—Kalwar 4.

Karas-Kamboh 3.

Karataha—Mahábráhman.

Karaul—Baheliya 2.

Karawai-Bhil 1.

Karbak-Mallah 1.

Karenawa-Bhuinhir 11

Kareya-Banjara 12.

Kargar-Habara 3.

Kargati-Majhwar 3.

Kariaha-Chero 6.

Kárigar-Hábúra 8.

Karim-Nat 9.

Kariya—Bari 8.

Kariyâm—Majhwâr.

Kariya Misra-Jhijhotiya 2.

KarJwa-Kurmi 6.

Karkhand-Sánsiya 2.

Karmai-Bhuinhar 11.

Karnáni-Mahesri 2.

*Karnâta.

Karnâtak—Beriya 3 : Kanjar

5 : Nat 6, 30.

Karni-Kamboh 3.

Karot-Luniya 3.

Karpatti-Majhwar 3.

Karpê-Majhwar 3.

Karraha-Bhand.

Karua-Bhuiyar 2.

Karyâl-Gangâri.

Kasâbka-Sejwâri 1.

Kasana—Gûjar 6.

Kasarbāni 7

*Kasarwâni J

Kasauliya—Banarwâr.

Kasauncha-Kumhar 2.

*Kasaundhan.

Kasbi-Tawaif 1.

*Rasera-Thathera 1.

Kasgar—Kumhar 2.

Kâshi—Biyâr 1.

Kâshiganhar-Thâru 13.

Kāshipuri-Nat 8.

Kāshiwāla-Beldar 2.

*Kashmîri—Beriya 3 : Bhând: Gandharb 2 : Kunjra 2 :

Nat 31 : Tawaif 1.

Kāsib-Bohra 4.

Kâsil—Agarwâla 1; Parwâl 1.

"Kâsip.

Kâsipgotra-Bind 2.

Kastora-Kumhir 2.

Agarwāla 1.

Kasyap Bhumhar 4:

Kasyapa J Kansujiya.

Kataha-Muhabrahman.

Katahriya—Basor 1.

Kataiya-Sunar 7.

Katari-Lodha 2.

Katariya—Banarwar.

Katāriya-Basor 1: Meo 4.

Kataya-Chaubé 2.

Katera—Dhuniya.

Katha-Ahîr 10.

*Kathak-Ramsiya 2.

Kathar-Kathiyara 1.

Kathariya—Dhānuk 2: Dhobi 2: Lodha 2: Thâru 13.

Kath Bais—Bais 7: Kharadi 2.

*Katheriya—Ahîr 10: Banjâra 12: Barai 3: Bhangi 20, 21: Bihishti 1: Gaur. Râjput 2.

*Kâthi.

Kathik-Kathak.

Kathiya-Ahar 2 : Bhand.

Kathiyar > Chamar 3:

Kathiyara Kurmi 5.

Katholiya—Banarwar.

Kathuar-Tamboli 2.

Kathyâr-Tamboli 2.

Katiha-Bhat 4.

Katila-Bhind.

Katiyar—Barai 4 : Kadhera : Kori 2.

Katorāha-Dusādh 5.

Katua-Katwa : Kori 2.

Katulya-Gond 2.

*Katwa.

Katwâr-Kurmi 5.

Katyâyana—Bhuinhûr 11: Kanaujiya.

Kauriya-Ahir 10.

*Kausik Agarwâla 1: Bhû-Kausika inhâr 2: Joshi 8.

Kausikiya-Bhangi 2.

Kausil-Parwal 1.

Kavasiya-Tharu 11.

Kavíráj-Bhát 4.

*Kâyasth—Bhând :Bharhûnbja 1 : Darzi 2 : Kathak 3 : Mochi 3 : Nat 8.

Kâyasthbansi—Bhangi 21.

Kâyasthwâr-Tamboli 2.

Kâzimi-Sayyid 2.

Kedara-Kanjar 4.

Keliya—Bhat 3, 4.

Kerâm-Majhwar 3.

Keutar-Nat 9.

Kevala-Gaur.

*Kewat—Bind 2: Dhârhi 2: Luniya 3: Mallâh 1, 3.

Kewatiya-Musahar 11.

Kewat ke Bhât-Bhât 4.

Kha-Bhand.

Khadiha-Musahar 10.

Khadwara-Kahar 5.

Khagar-Arakh 3 : Khangir.

*Khâgi—Bâwariya 7 : Kahâr 5 : Kisân 1, 4 : Lodha 2 : Sânsiya 2.

Khagoriha—Bhuiyar 2.

Khâha-Dhangar 2.

Khaimadoz-Darzi I.

Khairābādi—Halwāi 2:

Harjala : Julaha 2 : Meo 4.

Khairaha—Bhuiya 29:

Kharwar 2.

Khairpuriya—Kahār 6 ; Luniya 3.

*Khairwa.

Khaiyât—Darzi 1.

Khakhara—Banjara 12.

Khåkrob-Bhangi 1.

Khalil-Pathan 19.

Khalkatiya-Chamar 3.

Khalkhar Khalkhur Beriya 3,

Khalli-Ahir 5.

Khallu-Khatik 1.

Khalranga-Khatik 1.

Khalsa-Kalwar 4.

Khan-Banjara 14.

Khânagi-Tawâif 1. "Khandelwâl-Patwa 3. Khandit-Baiswar 2. Khandiya-Jat 22. *Khangar-Bohra 4 : Boriya. Khangaraut-Kachhwaha 2. Khangrela-Basor 1. Khannê-Khatri 13. Khanrawa—Patwa 3. Khanrkhâl—Hâbûra 3. Khânsat-Mahesri 2. Khânzâda-Bhâlé Sultân 3. Khapariya-Kapariya: Kingriya 2. Khapribandh-Kurmi 5. Khar) Ahir 10: Bind 1: Khare J Chero 6: Kaha, 6 : Kâyasth 7 : Khatik 1 : Patwa 3. Kharadi-Barbai 2. Kharaha-Bhangi 23. Kharagwar-Kahar 5. Kharaiha—Dhánuk 2. Kharaont-Luniya S. Kharautiya-Bhangi 21: Mallah 3. Kharchurwa-Kharwar 2. Kharébind) Beldar. Kharébindi J Dhuniya 4: Kewat 2 : Kurmi 5 : Mallâh 3 : Musahar 11. Kharêwâl-Patwa 3. Khargbansi-Lodha 2. Khargotiya-Khangar 3. Kharidâha-Kalwar 4. Khariha-Kachhi 2 : Rauniyar 2.

Khariya—Bhangi 28: Dusadh

Kharkhari—Ahir 5. Kharkhiya-Madari 1. Kharluniya-Khâgi 2. Kharmona-Kahar 6. Kharmorha-Kahar 8. *Kharot-Beldår 2 : Kewat 2. *Kharwar , Barai 3 : Bhar Kharwara [4 : Bind Darzi 2 : Kahar 5 : Kewat 2 : Musahar 10 : Patwa 3 : Tamboli 2. Kharya—Bhand. Khas-Kanet : Mallalı 3. "Khasiya-Kanet Khaspuri-Sunar 7. Khatak-Pathin 20. Khatakwâla—Tawâif 4 Khatana-Gujar 6. Khatanga-Sunar 7. Khatangiya-Ghasiya 2, Khataniya-Kanjar 3. Khatâri-Kamboh 3. Khāti-Barhai 2. Khati Bishnoi-Barhai 2. Khatik-Balahar 1: Dusadh 5 : Pási 8. Khatiya-Kori 2: Mali 3 Rådha 1. Khatkariha—Bhuiyar 2, Khatkul-Kanaujiya, *Khatri-Bhand : Bharbhûnja 1 : Kathak S : Khatik 1 : Mali 3: Manihar 2: Musahar 11: Nat 8: Rangrez 1 : Sunår 6. Khatwatiya - Banarwar. Khanna—Habura 3.

Khawani—Bhat 7. Khawar—Kahar 5. Khawas-Kurmi 6: Nai.

Khelaniya-Banarwar.

Khemka-Marwari 6.

Khemkarani-Luniya 3.

Khetgariyar-Kapariya 2.

Kheti-Bhand.

Khetwâl-Boriya.

*Khichi-Ror 1.

Khidmatiya—Arakh 3.

Khilji-Banjara 12.

Khodari-Gandharb 2.

Khohil-Parwal 1.

Khokhar > Khatik 1:

Khokhara J Banjara 12.

Khokhata—Mahesri 2.

Khokhran-Khatri 13.

Kholi-Bhangi 20.

Khon-Thâru 12.

Khoro-Ahir 5.

Khosiya-Ahîr 5.

Khubar-Gujar 6.

Khumbani-Kachhwaha 2.

Khumbawat-Kachhwaha 2.

Khun-Thâru 18.

Khunkhuniya—Ahîr 5.

Khuntait-Bhar 5.

Khuntkarha-Nat 38.

Khurasani-Bihishtil: Hal-wai 2 : Shaikh 2.

Khurankh-Dhångar 1.

Khushbûsaz-Gandhi 1.

Khushhâliya-Nat 30.

Khusiya-Tharu 12.

Khutant-Bhar 4.

Khutel-Jat 21.

Khutkara-Nat 36.

Khwaja-Hijra 2.

Khwaja Mahar-Dhuniya 4.

Khwaja Mansûri-Dhoniya 4 : Nat 8.

Khwaja Miyan-Nat 8.

Muhammadl-Khwaja Dhuniya 4.

Khwaja Sarai-Dhuniya 4: Hijra 2.

Khwajazad-Hijra 2.

Khyâliya-Mahesri 2.

Kichar-Kāchhi 2.

Kidwai-Shaikh 2.

Kingariya Dharhi 1: Nat 9.

*Kingriya

Kinnarami-Aghori.

*Kinwar-Bhangi 20 : Bhan 4 : Bhuinhar 11.

Kira-Kabar 5.

*Kirar.

Kiratâ—Ahîr 3.

Kiri-Banjara 12.

Kirtaniya—Gaur 2.

Kirtiya-Bhangi 26.

*Kisan-Boriya.

Kishnaut-Ahir 5, 10.

Kistwar-Bhainhar 11.

Kith-Sunar 7.

Koáichi-Majhwar 3.

Kochar-Khatri 15.

Kodiyâra—Bâwariya 12.

Kodokhānė—Khatri 14.

Kodoriya—Sahariya 2,

Koeri-Koiri.

Kohali-Khatri 15.

Kohâr-Kumhâr 1.

Kohil-Parwal 1.

Koikopál-Gond 2.

Koilabhutal—Gond 2.

Koireriya-Baheliya 2.

"Koiri.

Koitor-Gond 2.

Koiya—Ghasiya 2.

Kokapâsi-Chamâr 3.

Kokâs—Barhai 3 : Kathiyâra 1.

Kokâsbansi-Barhāi 2.

*Kel-Chero 6.

Kolaha-Bhuinbar 11.

Kolâm-Gond 2.

Kolapuri-Kunjra 2.

Kolhaniya—Bhuînhâr 11.

Kolhâti-Bhânta : Nat 2.

Koli—Bāwariya 8 : Darzi 2 : Dom 41,42 : Julāha 2.

Kolipanwar-Jhojha 1.

Koliwâla-Dhilgar.

Koliya-Chhipi 8 : Kathak 8.

Konhâr-Kumhâr 1.

Kor-Ahir 5.

Kora—Banjāra 12, 15.

Koráku-Korwa 2.

Korâm—Gond 8 : Majhwâr 8.

Koranch-Kandu.

Korbiyâr-Bawariya 12.

Korchamra—Chamar 4 : Kadhera : Kori 2.

Korcho-Majhwar 3.

*Kori—Báwariya 7 : Chamâr 4 : Chhîpi 3 : Dhânuk 2 :

Gaddi 2 : Koiri 2 : Meo 4 :

Mochi 3 : Nat 8.

Korichhpaparband—Dom 89.

Koriya-Kewat 2.

*Kormangta-Nat 8.

*Korwa-Nat 8.

Koshta-Kori 5.

Kosi Thâru-Thâru 11.

Kota—Māli 3.

Kotáha-Bhuinhár 11.

Kothári-Mahesri 2.

Kothiwal-Bhangi 32.

Kothiha-Baheliya 2.

Kothiya—Bhangi 21: Dusadh 5.

Kotráha-Bhuinhár 11.

*Kotwar—Banjara 12: Panka 1.

Kotyál-Gangári.

Krim-Nat 9.

Kuchaniya-Dusadh 5.

Kuchbandhawa—Musahar 10.

Kuchbandhiya 7 Beriya 3.

Kuchbandiya J Kanjar 1: Luniya 3.

Kuchhila-Thâru 13.

Kudkáha-Baláhar 1.

Kujar—Dhangar 2. Kujra—Dusadh 5.

Kûkapanthi—Nânakpanthi

Kûkarkhauwa-Sunir 8.

Kulasresh ta-Kayasth 15.

Kulha-Chamar 8.

Kulhar-Khatri 15.

Kulhiya-Bhadsuriya.

Kulin-Bhat 4.

Kulpariya-Basor 1.

Kulsreshta—Kåyasth 15.

Kulwant Mallah S.

Kumbhar-Kumhar 1.

Kumbhilak-Mallah 1.

*Kumhar-Tharu 13.

Kumhra-Nái 2.

Kunbi-Kurmi 1.

Kûnchbandh Kûnchbandhiya Bânspher 2: Kan-

Kundaher—Dom 7.

Kundal—Bohra 4.

Kundera—Barhai 2: Kunera.

Kundliwâl-Sayyid 6.

*Kunera Barhai 2.

*Kunjra-Manihar 2.

Kuntel-Bhar 4.

Kupaliha-Thâru 11.

Kupendiya—Chhipi 2.

Kuppêsâz—Dabgar 1.

Kur-Ahîr 5: Korwa 1.

Kurariya—Khangar 8.

Kuri-Banjara 12.

Kuril-Chamar 4.

Kuriya-Patwa 3.

*Kurmi-Beldar 2.

Kursenya-Majhwar 3.

*Kurwar.

Kurwariya-Sahariya 2.

Kusbandhiya-Kanjar 5.

Kusha-Káchhi 2.

Kushta-Kori 2, 5.

Kusmaha-Thárn 12.

Kusmoriya-Sahariya 2,

Kûsro-Majhwar 3.

Kusumgotiya-Khangar 3,

*Kûta.

Kutaha-Bhat 4: Chere 6.

Kûtamâli-Kûta.

Kutichar-Gusain 7.

Labâna—Banjîra 2, 12.
Lachauli—Kîiyasth 13.
Laddha—Mahesri 2.
Lahariwâl—Bhât 4.
Lâhauri—Barhai 2 : Bhât 3 :
Lohâr 4 : Nat 8 : Teli 3.
Lahera—Patwa 3.
Lakara—Dhângar 2.
Lakarba—Nat 9.
Lakarha—Manihâr 2.
Lakarha—Kanjar 3.
Lakarha—Dhânuk 2.
Lakariya—Kurmi 5.
Lakariya—Kurmi 5.
Lakarkata—Barhai 1.

Lakhauna-Kahar 6.

Lakhauriya—Bhat S. Lakhautiya—Bharbhûnja 1: Mahesri 2.

*Lakhera Chürihar 1: Lakheri Manihar 2. Lakhiya

Lakhmi-Agrahari 2.

Lakhnawa | Halwâi

Lakhnawi J Harjala.

Lakshmana-Kanphata 2.

Lål-Sundr 7.

Lála-Ghosi 1.

Lâlbegi-Bhangi 1, 19:

Kanjar 5.

*Lálkhâni

Lâlkurti-Bhangi 32. Lâlman-Chamâr S. Lalwane-Khatri 14. Langotiya-Dom 7. Langra-Qalandar 3. Lapsi-Chaubé 2. Lathor-Jat 21. Laukiya Chauhân—Kalwâr Laungbarsa) Balahar Laungbasa Dhanuk 2: Laungbasta Lohar 4. "Lautamiya. Lawaniya-Sunar 7. Lilar-Ghosi 1. Lingadhåri-Jangam 3. Lingayat-Jangam 1 Litta-Dom 7, 19. Lodh) Bharbhanja *Lodha Domar : Hâbûra Lodhi) 3: Harjala: Kadhera: Kanjar 5: Kathak 3: Khagi 2: Khatri 11: Kunjra 2: Luniya 3: Thathera 3.

Lodi-Dafáli 2; Nat 8: Pathân 21. Logvarsha-Lohar 4. Lohangi-Nat 88. *Lohâr-Dom 41; Gûjar 6. Lohâr Barhai-Barhai 2. Lohat-Kurmi 6. *Lohiya-Kanjar 3 : Mahesri Lokhariya—Banarwar. Loleri-Basor 1. Loniwal-Ahir 5. Loniyan-Chamar 3. *Lorha. Lota-Barhai 2 : Lohar 4. Lundavat-Meo 4. Lungtaya-Dom 7. *Luniya-Beldar 2 : Boriya : Dângi 2 : Kadhera : Kanjar 5 : Kewat 2 : Tamboli Lurkaji-Kamboh 3.

M

Kåndu: Koiri 2: Tamboli 2: Teli 3. Madhpuriya—Dängi 2. Madhubansi—Halwäi 2. Madhupuriya—Kathak 3. Madhuriya—Bhāt 3. Madhyasreni—Bangāli. Madkul—Bhatiya 6. Madyāl—Genl 2.

20

Magadhiya \ Bansphor 1: Barai Magahi Magahiya Barhai Dhanuk 2: Bhuiya 4: Dhobi 2: Dom 7: Dusâdh 5: Kandu: Kewat 2: Koiri 2 : Lohar 4 : Luniya Sunar 9 : Nai 2: Tawaif 6. Magar-Gadariya 2 : Gurkha. Magaraha-Dhobi 2: Kalwar 4. Magariha-Banspher 2. Magarwâr-Joshi 4. Maghariya-Arakh 8: Ghosi Mahâbâdi-Halwâi 2. Mahabiriya-Teli 3. *Mahâbrâhman. Mahâduâr-Dhobi 2. *Mahajan—Banya 1 : Kalwar Mahâlodhi-Lodha 2. Mahalua-Ahir 10. Mahalwâr—Bhuiya 4. Mahapachar-Ahar 2. Mahâpâtr—Bhât 3, 4: Mahâbrahman. Mahar-Ahar 2: Kahar 5: Kumhar 2 : Lodha 2. *Maharashtra. Maharua-Ahir 10: Barai 3. Mahatiya—Kisân 1. Mahawar-Kahar 5. Mahawat-Nai 6: Nat 6, 33. Mahawati—Bansphor 2. Mahendra—Khatik 13. Maheré-Khatri 13.

"Mahesri-Kurmi 6.

Maheswari—Bhatiya Bohra 4 : Mahesri. Mahigir-Bhathiyara 5. Mahista-Beriya S. Mahobiya—Barai S: Boriya. Mahohar-Mallah 3. Mahpê-Khatri 15. Mahra-Bhoksa 5: Kabar 1. Lodha 2. *Mahror. Mahrora-Baidguar. Mahtam—Thâra 12. Mahtama-Dom 7. Mahtheh-Bhuiya 4. Mahtiya-Kol 4 : Pási 8. Mahto) Biyar 1 : Chero 6 : Mahton S Luniva Panka 1. Mahuar-Kharot Mahuari-Kathak 3. Mahul-Beldar 2 : Lohar 4 : Mahuli-Agrahari 2. Mahur-Barhai 2 : Dhûsar 2 : Kisān 1 : Kori 2 : Máli 3 : Sunar 9 : Teli 3. Mahuriya-Ledha 2. Mahwariya—Korwa 1. Maila-Ahre 5. Maini-Jat 21. Mainpuri-Bhangi 20. Mainpuri-Chauhan, Musahar 11 : Nat 8. Mainpurika Bhatra-Bhat Mainpuriwâla-Bhât 8. Mainpuriya—Beriya 3; Halwâi 2 : Kanjar 5 : Kasera Mainu-Bhadanriya.

Maipla-Ror 1.

Mair—Susår 6. Maithani—Gangåri.

*Maithila.

Maitreya-Agarwale 1.

Malwarha-Bind 1.

Majhganwiya-Bhit 4.

Majhurâya-Bhil 1.

*Majhwar.

Majnûn-Ahîr 10.

Majraut-Ahir 10.

Makhanpuriya Chuihar

2 : Kahûr 8 : Teli 3.

Makhdûmpuriya-Halwaia.

Makotri-Kamboh 3.

Makriyana-Nat 11.

Mal—Beriya 1: Kurmi 5, Mahesri 2.

Mâl-Kamboh 3.

Malaguri-Gangari.

Malak-Jat 14.

Malakâna—Malkâna.

Malakpuriya-Meo 4.

*Malang.

Malar-Nat 9, 45.

Mâlavi-Kahâr 5.

Mâlavi Gaur-Joshi 7.

Malhan-Banarwar.

*Mâli,

Malik-Domar: Kathak 3: Lohar 4.

Malikpuri-Murão 2.

*Malkana.

Malla-Sânsiya 2.

*Mallah-Bind 2: Dalera 2: Dom 42: Kadhera: Kahar 5: Kewat 2: Luniya 3.

Mâlpânrê-Mahesri 2.

Maltiya-Khangar S.

Vot. IV.

Mâlu-Mahesri 2.

Malua-Jat 19.

*Malûkdâsi.

Mâlwar-Bhangi 29.

Malwariya—Banjara 14:

Thâru 10.

Manchaura—Bhuinhar 11.

Mandaha-Tharu 13.

*Mandahar.

*Mandarkiya.

Mandavaya-Agarwâla.

Mandik-Kathak 3.

Mandniyāriya—Bāwariya 7.

Mangaiyan-Sunar 9.

Mangal-Khstri 15.

Mangali-Kathak 3.

Mangalpurlya-Halwai 2.

Mangaraha—Dhohi 2: Luniya 3.

Mangasha-Dhobi 2.

Manglauri-Bhangi 20.

Mangta-Bansphor 2: Nat

8 : Pâsi 8 : Tawâif 2.

Manho-Gandharb 2.

Manhpachhar-Ahir 10.

*Manihār-Chārihār 1.

Manihariya—Banarwar.

Manik-Sunår 7.

Manikpuri Bhangi 20:

Manikpuriha J Sansr 7.

Manipuriya—Banarwâr.

*Mânjhi—Gurkha: Majhwar

1 : Mallah I.

Mânjhi Musahara—Thâru 10.

Mansûri-Dhuniya 3.

Mantri-Mahesri 2.

Manûri—Gangâri.

Manwa-Kurmi 5.

Manwar-Kori 2.

2 0 2

Manwas-Pasi 8. Magsûdabâdi—Halwâi 2. Marada-Mahesri 2. Marai-Majhwar 3, Nat 37. Maraiya-Kenjar 3. Marâtha-Darzi 2. Marauthya-Banjara 12. Marchaha-Thâru 11. Mardaniya-Sunir 7. Mardârbatti-Hâbûra 3. Margiya-Sunkar 7. Marhotra-Khatri 13. Markam-Agariya 3. Ghasiya 2: Majhwar 3: Gond 3. Marpachi-Majhwar 3. Marsi-Gajar 6. Marudharân-Mahesri 2 Marwar-Habbra 3. *Marwari—Bhatiya 6 : Chhipi 2 : Dhobi 2 : Joshi 7: Rangrez 2. Maskår-Baheliya 2. Maskan-Musahar 2. Maskhauwa—Beldår 2. Masram-Majhwar 3. Mastnath-Kamphata 2. Matar-Dharkir 1. Matépur-Kathak 3. Mathalwan-Sunar 7. Mathapati-Kathak 3. Mathdhâri-Guslîn 7. Mathesiya-Tamboli 2. Mathesri-Kauphata 2. Mathil-Parwil 1. Mathiya—Ahir 10. Mathu-Dhobi 2. Mathur-Darzi 2 : Dhobi 2 : Kayasth 13: Kewat 2: Mali 3.

Mathurabâsi-Katlınk 3. Mathuriya-Bandi : Banjam 2 : Bari 3 : Barbai 2 : Bhangi 20, 21,: Bharbhûnja 1 : Bhát 2 : Chaubê 1 : Chhipi 2 : Darzi 2 : Dhânuk 2 : Dhobi 2. Dhuniya 4: Gaddi 2; Golapürab 3 : Julaha 2 : Kahar 6: Khagi Kumhar 2: Lohar 4: Manihar 2 : Nai 2 : Nat 8 : Tamboli 2 : Teli 3. Mathuriya Ojha-Lohfir 5. Matiyawar-Kahar 6. Mattu-Kanjar d. Mauala-Rangrez. "Mauhar. Mauhariya-Rastâogi. Maula-Jat 19. Mauliha-Lohâr 4. Mauliya-Lohar 4. Maunas-Bhar 4: Bind 2 Monas. Mazhabi—Bhangi 25. Meghlya-Mali 5: Nat 9. Meharhotra-Khatri 14. Mehra-Kumhar 2. Mehtarânpuri-Bhangi 20. Mehtariya-Halwai 2 : Kadhera: Kathak 3: Kunjra 2 *Meo. Mertwar-Chhini 2. Mowafarosh-Khatik 1: Kunjra 1. Mawar-Ahir 10 : Kurmi 6 : Murko 2. Mewara-Bawariya 12.

Mewâti-Bihishti 1: Gaddi 2: Kanjar 5: Mâli 8: Meo 1.

Milki-Shaikh 2.

Milku-Chhîpi 2.

Mina-Meo 1.

Mina Meo-Meo 1.

*Mirâsi – Dafâli 2 : Tawâif 6.
Mirdaha — Chûrihâr 2 : Nat
6.

Mirshikâr-Tawaif 2.

Mirzapuri—Bhuînhâr 11: Julâha 2: Kunjra 2: Meo 4.

Miskâr—Baheliya 2 : Tawâif 2.

Misra-Chaubė 2 : Kathak 3.

Misrikha-Halwai 2.

Mistri-Barhai 1.

Mitha-Murão 2.

Mittal-Agarwala 1.

"Mochi-Chamar S: Dahgar 1: Dom 41.

Modiya-Sunir 9.

Mohâhar-Chamâr 3.

Mohan-Lodha 2.

Mohanmûrat-Bhit 4.

Mohânw-Kathak 3.

Mokha-Gadariya 2.

Molak-Ahîr 5.

Momi-Kamboh 1.

Momîn—Dhuniya 4 : Julâha 2.

*Monas.

*Mongil.

Monkhra-Bhand.

Morel-Basor 1.

Morha-Kabár 6.

Motariya-Banarwar.

Mothi-Arakh 3 : Pási 8.

Motipurha-Thára 13.

Muasi-Korwal.

Muazzamnagariya-Joshi 4.

Muchhāri-Banjāra 12, 15.

Mudgala-Agarwala 1.

Mughal—Banjāra 12 : Bihishti 1 : Bisāti : Mughul : Nat 8.

Mughal-Bharsawa-Gára.

Mughra-Musahar 11.

*Mughul.

Mugm-Bawariya 6.

Muhammadâbâdi—Halwâi

Muhammad Hanafi—Dhuniya 4.

Muhammadi—Dhuniya 4: Gara: Julaha 2.

Mujawir-Dafâli 2.

Mujhar-Banjara 12.

Mujwar-Ahir 5.

*Mukeri—Banjára 12, 14:

Bhathiyara 2 : Bihishti 1 :

Darzi 2: Dhuniya 4: Manihar 2: Teli.

Mukhannas-Hijra

Muki-Kamboh 8.

Mukund-Jadon 2.

Mukundpuri-Bhangi 20.

Mulana-Mali 3.

Multâni-Barhai 2: Bhangi

20, 21: Gára: Juláha 2: Rangrez 1.

Multanwari-Beriya 3.

Muna-Nanakpanthi 3.

Munaharbhål-Bhil 1.

Munda—Kol 1: Nánakpanthi 8.

Munderiya-Kahar 5.

Mundhara-Mahesr 2.

Mundiya-Ahar 2.

Mungariya-Done 7.

Munna Dâsi—Apâpauthi.
Munwar—Kâchhi 2.
Murâbâdi—Halwâi 2.
Murâi—Kâchhi 2: Manihâr 2.
*Murâo—Bâghbân: Kâchhi 2Murarkha—Ahar 2, Murhâwat—Banjâra 12.
*Muriya—Mallâh 3.

Muriyana—Ahîr 10.

Muriyari—Kewat 2 : Mallah 3 : Muriya. Murli—Kamboh 3. *Musahar—Bhuiya 4 : Luuiya 3 : Tharu 12, 13. Musalli—Bhangi 1. Musalmani—Bhand: Nai 2. Musarma—Sunar 9. Mushera—Musahar 1.

N

Nabinagar kå langota-Bhát 4. Naddaf-Dhuniya 1 ; Kadhe-Nâga-Dadupanthi 2. Någar-Barbai 2 : Bohra 4 : Chamar 3 : Gujarati Brahman 10: Maithila 2. Nagarband-Dom 7. Nagarha-Dharkar 1. Nagari-Gûjar 6. Nagariha-Kalwar 4. Nagas-Agarwala 1. Nagauri-Ahar 2 : Bhit 3. Nagauwa-Ahlr 5. Nagbansi-Barai 8: Barhai 2 : Chero 6 : Tamboli 2. Nagendra-Agarwâla 1. Någgotiya-Khangår 3. Nagraniyân—Bhât 4. Nahali-Habûra 3. Nahar-Bansphor 2: Buidguilr. Nahargotiya-Khangar 3. Naharkarai-Dom 7.

*Nai-Meo 4.

Naihatha-Bais 7. Naik-Banjara 13: Tawaif 2, 3, Nálka-Tawáif 2. Naikan-Kuthak 8. Naikanpuriya-Charihar 2. Nainhan-Sunar 9. Naipāli) Halwai 2. Naipaliya Naipariya) Kurmi 6. Naiphiriya-Banarwar, "Naithana. Nakchhikna—Chamar 3. Nakhatiya—Bhand. *Nakhi. Nakhsikhana.—Khatri 14. Naktharia.—Banarwar. Naktunálk-Sunůr 7. *Na'lband. Namahrin-Gandbarb 2. Nâma sûdra—Bhangi 1. Namdawâla-Gadariya 3. Nâmdeo-Davzi 2. Namni-Gandharb 2. *Nanakpanthi.

Nânakpuri—Bhangi 20.

Nanakshahi.—Barai 8: Kadhera. Bhangi 21: Nânakpanthi. Nanauliya.—Bhuînhár 11. Nânba Bhathiyara 2. *Nânbâi Nandak.—Håbûra 3. Nandbans Banjara 12 : Nandbansi Tamboli 2. Nandê-Khatri 15. Nandiya-Jogi 8. *Nandwâni. Nanet-Dom 7. Nânpaz-Nânhâi. Nanwag-Bais 7. Não-Nãi. Nâpan—Bhuiyar 2 Naggål-Bhand. *Nagshbandi Nagshbandiya 5 Nagwi-Sayyid 2. Nara-Jadon 2. Narai-Kahar 5. Naraigana-Koiri 2. *Narauliya. Narayaniha—Bind 1. Narhanrha-Sunår 7. Nariniya—Banarwar. Nâritor-Beriya 3. Nariyarha—Agrahari 2. Narûka—Kachhwâha 2. Nasalkhāni-Barai 4. Nasaniyan—Patwa 3. Nasarkhâni-Barai 4 : Tamholi 2. *Nat-Beriya 3 : Kanjar 1, 3. Nåtak-Bånsphor 2. Nath-Dom 41.

Nathamîr—Banjâra 12.

Natharin-Mahesri 2. Nathawat-Kachhwaha 2. Nathu-Kahar 6 : Mallah 3. Natkhol-Khatri 14. Nau-Nai. Naubariya-Sunår 7. Nauchhirak—Chhipi 2. Naugiriha Sunar 7. Naugiriya *Naumuslim-Bhand : Lalkhāni 2 : Nat 8. Nauni-Ganglri. Naurangâbâdi—Halwāi 2. Naurangi—Tawaif 6. Nauratan-Bhangi 21. Nautakiya—Sunar 7. Nautiyal-Gangari. Nawab-Nat S. Nawalpurha } Tharû 11,18. Nawalpuriya J Nawandiya—Sud 2. Nawar-Kahar 5. Nayak-Jhijhotiya 2. Nayapura—Chanbê 2. Negauriya-Bhoksa 4. Negiwâla-Bengâli 2. Negpâtar-Tawaif 2. Neoriya-Basor 1: Dharkar Neta-Nat 37. Netâm—Majbwâr 8: Nat 37. Neti-Majhwar 3. Newar-Dom 41 : Gurkha. Nich-Audhiya 1. Nigoti-Chamir 4. Nihang-Aklli. Nikhâd-Gadariya 2 : Kahar 6 : Kewat 2 : Mallah 1. Nikhar-Gadariya 2.

*Nikumbh—Kamkar 2. Nilgar—Bangrez 1.

Nimâwat-Bairági 2.

*Nîmbârak—Bairdgi 4.

Nimgotiya—Khangar 3.

Nimikharak Swāmi—Bairāgi 2.

Nimkhar-Halwåi 2.

Nirambh-Dasnami.

"Niranjani.

Nirban-Ahîr 5, 10.

Nirbâni-Bhangi 21.

Nirmala-Nanakpanthi 4.

*Nirola.

Nirveriya-Dângi 2.

Nishâda-Kewat 2 : Mallâh

2

Niskhalank-Mahesri 2.

*Niyâriya—Dângi 2 : Kathak 3 : Sunâr 7.

Nizâmâbâdi-Kanjar 5.

Noiban-Kahar 6.

Nomâin-Ramaiya 2.

Nona—Chamar 3.

Nonela-Bhind.

Noriya-Kahar 5.

Nujariya-Snnar 7.

Nunera-Chamar 3.

Nuniya-Kadhera: Luniya

L

Nûrbâf—Chûrihâr 2 : Julâlea 3.

Nyakotiya-Kilchlei 2.

0

Odh-Kori'2 : Orh.

Odrain-Bandi

Oghar-Aghori 4.

Oika-Majhwar 8: Nat 37.

Oima-Majhwar 3.

Ojha—Darzi 2 : Kadhera : Lohar 4.

Ojha Gaur—Barhai 2.

Ojhyål-Gond 2.

Olku-Majhwar 3.

Ora-Ahar 2.

Orâon-Dhingar I.

Orh-Beldår 2; Dom 42;

Jhojha 1 : Kori 2 : Luniya 3.

Oswâl-Bhatiya 6.

Ote-Majhwar 3.

P

Påb-Panka 1.

Pachauri-Sejwāri 1.

Pachbhalya-Gandharb 2.

Pachhâda—Bâwariya

Gadariya 2: Ját 11:

Kahâr 5 : Sunâr 9,

Pachhâin Chhim 2 : Kasaundhan 1: Pachhainiya Pachhainwa (Khatri Pachhaiyan) Sunar 8. Pachhami-Bhoksa 1. Pachhar-Pasi 8. Pachhayanaut-Kachhwaha Pachhiwaha—Agrahari Banjāra 12 : Kasera 2: Rastâogi : Teli 3. *Pachhtoriya. Pachhwahan—Barai 8: Bharbhonja 1 : Chamār 3 : Dharhi 2 : Halwai 2 : Kalwâr 4 : Kasarwâni Kasera 2: Kathak Kewat 2 : Murão 2 : Pach kauta Lamiya 5. Pachkewata Pachpiriya—Halwii 2 : Teli 8. Pachrauliya-Joshi 4. Padal-Gond 2. Padar-Banjara 12. Padhán-Ghosi 1. Pagahiya—Dhobi 2, *Pahâri-Musahar 10.) Bâwariya7 : Dom Pahari 41: Kol Pahariya J Kumhar 2. Pahlwan-Kanjar 5 : Nat 8. Pahri-Dom 42 : Dusådh 5 : Pási S. *Pahriya—Dangi 2. Paihwar-Gadariya 2. Pajai-Kumhár 6. Pajhasiya—Chamar 3. Pakhawaji-Mirisi

Palakra-Meo 4.

Palauta-Lohir 4. Palhariya—Chhipi 2. Paliwar-Palwar. Paliya-Chanbê 1. *Palliwâl—Bhatiya 6. *Palwar-Dusadh 5; Musahar II. Pan-Panka 1. Panariha-Chero 8. Panchadari-Kanaujiya Panchmakâri-Ojha 2. Panchambar—'Iraqi 3. Panchapiriha—Bind 1. Panchauli-Kayasth 18. Panchhiya-Nat 32. Panchlatiya-Banarwar. Pandaru-Majhwar 3. Pandobansi-Chero 6. Pandûbi Mallah 3. Panika-Panka 1. Panisap-Chhipi 2. Panjabi-Chhipi 3 : Dabga I: Darzi 2: Kanjar 5: Nat S. Panjati-Saraswata 2. Panjibaddh-Maithila 2. Panjtakya—Banjara 12. Panjzâti-Khatri 13. "Panka. *Pankhiya. Panklya.—Panka 1. Panot.—Banjára 12. Panr.-Panka 1. Pânrê.—Bhaînhār 11: Chaubé 2. Pansariya.—Barai 3. *Pant. Panth.-Pant. Pantiha.—Sarwariya 3. Panua.-Panka 1.

*Panwar-Banjara 11, 12; 15 : Bawariya 7 : Bhoksa 4 : Bihishti 1 : Chamar 8 : Darzi 2 : Dhangar Dhuniya 4: Dusadh 5: Gadariya 2: Golapûrab 3: Habara 3: Jat 19, 21: Kahar 6 : Kathak 8 : Kathi 4: Máli 3: Manihár 2: Nat 8. Panwâri—Bhangi 21. Panwariya-Barsi S. Papankh-Kanphata 2. *Parahiya. *Paramhansa. Paramtari-Luniya 8. Parasara-Bhatiya 5: Bhuînhâr 11 : Joshi 4. Parasbâdi-Nat 87. Parasiya—Bhuinhar 11. Parasrâmi-Boriya : Pâsi 8, Paraswân-Agariya 3. Parauniya-Basor 1. Parchhatti-Dom 39. *Pardesi-Kadhera. Paretiya-Barbai 2, Parhalya-Parahiya. Pari-Dasnámi. Paribals Chhatri-Kasera "Parihar. Parikha-Gaur 3. Parinmalot-Kachhwaha 2. Pariya-Chhipi 2 : Dângi 2. Parnâmi-Kichhi 2 : Teli 3. Parodiya-Kumhár 2. Parsaniya-Khangar 3. Parsariya-Bais 7. Parsotiya) Julaha 1:

Parsutiya J Kori 12.

Partani-Mahesri 2. Partiya—Bhoksa 4. Pârvata—Dasnâmi. *Parwal | Mahesri 2. Parwar | *Pâsi-Baheliya 2 : Boriya : Dusadh 5. Pasiwan.—Pasi 9. Pasiya-Baheliya 2. Paskauta) Kahar 8 Lu-Paskewata J niya 3. Pasmangta-Pasi 8. Passi-Pasi 1. *Patait-Bhar 5. Patanwar-Kurmi 5. Pâtar-Tswaif 1. *Patâri. Patariha-Kâohli 2 : Kurmi 5 : Lodha 2. Patariya Jhijhotiya 2 : Kisan 1 : Tawaif 1. Pataun-Bhar 4. Patbandhi-Kharwar 2. Pâtha-Bhát 4. Påthak-Ahîr 5: Bhuinhar 11: Chaubé 2: Dhobi 2: Jhijhotiya 2. Pathân-Banjâra 12: Bhând : Bihishti 1: Dhuniya 4: Gaddi 2 : Ghosi 1 : Hijra 2: Jhojha 1: Julaha 2: Nat S: Rangrez 1. Pathrauta-Bhangi 24. Patiwan—Bhar 5. Patlé-Kapariya 2. Patolbans-Bhar 4. Patra-Dangi 2 : Kori 2. Patsariya-Bais 7: Banarwar.

Partâbgârhi—Barai 4.

Pattari-Kanjar 4. Pattariha-Bâri 5. Pattharaha-Bhangi 23, Patthargoti-Bhangi 21: Chamar 4. Patthariha-Kurmi 5. Pattharkat-Kanjar 35. Pattharphor—Bhangi 19. Pattharwar-Bhangi 21. Patua-Bhånd : Patwa. Pâtur-Tawaif 1. Paturiya-Beriya 3: Hurkiya: Kathak 3: Nat 8: Tawaif 1. "Patwa. Pâuhâri. Pawalé-Majhwar 3. Pâwanriya } Pâwariya } Dhàrhi 1 Payâgwâr-Agrahari 2. Payasi Misr-Bhuinbar 11. Pemaniyan-Mali 3. Pesadeli-Dom 7. Phagil—Palwar 1. Phanké-Sunär 7. Phanswar-Kanjar 5. Pharli-Habara 3. Phokha-Jat 21. Phuhihara-Barai 4. Phûl-Sunar 7. Phûl-mâll-Mâli 8 : Saint. Phulmati-Murão 3. Phûl-panwâr—Bhangi 21. Phûl-sâhib-Udâai 2. Phûl-singhiya-Gadariya 2 Phulwariya-Bhat 4. Pichhauriha-Dhânuk 2. Pihâna ka Tândan-Khatri 14. Pihâniwâl-Bhật 4.

Pipalayan-Gaur 4. Piparâha-Barwâr 2. Pipariha) Bhất 4. Pipariya S Khangar 3. Pîrzâda-Nâi 2 : Sayyid 2 : Shaikh 2. Pitarhanda—Bhând. Pitarpuri—Bhật 4. Piyazi-Kachhi 2. Poiya-Majhwar 3. "Pokharna. Pomår-Gûjar 6. Portê - Majhwar 3. Posam-Gond 3: Majhwar *Potgar. Pradhan-Ghosi 1: Kharwar 2. Pragwar-Agrahari 2. *Prannathi. Prayagaha) Gangaputra 2. Prayagwal J Koiri 2. Pundelot-Meo 4. *Pundîr-Gårs : Kadhera : Kumhar 2 : Sansiya 2. Pundpaliya—Mahesri 2. Puniya-Kāchhi 2 Purâbi Agrahari Pûraba-Baheliya 2; Balábyia bar 1 : Banjara 14: Purbiha Barhai 2: Basor Purbiya 1: Beldar 2: Bhand : Bharbhanja 1 : Bhoksa 1 : Chamar 4: Chhîpi 3: Charibar 2 : Dhuniya 4 : Dhobi 2 : Gaddi 2 : Ghosi 1 : Halwâi 2 : Hurkiya : Julaha 2: Kachhi Kalwar: 4 Kasarwani 1:

Kasaundhan 1: Kasera 2:
Kathak 3: Khatri 15;
Koiri 2: Kumhār 2:
Kunjra 2: Lodha 2:
Lohār 4: Manihār 2:
Murāo 2: Musahar 11: Nāi
2: Rastāogi: Sunār 7,
8: Thāru 10.

Purhiya—Sunfir 7.

Puri—Dasnāmi; Khatri 15.

Puriya—Banarwār.

Purkela—Majhwār 3.

*Purohit.

*Purwāl } Banarwār;

Purwār } Bhuīnhār 11.

Qâdirî Qadiriya } Sayyid 2.

"Qala'igar.

*Qalandar—Kanjar 1. Manihar 2.

Rabisi-Gandharb 2.

Ráể Badhúcha

Råê Balaya

*Qassâb.) Qasâi. Î Q

Qawwâl—Bhând.
Qazalbāsh—Mughul 2.
Pathân 18.
Qāzipuriya—Sunār 7.
Qurafshi—Bihishti 1.
Dafāli 2: 'Irāqi 8;

Rangrez 1 : Shaikh 2.

R

Râchhband—Kanjar 3.

*Râdha

*Râdha-swāmi.

*Râdha-swāmi.

*Râdha-vallabhi.

Râdi—Ramaiya 2.

Râê—Bhât 3: Bhuiyâr 2:

Gadariya 2: Kalwâr 4:

Ramaiya 2.

Râê Anghar

Râê Asar

Bhatiyas.

Rãê Bhudariya
Rãê Bibar
Rãê Bora
Rãê Chamuja
Rãê Chandan
Rãê Daiya
Rãê Danda
Rãêdās—Bhar 4: Kadhera.
Rãêdāsi—Chamár 4.
Rãê Degchanda
Rãê Dhadhâ!
Rãê Dhadhâr
Rãê Dhaga

Råe Dhakkar Råê Dhara Râê Dhavan Rãê Dhiran Râê Dutaya Râê Gagla Râe Gujariya Råê Ghaga Râê Gugalgandhi Râê Gurugulâb Råë Hariya Râê Jabba Råé Jagta Rãê Jaydhan Rãê Jiva Râê Jiyala Râê Jujargandhi Râê Kajariya Râé Kandhiya Råë Kapûr Råê Karangona Râê Kartari Råë Khiyara Råê Korhaiya Rãe Koya Râê Kukanr Rãô Lakhanbanta Râê Maidaya Rãô Malan Råë Mochha Râé Mogaya Råê Mota Rãe Multâni Rác Nacgandhi Rãê Nagobabla Rãê Nisat Rãê Padamshi Rãe Palija Rãê Panchal Råê Panchloriya basiya 6.

Râê Paregndhi Rãé Parijiya Rāē Pawar Rãe Phurasgandhi Råé Povar Râê Praima Rãe Rāja Råê Ramaiya Rãe Rariya Råê Rika Bhatiya 5. Råå Saraki Ráé Sijbalta Râê Sodhiya Rãê Soni Rãã Suara Rãe Suphla Rãe Sûrya Råe Tambol Rãe Thula Råê Udesi Rãe Ved Ráewari-Rahwári. Rafki-Triqi 3. Rafugar-Darzi 1. Raghubansi-Ahir 10: Baheliya 2 : Beriya 3 : Darzi 2: Joshi 4: Kamboh 3: Khagi 2 : Kathak 3 : Meo 4: Musahar II: Tamboli 2 : Thára 13. Raghuwal-Gond 2. Ragreti-Nanakpanthi 4. Raha-Banjara 12. Rahti-Bohra 1. Rahtu-Bhatiya 6. "Rahwari. *Raikwar-Bhuinhar 11: Gadariya 2 : Kahar 5 : Kan jar 6 : Kathak 3 : Khági Râin. Râj-Kadhera. Rajaipur-Kathak 3. Rajar-Dusådh 5. Rajauliya) Ahar 2 : Ahîr 5 : Bhangi 21: Rajauriya J Halwai 2: Khatik 1: Sahariya 2. Rajāwat-Kachhwāha 2, Râjbansi-Ahîr 10: Barai 3: Bhoksa 4: Kanjar 5. Råibatår-Thåru 13. Rajbhar-Bhar, 1, 4. Rajbhat-Bhat 9. Rajghatiya-Mallah 3: Sunår 7. Råj Gond-Gond 2. *Raji-Tharu 12. Rajkanya—Tawaif 5. *Râjkumâr-Kanjar 5: Chamar 3. Râ imistri—Râj. Raj Nat-Beriya 3: Nat 9. Râjpâsi-Boriya : Pāsi 8. Râjpuriya-Mâli 8. *Râjpût-Banjâra 12 : Bâwariya 7 : Beldar 2 : Bissti : Chhipi 8: Dafàli Darzi 2: Dhobi 2: Dhuniya 4 : Gâra : Ghosi 1; Golapurab 3: Jhojha 1: Joshi 4: Julaha 2: Kadhera: Kamboh 8: Kanjar 5 : Khagi 2 : Kunjra 2 : Manihâr 2 : Mochi 3 : Nat 8 : Ramaiya 2 : Tamboli 2. Rajwariya-Kol 4. Rájya-Kiráta-Rôji 2. Rakhiha-Musahar 10.

2 : Manihar 2.

Rakhpāsi-Boriya. Râki—'Iraqi 1. Râma-Bhîl 1. Ramai-Ramaiya 2. *Ramaiya. Râmanandi—Bairagi, Chamar 3 : Manihar 2. Ramâni-Kahar 5: Ramânu ja-Bairagi 2. Râmjani-Kanjar 5 : Tawkif 1. Râmnagar) Bhangi Râmnagari 5 Halwai 2. Ramasiya—Mochi 3. Râmpura) Chaubê Kumhar 2: Râmpuriya 5 Nat 8. Ramsan) Gandharb 2. Ramsi Ramtul-Sunfr 7. Râna-Abîr 10: Bhát 3: Kanphata 2 : Tharu 13. Ranaiya-Jhijhotiya 2 Randi-Nat 8 : Tawaif 1. Rângar ? Dafáli 2. *Ranghar) Rangi-'Irlqi 3. Rangiya-Chamar 3. Rangreta-Bhangi 25. *Rangrez-Meo 4. *Rângsâz-Kadhern. Râniji kâ Tândan-Khatri 14. Rånipari-Ramsiya 2. Ránki-Trági 1 : Kalwár 4. Râo-Bais 7 : Kanet. Râontra-Jadon 2. Râra-Kanjar 3. Rårh—Kurmi 5.

Rârhi-Bangâli. Râsdhâri-Tawâif 1. Râsmel—Basor 1. *Rastaogi } Sunar 6. Rastâugi), Rasûlpuriya—Halwâi 2. Ratanjât—Arakh 3. Ratha-Patwa 3. *Råthaur—Banjara 11,12,15: Bâwariya 12 : Bharbhûnja 1: Bhat 2: Bhoken 4: Chhîpi 3: Darzi 2: Dhuniya 4 : Gadariya 2 : Gaddi 2 : Gára : Hábûra 3 : Kanjar 5 : Kathak 3 : Khági 2 : Koiri 2 : Nai 2 : Nat 6. 8 : Ramaiya 2 : Tamboli 2 : Teli 3. Râthauriya-Gaur Rajput 2 : Meo 4. Râthi-Bhangi 21 : Gûjar 6 : Jat 19: Mahesri 2. Rattâvat-Meo 4. Rattu-Beriya 3. Ratûri-Gangâri. *Rauniyar. Rautar-Luniya 8: Tharu 12. Rautel Ahîr 10: Barai Rautela Gadariya Rauteli 2 : Kol 4 Rautiha) Baiswar 2: Ka-Rautiya) hår 6: Khangar 3 : Kol 4. Rauwa-Bhat 4. *Rawa. Râwal-Gujar 6.

Rawâni—Kahâr 5 : Kându.

Râwat-Ahîr 5 : Bais 7 : Bari 3 : Beriya 5 : Bhadauriya : Bhand: Bhangi 21: Bhil 1 : Bind 2 : Chhîpi 3 : Dhanuk 2: Dhuniya 4: Ghandharb 2 : Jat 21 : Kahår 6: Kathak 3: Kurmi 6: Lohar 4: Manihar 2: Meo 4: Musahar 11: Ráji 4 : Sahariya 1 : Tamboli 2 : Tharu: 12, 13, Regwa-Manihâr 2. Rell-Chhipi 2. Renrkûta-Bharbhûnja 1. Rethi-Teli 3. Rewar-Patwa 3. Richhatiya-Jhijhotiya 2. Rikhbans-Jat 19. Rikhpuriya Manihar 2. Rishivans-Bhatiya 5. Riswi-Sayyid 2. Riwâri-Rahwâri. Rohendi-Ahîr 10. Rohilla-Pathan. Rohingar-Gadariya 2. "Rohtaki. Rolapâl—Bhangi 21. Ronida-Kahar 6. Roniyar-Ranniyar. *Ror) Jhojha 1 : Khatri Rora 13. Rotlha-Kachhi 2. Ruhela—Chhipi 3. Rukmalya—Baheliya 2. Runiya-Dom 51. Rupiya-Banarwar. Rurlha-Dhanuk 2. Ruriya-Dom 42. Rustamnagariya—Halwii2.

Sabhu-Mahesri 2. Sabrwâl-Khatri 15. Såbungar-Chûrihâr 2. Sabzwâri-Sayyid 2. Sabzfarosh Kunjra 1. Sabzifarosh (Sachân-Kurmi 5. Sadar-Bhangi 32. Sådåt-i-Bårha—Sayyid 5. *Sadgop. *Sådh-Chhîpi 2. Sadîqi—Baidguar : Bhand : Bhathiyara 2 : Bihishti 1 : Dafăli 2 : Gandhi 1 : Ghosi 1 : Iraqi 3 : Jhojha 1 : Julaha 2 : Nat 8 : Rangrez 1 : Sayyid 1 : Shaikh 2. Safed-baf-Julaha S. Sagahiya-Chamar 3: Khatile L. Sagar-Gadariya 2 : Manihâr 2. Sâgara—Dasnâmi. Sagiya-Baheliya 2. Sagwâi-Ror 1. Sahani-Khatri 15. Saharbadiya-Sunir 7. *Sahariya-Sahasri-Bhatiya 6. Sahiya-Dom 41. Sahjâd-Majhwar 8. Sah jan-Kurmi 6. Sahla-Gadariya 2. Sahmal - Gandbarb 2. Sahrāwat-Jat 16. Sahrwârdiya—Madâri 1. Salgal-Khatri 15.

Saijad-Domar. Sailiya-Gadariya 2. *Såin-Kadhera. Saina-Baser J. Saînbansi — Bais 7. Sainbhagat—Nái 2. Saingala-Agarwala 9. "Saini-Mali 3. Sainikhor-Khāgi 2. Sainthwar-Kurmi 5. Saigalgar-Lohir 3. Saithwâr-Kurmi 5 : Teli Sajhdari—Nanakpanthi 3. Saka. *Sakadwipi) Sakaldwipi 5 Sakarwar-Ahir 10 : Basor 1 : Bhat 2 : Bhangi 20 : Bhuînbar 11 : Chamir 4 : Chhipi 3 : Darzi 2 : Dhobi 2 : Jat 21 : Kori 2: Kurmi 6: Mochi 3: Nat 8 : Sunar 9. Sakatiya-Koiri 2. Sakauriya—Kachhi 2. "Saknyâni. Sakoriya-Kathiyara 1. Saksena-Bharbhûnja 9. Gaddi 2 : Halwai 2 : Joshi 4 : Kachhi 2 : Kad hera: Kanjar 5: Kayasth 9 : Kiskn I : Koiri 2 : Lodha 2 : Mochi 3 : Murão 8. Sakt. } Chamar 8 ; Kachhi Säkta f 2 : Kahor 6 : Murão 5.

Salâm-Majhwâr 3.

Salim-shâhi-Bhathiyara 2.

Saliyali-Gandharb 2.

Saloriya-Kāchhi 2.

Solotari-Na'lband 2.

Samaiya-Dom 28.

Samâna-Kurmi 6.

Samand-Dom 7.

Samangot-Baser 1.

Samanya—Jangam 2.

Samariha—Rauniyar.

Samariha—Ahîr ő.

Samel-Bohra 4.

Samhar-Sansiya 2.

Samri-Māli 3 : Rauniyār.

Samsoil-Kurmi 6.

Samudra—Bansphor 2.

Samudraphen-Kapariya 2.

Sana - Châubê 2 : 'Irâqi 2.

*Sanådh-Belwär: Taga 6.

Sanâdhya-Gaur.

Sanauliya—Sahariya 2.

*Sanaurhiya—Kabar 6 : Lodha 2 : Sabariya 2 : Sanadh 9.

Sanāwar-Manihar 2.

Sanbhariya—Banarwar;

Rauniyar.

Sandhani-Mahesri 2.

Sandhara-Saigalgar.

Sandhauwa-Kumi 5.

Sandil 7 Barai 3 : Bhat 2 :

Sandilya J Bhuinhār 11 : Kananjiya.

Sanganeri-Chhipi.

Sangat Såhib-Udåsi 2.

Sangeriyan-Jat 21.

Sanghâr-Sengar 4.

Sangotiya-Khangar 3.

Sâni—Bâghbân : Sâîn : Sejwâri 1.

Vol. IV.

Sanin-Sain.

"Sanjogi.

Sankarpuriya-Chûrihar 2.

Sankat Kanjar 3 : Kurmi Sankata 5 : Lumiya 3.

Sankatua)

Sankhwar—Kori 2; Kurmi 8; Lodha 2.

Sânkla-Kamboh 3.

Sankrita-Kananjiya.

*Sanny asi-Atit.

Sanpaneriya-Nat 11.

Sánpwála-Nat 8.

Sanras-Bhatiya 5.

*Sânsiya—Kadhera : Kanjar 1.

Sant-Kalwar 4.

Santâl-Kharwâr 1.

Santoriya-Ahîr 5.

Sanwala-Saiqalgar.

Sanwan-Agariya 3.

Sanwariya—Khatik 1.

Sanwat-Nat 7.

Sapahar-Bhát 3.

Sapera—Kanjar 5: Nat 6, 15.

Saptasati-Bangali.

Saqqa-Bibishti 1.

Sarai-Nat 32.

Sarâmat-Jât 21.

Saranpuriya-Kathak 3.

Sarâogi-Banya 4 : Mârwâri 6.

Saraswār-Gadariya 2.

Saraswata-Bhat 2.

Saraswati—Dasnámi : Kadhera.

Sarawat-Jat 19.

*Sarbhangi.

Sardiha-Bansphor 2.

211

Sardu-Khangar 3.

Sårhê tîn ghar—Bhât.

Sarjupâri-Arakh 3 : Barai 5

Sarkhiya-Dom 7.

Sarki Dotiwâla-Dom 44.

Sarkohar-Thara 12.

Sarmodhna-Kahår 6.

Sarmoriya-Basor 1.

Sarola-Gangari.

Sarasawa-Sahariya 2.

Sarotiya-Majhwar 3.

*Sarpakariya.

Sarpos-Bhar 4.

Sarraf-Marwari 6.

Sarwani-Nat 7.

Sarwar-Biyar 1.

Sarwariya-Bâri 3 : Barbai

2: Beldår 2: Bhangi 20:

Bhát 2 : Chamár 2 : Dángi

2 : Darzi 2 : Dhârhi 2 :

Dhobí 2: Gaddi 2: Halwái

2: Julaha 2: Kanjar 5:

Kathale 3 : Kewat 2 : Koiri

2: Kunjra 2: Manihar 2:

Musahar 11 : Nãi 2 : Sunār

Satchuliha-Dom 7.

Satgop-Sadgop.

Satkaha-Luniya 3.

*Satnâmi-Sádh 2.

Satnath-Kanphata 2.

Saurangi-Bawariya 7.

Savara-Sceri 3.

Sawandiya-Bawariya 12.

Sawant-Dom 8.

Sawar-Sejwari 1.

Sawasi-Panks 1.

Sayari-Nat 85.

*Sayyid—Bihishti 1 : Dhuniya 4 : Gaddi 2 : Gara :

Ghosi 1 : Habashi.

Sayyidpuri-Bhangi 20.

*Sejwari.

Semariya-Barai 4.

Semarwâr—Luniya 3.

Senbansiya—Bhât 4.

*Sengar Churihar 2; Gada-

Sengara riya 2; Kathak 3; Lodha 2;

Lohar 4.

Sengarwar-Khatik 1.

Seohara-Kalwar 4.

Serain-Bandi.

Sergharlotiya-Sunar 7.

Sesotiya-Ahîr 5.

Setbanda Rameswar—Bar-

hai 2.

Seth—Chamar S : Khatri 13.

Sethi-Khatri 15.

Settiyan—Banarwar.

Sethräd-Agrahari 2.

Sewara-Kalwar 4; Kingriya 2.

Shahâbâdi-Julaha 2.

Shahi Gandharb 2.

Shahimal J Gandharb s.

Shâhjahānpuriya—Halwili 2.

Shâhmansûri—Dhuniya 4.

Shahpuri-Bhand.

Shaikh - Baidguar : Banjara

12, 14; Bhánd; Bhangi

19: Bihishti 1: Bisāti: Dhuniya 4: Gaddi 2:

Gandhi 1: Gâra: Ghosi

1 : Habashi : Hijra : Trāqi

3: Jhojha 1: Julaha 2:

Nat 8: Rangrez 1.

Shaikh awat-Bhangi 21. Shaikh Haidar-Gâra. Shaikhpuriya—Churihar 2. Shaikhra—Bhangi 27. Shaknyâni-Saknyâni. Shekh-Shaikh Shenavi-Saraswata 9. Shiah-Dhuniya 4. Shikchi-Mahesri 2. Shirazi-Bhathiyara 2: Mochi 3. Shîrshâh - Bhathiyara 2. Shukl—Bhuinhar 11. Shuklbans-Barai 3. Siddh-Gaur 3. Sihor-Kalwar 4. Sihoriya-Gujarati Brahman Sikandarpuriya-Churihar 2: Sunår 9. Sikarwâl—Bargûjar 6. Sikarwar-Patwa 3. Sikatpuriya—Bhât 3. Sikhariya-Sejwari 1. Sikhrl-Gandhi 1. Sikligar-Saigalgar. Sikrauriya—Joshi 4. Silauta-Joshi 4. Silwâl-Joshi 8. Simariya Ghasiya 2. Simarloka Simli Chauhan-Banjara 12. Simmal-Kurmi 6. Simwâl-Gangâri. Sindram-Majbwar 3. Sindurâha—Chero 6. Singal-Meo 4.

Singha-Bhangi 28.

Vot. IV.

Singhâl-Agarwâl 1.

Singhaniya-Marwari 6.

Singhariya—Kâhar 5. Singiwâla-Bangāli : Kanjar Singraul Kurmi 5, 6. Singraur Singrauriya-Kachhi 2. Sinha-Ramaiva 2. Sinh Tarora-Sunar 7. Sinmar-Jat 19. Sinsiniwal Jadon: Ját 21. Sinsiniwar Siphmatua-Ramaiya 2. Siqligar-Saigalgar. Siqtiya-Madari 1. Siransiya-Sahariya 2. Siriyar—Bhangi 20. Sirkiband-Kurmi 4. Sirkiwâla-Kanjar 5. Sirmaur-Kapariya 2. "Sirnet. Sirohiwal-Bhit 4. Sirsa-Jhijhotiya 2. Sirawal-Bhangi 30 : Chamar 3. Sirso-Majhwar 3. Sisariya-Ahir 10. Sisgar-Manihar 2. Sisi-Bhuinhar 2. Sisodiya-Gahlot 1. Sital-Gundharb 2. Sitalpuriya-Chûrihar 2. Sitoliya-Ahir 5. Siubaranpota—Kachhwaha Siudas-Chamler 3. Siunârâyani-Chamâr 18. Siupuriya—Halwai 2. Siura jpuriya—Halwai 2 : Sunår 9. Siyâhmaliya-Lohûr 4. Siyarè-Ahir 10, 2 m 3 Sivârmâr-Ahar 2. Sobraniyan-Bhulphar 11. Soda-Bhangi 21 : Kanjar 3. Sodhi-Khatri 13. *Seri-Kadhera. Sohagpuriha-Baiswar 2. Sohâm-Gond 3. Sohar-Ahir 10. Soharê-Kalwar 4. Soharki-Bawariya 6. Soima-Majhwar 5. Soiri-Seeri. Solyam-Majhwar 3. Sokhwa-Barai 4. *Solankhi) Bawariya 7. Solanki Darzi 2 : Hâbûra 8. Solasinghi-Charibar 2. Somal-Gandbarb 2. Somalti-Gangari. Somâni-Mahesri 2. *Sombansi-Boriya : Kasera 2 : Kewat 2 : Khagi 2. Son-Kanjar 8. Sonach-Basor 1. Sonaklya—Jhijhotiya 2. Sonar-Sunar, Sondell Misra—Jhijhotiy 4 2 Sondi-Barhai 2.

Sonhar-Mallah 3.

Sonmukhiya—Bauarwar.

Sonwar-Bhuinhar 11,

Sonwan-Agrahari Ghasiya

*Sorabiya-Chamar 3: Kahar

6 : Kewat 2 : Mallah 3.

Sorhaniya-Bhuinhar 11.

Sosaniya-Barhai 2.

Soni-Mahesri 2.

Sonra-Kanjar 3.

2.

Soti-Chaubê 2: Jhijhotiyê 2 : Maithila 2. Sowâti-Khatri 15. Sravanriya-Gangaputra 3: Sunar 7. Sri-Gaur. Sribastab Baheliya Sribastam Bergi 3: Sribāstav Bharbhûnja 1: Chhîpi 3: Sribâtham Srivastavya Churihar 2: Dabgar 1 : Darzi 2 : Dhâlgar: Dhangar: Dhobi 2: Halwai 2 : Joshi 4 : Kanjar 1 : Kayasth 7 : Kewat 2 : Lohfir 4 : Mallah 2: Mochi 3: Nai 2: Nat 8: Tamboli 2 : Teli 3. Srinåråyani-Chamir 18. Sripat-Dabgar 1. Sri Vaishnava-Bairagi 8. Sriwar-Teli 3. Srotiya-Maithila 2. Suador-Dom 7. Suariha Kumhar 2. Suariya Subbhn-Gurchha 2. *Sûd. Sudarvans-Bhatiya 2. Sudhara-Mahesri 2. Suganāik—Nat 11. Sugawabair Sunar 7. Sugawahair Suhaniya—Tharu 12. Suidaha—Bhuiyar 2. Suiri-Sceri. Sûji-Chamar 3 : Dom 43. Sukl-Gaur 2. Suklpuriya—Chûrihêr 2.

Sothiyan—Banarwar,

Suklwâla-Gaur. Sulaimāni-Bhathiyāra Nái 2 : Shaikh 2. Sulankhi-Kadhera. Sultanaut-Kachhwaha 2. Sultanpuriya-Meo 4. Sumer-Majhwar 3. *Sunar. Sunarha-Halwai 2. Sunāri-Joshi 4. Sunāwar—Chhipi 2. Sundar-Bari 3. Sundi-Bohra 4. Sungha-Kalwar 4: Sunar 9. "Sunkar. Sunkhar-Khatik 1. Sunni-Dafáli 2: Dhuniya 4 : Juláha 2. Sûnri-Kalwar 4. Sunwan 7 Ghasiya 2: Kori Sunwani) 2 : Kurmi 2, Sûpabhagat—Bhangi 21: Domar. Supach-Dom 1. Sûpwâla-Kanjar 3.

Surahiya-Mallah 3: Sorahivs. Suraitwâl-Khatri 14. *Sûrajbans \Baheliya 2: Sûrajbansi) Chero 6: Chhîpi 2: Darzi 2: Halwai 2 : Kamboh 3 : Kanjar 5 : Kathak 3 : Kharwar 2 : Koiri 2 : Sceri 6. Sûrajpuriya—Chûrihâr 2. Suraya-Sorahiya Suri-Khatri 15. Surin-Khatri 13. Surohan-Bhuinhar 11. Sûradhwaja-Kâyasth 14. Sutaha-Sunar 7. *Suthra-shâhi-Nanakpanthi Suvarna-Barwar 2. Suyador-Balahar 1. *Swāmi Sādhu—Dádupanthî Swang-Barwar 2. Syami-Bohra 4. Syamkrishna-Sunar 9. Syampuriya-Halwai 2.

T

Tabâri—Bhoksa 4.
Tachariya—Kându.
Tafuriya—Madâri 1.
*Taga—Darzi 2.
Tageli—Bhadauriya.
Tahakhiya—Sunâr 7.
Tahala Barwâr 2 : Hâbûra
Tahla 3.
Tahelê—Dhanuk 2.

Surab - Mali 3.

Tairan—Agarwâla 1.
Taitariya—Agarwâla 1.
Tajik—Mughul 8.
Tâjpuriya—Chûrihâr 2:
Halwâi 2.
Takka—Tânk 1.
Talâm—Barwâr 2.
Tambâkûgar.
Tambakûwâla—Kunjar 2,

*Tamboli-Barai 1: Dom 41 : Juláha 2 : Kadhera. Tamkhera—Tambakûgar. Tamoli-Tamboli. Tamota-Dom 42: Kasera Tamta-Dom 41 : Kasera 2. Tanbara - Manihár 2. Tanbina-Khatik 1. Tanbuna-Chamár 3. Tanchara-Agrahari 2: Darzi 2 : Kandu : Kasera 2. Tandan-Khatri 13, 14. Tandar—Banjara 12. Tandeya—Agarwala 1. Tanganoi-Tank 1. Tânk-Barhai 2 : Bhangi 20, 21 : Chhîpi 2 : Darzi 2 : Dhangar 1 : Gaddi 2 : Kalwar 4 : Kasera 2 : Suntr 6. Tankiya-Supår 7. Tanraha-Murão 2. Tânti-Panka 1 : Patwa 3 : Sunar 7. Tantua-Chamár 4. Tapariya—Mahesri 2. Taqwi-Sayyid 2. Tarakiya-Bhand. Tarela-Patwa 3. Tárêmûk—Lohâr 3. Tarin-Pathan 24. Tarin Pathan-Banjara 12. *Tarkihar-Churihar 2. Tarkiharya-Bhangi 21. Tarkiya-Dom 7. Tarbolyi-Barbili 2. Tarmala-Kurmi 6. Tarmâli-Pasi 8. Tarwariya-Lodha 2.

Tasalha—Gadariya 2. Tasiha-Bansphor 2. Tasmabaz-Nat 50. Tauhar-Banjara 12. Tayal-Agarwala 1. "Tawaif-Beriya 3 : Nat 8. Tekbara-Gaur. Tekma-Majhwar 3. "Teli-Banjara 12 : Bangali 2 : Beriya 3 : Dom 41 : Gaddi 2 : Julaha 2 : Nat 8. Teliya-Bharbhonja 1: Sunar 7. Teliyabans-Bharbhûnja 1. Tenduhâra—Tamboli 2. Tengariya—Ahîr 5. Tenkalai-Bairagi 3. Teraha-Sunar 7. Terah-Hazar-Chero 6. Teshan-Bhangi 32. Thadu-Dhalgar. Thagwariya—Banarwar. Thail-Domar. Thakur-Beldar 2: Beriya 3 : Golapürah 3 : Kanjar 5 : Rajput 1 : Sunar 7. Tamboli 2. Thakurāhān - Kathak 3. Thakur Bais-Bhangi 20. Thakurel-Jat 22. Thakuriya-Barwar 2: Kachhi 2 : Kol 4 : Kurmi 5 : Murão 2. Thâna-Sunar 7. Thapalyal-Gangari. Thapri-Kamboh 3. Thâr-Thâru 12. Tharepara-Kahar 5. Tharjogi-Tharu 12.

Tirsuliya-Pasi 8.

Tharkari-Domar. Tharkomahra-Tharu 10. "Tharu. *Thathera-Kandu: Kasera Thavai-Raj. Thegotiya-Sahariya 2. Thengar-Gadariya 2. Thenwan-Jat 22. Thenwar-Jat 21. Thingal-Agarwala 1. Tholiya-Mali 3. Thotyal-Gond 2. Tiar-Tiyar. Tibaiya-Chaubé 2. Tiga-Dhangar 2. Tihanpuri-Sayyid 6. Tihara-Halwai 2. Tikaitganji—Halwâi 2. Tikâm-Majwar 3. Tikuliya-Kumhir 2. Tilâm-Barwar 2. Tilbhun ja-Halwii 2. Tilbhunjua-Bharbhunja 1. Tilbhurjiya-Teli 3. Tilgarh-Kamangar, Tilokbans-Hijra 2. Tilokchandi-Bais 1. Tilokchandi Bals-Nigbanni. Tilokpuriya—Halwai 2. Tilsåri-Bais 7. Tilummar-Ummar 1. Tingal-Agarwala 1. Tingar-Chamir 3. Tiratha-Dasnami. Tirgar-Kamangar. Tirhûtiya-Dusâdh 5. Tirik Dhângar 2. Tirki Tirmizi-Sayyid 2.

Tirua-Dom 44. Tirvāh-Bhuiya 4. Titar-Baniara 12. Titiha-Bhuinhar 11. Tittal-Agarwâla 1. Tivari-Bhuinhar 11 ; Chaubê 2 : Jhijhotiya 2. *Tiyar-Bhar 5: Kewat 2: Mallah 3. Todarmali—Churihar 2. Tolakiya-Gujaráti Bráhman 7. *Tomar-Baidguar: Banjara 12: Bihishti 1: Chhîpi 3 : Darzi 2 : Gaddi 2 : Ghosi 1: Gûjar 6: Jat 20: Julaha 2 : Kadhera: Kahar 6: Khagi 2: Khatik 1: Meo 4: Mochi 3: Nat 8. Tomra-Kathak 3. Topiwal-Bawariya 7. Tori-Banjara 12, Torikoriya-Koiri 2. Tosaniwâl-Mahesri 2. Totala-Mahesri 2. Tuar-Joshi 4. Tulasi-Ahfr 10. Tumariya-Lohar 4. Tumariwâl-Madâri-Nat 37. Tundal-Agarwala 1. Tunwar-Banjara 11: Bawariya 6: Bhokas 4: Tomar. *Turk-Ghosi 1: Mughal 3. Tamboli 2. Turah-Kahar 5. Turâi-Bawariya 7 : Tabâr 5. Turalha-Bhangi 21: Mallah 3.

Turkata—Kanjar 1: Nat 33.
Turkatna—Chamâr 3.
Turki—Bibishti 1.
Turkiya—Baheliya 2:
Banjâra 12: Bhangi 20:
Chamâr 3: Darzi 2:
Dhuniya 4: Gaddi 2:

Kahâr 6 : Nâi 2 : Nat 8.
Turkmân }
Bihishti 1 :
Mughul 2.
Tusaha—Thathera 3.
Tusiya—Madâri 1.
Tutaha—Sarwariya 3.

U.

Uchahri-Gadariya 2. Uchakka—Châi 4. Uchanduja—Sûd 2. *Udási-Nanakpanthi 4 Udhomaina-Gandharb 2 Ugar-Sunar 9. Ujhādon—Barhai 2, Ujharha—Bhand. Ujjain-Chamar 3: Panwar 6. *Ujjaini-Dhobi 2. Ujjainpuriya Bhangi 20, 21. Ujjainwâl Ukat-Barhai 2. Ulangwati-Majhwar 8. 'Ulwi-Sayyid 2 : Shaikh 2. *Ummar—Barai 3 : Chhîpi 3. Ummara-Chamâr 8 : Nái 2 : Teli 3. Umariya—Barhai 2 Umrån-Kurmi 5. *Unâi Unâya 5 Unch-Andhiya 1. Unchdih-Tharu 18. Unta-Gaudhi 1. Untwår-Kanjar 3. Unyal-Gangari.

Upadhya—Bhoksa 4 : Bhuinhår 11. Upal-Khatri 15. Upamanyu-Joshi 8: Kanaujiya. Uprautiya—Barhai 2, 3. Urauriya-Joshi &. Uriya—Chamar 8. Urrê-Majhwar 8 : Nat 37. Usarbarsa—Dom 7. Usarbhola-Barbai 2. Usarha-Nai 2. Usari-Kathak 3. Ushturyáni-Pathán 25. Uskari-Sayvid 2. Usmāni-Dhuniya 4: Rangrez 1: Shaikh 2. Usrehti-Kurni 6. Uthaigira—Chái 4. *Utkala. Uttam-Kurmi 8. Uttaráha-Agrahari2: Baheliya 2 : Barai 3 : Beldår 2 : Chamar 8 : Dafali 2 : Dhobi 2 : Julaha 2 : Halwai 2 : Kalwar 4; Kunjra 2: Lohar 4 : Sunar 8. Uttarasreni-Utkala 1. Uzbak-Mughul 3.

Vadakalai-Bairagi 3.

Vaidik—Bangâli.

Vaikarta-Qassab.

*Vallabhacharya-Bairagi2.

Vâlmîki—Kâyasth 12.

Vana-Dasnāmi.

Vaneli-Gadariya 2.

Vasala-Agarwilla I.

Vasishtha-Agarwala

Bhuinhar 11 : Taga 6.

Vastradhári-Dådupanthi 2.

Vatsya-Bhuinhar 11.

Vij-Khatri 15.

Virakta-Dådupanthi 2.

Vîra Saiva-Jangam 3.

Vishnuswāmi-Bairāgi 2.

Visyakarma-Lohar 4.

Waika-Majhwar 3.

Walariya-Majhwar 3.

Wazîri-Pathân 28.

Yâr Muhammad—Gâra.

Yuchi-Gdjar 1.

Yunglot-Meo 4. Yûsufzâi-Nat 8 : Pathân 27.

Z

Zadiya-Madari 1.

Zâidi-Sayyid 2.

Zangi-Iraqi 3.

SUBJECT INDEX.

A

Adhajatiya rite—Kāchhi 8.
Adoption,—Aheriya 7: Ahîr
17: Atidhiya 6: Bhuiya 9;
12: Bhuiyar 9: Biyar 6:
Chamar 10: Dusādh 10:
Ghasiya 8: 'Irāqi 5: Jāt
28: Kharwar 8: Kol 8:
Majhwar 33: Thāru 24.

After birth, disposal of—, Majhwar 35.

Aghornáth, worship of—, Lebár 11: Máli 4.

Agarsen | legend of -, Agar-Agrasen | wâla 1.

Agricultural beliefs and rites,—Golapûrab 16: Kol 23: Korwa 12: Majhwar 56.

Agwan Deva, worship of—, Bhar 6; 9: Luniya 5: Pasi 12.

Ahay Pâl, worship of-, Sahariya 7.

Ahir, worship of--, Musahar 28.

Ahorbahor rite,—Tamboli 3. Airi, worship of—, Dom 51. 'Ali, worship of—, Gandhi 2. Amar Sinh, worship of—, Ambika, worship of ___, Sunar 1d.

Goriya: Sorahiya.

Amina Devi, worship of—, Biyar 16: Dharkar 6: see Panchpir,

Amma, worship of-, Sceri

Amulets,-Aheriya 6: Kol 21. Ancestor worship,-Agariya 18: Audhiya 9 : Baiswar 4 : Bansphor 7: Basor 7: Bhangi 57 : Bhuiya 26 : Bhuiyar 14: Biyar 15: Chamar 17: Chero 15: Churihar 4: Dhangar 14: Dhanuk 6: Dharkar 6; 8: Gandhi 2: Ghasiya 17 : Jat 31 : Kanjar 15 : Khangur 6 : Kharwir 14; Kol 16; Korwa 12: Luniya 5: Majhwar 38 : Nat 28 : Parahiya 13 : Raji 8 : Sansiya 6 : Taga 8.

Angârmati Bhawâni, worship of—, Dharkâr 9.

Annaprâsana, rite of—, Baranwâl 2: Brâhman 20: Gujarâti Brâhman 18, Anointing rite,—Aheriya 3: Ahîr 20: Bhar 6: Nat 23.

Anthropometry,-Introduction, Chapter II,

Aonia tree, sacred-, Aheriya
13.

Arhat, worship of-, Oswal 8. Articles for the use of the dead,—'Iraqi 10.

Atan, worship of—, Khandelwal 4. Athîlê, worship of—, Kalwâr 11 : see Hathîla, Panchpîr.

Athmāsa } rite,—Baranwâl Athwânsa 2 : Halwâi 4.

В

Båba Ibrahîm, worship of —, Thawai.

Båba Nahuk, worship of-, Gautam 8.

Bâba Sabharâm, worship of —, Gûjar 11.

Bâbhan, worship of , Khatik 7.

Bâbi Pîr, worship of-, Kurmi 12.

Baburi, worship of—, Khandelwâl 4.

Bachelors, — Introduction, VI., 14.

Bachelor's hall,—Dhangar 8 : Dom 45.

Bachhráj Kunwar, worship of—, Majhwar 42.

Badhan, worship of-, Dom. 51.

Baghaut, worship of—, Bhuiya 25 : Kol 18 : Musahar 20.

Bågheswari, worship of— Majhwår 6.

Bâghnâth, worship of—, Râji 4.

Bâhak Rishi, legend of-, Bâwariya 9. Bahirwar, worship of—, Pasi 14.

Bahura feast-, Barwar 9.

Baiga, the—, Agariya 19: Korwa 12.

Baisākhi feast,—Agariya 20. Baitāl, a demon,—Rāji 18.

Bâlaji, worship of-, Banjâra 8.

Bâlasundari, worship of—, Kanphata 5.

Balchan, worship of-, Dom 51.

Bal Râja, worship of-, Bhar 8.

Bamat, worship of-, Khatik 7.

Bamboo, worship of—, Dharkfir 1, 11 : unlucky,— Bhangi 61.

Bandê worship of—, Du-Bandî J sâdh 14: Goriya: Kându 5: Kasera 4: Pâsi 14: Soeri 9.

Bangara worship of—, Bangaram Ahir 25.

Bangle-making-Chorihar 5.

Banhiya Bir, worship of—, Dharkar 9. Banjâri, worship of—, Kalwâr 11.

Banru Bir, worship of-, Bhar 7: Chamar 17.

Bansari, worship of—, Thâru 29.

Banspati | worship of—, Bansapti | Bhar 10 : Kol 18 : Musahar 29.

Baradeo, worship of— Gond 10: Kol 17: Majhwar 39.

Barahi rite,—Agarwâla 1: Bânsphor 5.

Barahi phirâna rîte,—Agarwâia 6.

Barai, worship of—, Alieriya 11.

Baram Gusaîn, worship of-, Bhangi 60.

Barê Pîr, worship of—, Bhāt 8 : Chûrihār 4.

Barê Purukh, worship of—, Kaiwar II.

Bariyar Sah, worship of-, Majhwar 43.

Barka Itwâr feast,—Rarwir 9.

Barkē Bâba, worship of—, Musahar 21.

Barna Bhawani, worship of-, Dhangar 12.

Barun, worship of—, Mallah 7.

Barwaniya pûja,- Goriya.

Barwat, a demon,-Majhwar 40.

Basandhar chhûna rite,— Bishnoi 11. Bâwan Ganga, legend of—, Dusådh 2, Beena marriage,—Bhuiyar 10: Chero 8: Ghasiya 9: Gond 5: Introduction VI., 27: Kharwar 9: Majhwar 12: Parahiya 6.

Behiya, worship of -, Musahar 5.

Ber tree, unlucky—, Bhangi 61.

Betel, cultivation of—, Barai 7 : Tamboli 5.

Betrothal,-Kol 13.

Bhågawati, worship of—, Barwår 8: Kåndu 5: Kewat 4: Mallah 7: Nåi 4: Tarkihår 3: Thathera 6.

Bhagwân, worship of—, Ahiwâsi 6: Banjâra 18: Sânsiya 6.

Bhainsåsur, worship of-, Ghasiya 2.

Bhairava | worship of Bhairon | - Kahar

Bhaironnáth 11: Kanphata 6: Musahar 30: Nái 4: Nat 47: Pási 14: Patwa 6: Tawáif 5: Tháru 23.

Bhairwanand, worship of—, Raikwir 1.

Bhatwan, rite-Baheliya 6.

Bhausi, worship of—, Dom 51.

Bhawâni, worship of—, Baiswâr 1: Barai 6: Bâwariya 8: Bhât 8: Chamâr 17: Darzi 3: Dom 84: Gond 9: 'Irâqi 11: Kanjar 14: Khatîk 7: Kumhâr 5: Sahariya 7: Tharu 85.

Bheliya, worship of—, Dom 51.

Bhitarái) worship of—, Bhitari) Bári 6: Tamboli 4.

Bholanath, worship of—, Dom 51 : Tawaif 5.

Bhopa, a witch finder,— Bhil 7.

Bhuiyan, worship of—, Kanjar 14,

Bhûmiya, worship of—, Dângi 11 : Golapûrab 12 : Kâchhi 8 : Pâsi 14 : Ramaiya 7.

Bhûmsen, worship of-, Plai 14.

Bibi Fâtima, worship of—, Luniya 5.

Bibiha Deva] worship of—, Bibiha Devi] Bāri 6 : Barhai

Bidur Bhagat, legend of—, Luniya 2.

Bihâi rite-, Kanjar 11.

Bihâl mâta, worship of-, Lohâr 6.

Bihi, worship of—, Lohar 4. Birahi, worship of—,

Káchhi 8

Bird catching,-Baheliya 10.

Birmha Deva, worship of--, Kol S.

Birnath, worship of-, Ahir 25. Birth ceremonies, passim. Birth flends,—Kel 12.

Birtiha worship of—,
Birtiya Ahîr 23 : Bâri 6 :
Bhar 7 : Bhât 8 : Chamâr
17 : Dharkâr 9 : Kahâr 11 :
Khatîk 7 : Mallâh 7.

Bisari, worship of-, Kāchhi 8.

Blacksmiths, wandering-, Lobar 8.

Blood-covenant, Dharkar 7: Kol 13,

Blood, dread of—, Bhangi 54: Bhuiyar 6.

Boat, worship of-, Kewat

Boundaries, god of—, Ghasiya 18.

Boys dressing as women,— Khatik 5.

Brahm, worship of—, Khatik 7 : Majhwar 47.

Brahma Deota, worship of—, Kalwar 11.

Brahman Deva, worship of-, Khatik 7.

Brahm Gusain 7 worship

Brahma Gusāin of—, Kāchhi 8 : Tamboli 4.

Bride, purchase of—, Agariya 7: Basor 3: Bânsphor 4: Bhuiya 6: Chamâr 7: Chero 8: Dhângar 6:

Dharkar 3: Dom 25:

Hâbûrs 4: Introduction

VI., 28: Kapariya 5:

Kharwar 5: Khatik 2:

Kol 18: Korwa 5:

Maithila 3: Majhwar 15, 24: Nat 22: Tharu 16.

Bride-price, refund of-, Kol 7.

Buddhi Prasadi, worship of—, Bhangi 60.

Bûrha Bâba, worship of—, Abeziya 11. Bûrha Deo, worship of—, Majhwâr 6.

Bûrhi mâi 3 worship of-, Bûrhi mâta 3 Nat 48, 47.

Burial rites,-passim.

Burial, position in—, Majhwar 87: rules of—, Nat 17.

C

Camel-breeding,—Rahwâri. Cane work,—Dom 89.

Caste, origin of—, Introduction Chapter I.

Châmar
Châmara
Chamar Devi
Chamar Devi
Chamar Devi

11 : Chamar 17 : Chhipi 5 : Dhuniya 2 : Gadariya 8 : Gûjar 11 : Kāchhi 8.

Chamar chathiya, feast of—, Agarwâla 5.

Chamariya, worship of—, Kumbar 5.

Chain worship,—Banarwar: Gond 10: Majhwar 47.

Châmunda Devi, worship of—, Golapûrab 12: Jât 31: Kahir 13.

Chanda Kartal, worship of—, Bharbhûnja 3.

Chândika, worship of—, Thâru 82.

Chand Sinh, worship of-, Goriya. Charan ka pāhul rite—, Nānakpanthi 3.

Chaumu, worship of-, Dom 51.

Chausathi worship of , Chausati Kandu 5:

Kalwar 11.

Chawan, worship of—. Khandelwal 4.

Chhal, worship of-, Raji 10.

Chhamāsa rite, - Audhiya 5.

Chhath Bāba } worship of-, Dusidh 14, 16: Ghasiya 18.

Chhathi rite, - Majhwar 85.

Chhurmal, worship of— Dom 51.

Children, & deities of—, Lodha 6.

Chithariya Bîr, worship of —, Kol 18.

Chitragupta, legend of—, Kâyasth 4. Cholera, exorcism of—, Korwa 19.

Circumcision,—'Iraqi 8.

Cities, tribal names derived from—, Introduction IV., 2.

Cohabitation restricted,— Bhar 7: Bhuiyar 12.

Communal marriage,—Beriya 3: Dom 46: Introduction VI., I: Thârn 15: Tiyar.

Confarreatio rite—Agariya 8: Aheriya 8: Ahir 22: Baiswâr 3: Introduction VI., 30: Kanjar 10: Kol 14: Majhwar 10, 22: Mallâh 4: Musahar 18: Sahariya 8.

Consummation immediate, of marriage—, Ahir 21: Bänsphor 6: Dharkar 7: Kanjar 10: Kol 14: also see Kohabar.

Contemptuous tribal titles-, Introduction IV., II.

Cook-house, respect for-, Majhwar 39.

Corpse, articles left with—, Majhwar 37: watching of—, Kharwar 13.

Cotton tree, sacred—, Dharkâr 6 : Dom 29 : Thâru 29. Council, tribal—, Agariya 4 : Aheriya 3: Ahîr 14: Ahiwâsî 3: Audhiya 3: Baheliya 3: Baiswâr 2: Bânsphor 3: Bhangî 32: Bhar
5: Bhuiya 5: Bhuiyâr 5:
Bind 3: Biyâr 2: Chamâr
6: Dângî 3: Dhângar 5:
Dharkâr 2: Dom 24: Dusâdh 5: Ghasiya 5:
Jât 25: Kâchhi 3: Kahâr
7: Kalwâr 6: Kapariya 4:
Kharwâr 4: Koiri 3: Kol

Kharwar 4: Koiri 3: Kol 5: Korwa 4: Majhwar 9: Nat 12. Couvade,—Agariya 15:

Baheliya 5 : Chamar 9 : Majhwar 36.

Cow, respect for—, Gindauriya: Golapürab 12: Jāt 31.

Oremation ground, worship of-, Mallah 7.

Crime, methods of—, Aheriya 15: Andhiya 12: Badhak 2, 3: Banjára 9, 20: Barwár 13, 15: Bāwariya 12: Beriya 7: Biloch 4: Dalera 4: Dom 9: Gájar 12: Hábůra 12: Kapariya 11: Khangár 8: Qalandar 4: Sahariya 8: Sanaurhiya: Sânsiya 9.

Crows, eating food by-, Bansphor 9.

L

Dahya cultivation,—Bhniyâr 22 : Majhwâr 6,4 : Râji 14. Daitya, worship of— Musahar 28. Dal, an Ahîr hero—, Ahîr 8.

Dance, of males disguised as women,—Chamâr 12:
tribal—, Kharwâr 17:
Majhwâr 44: Thâra 45.

Dang Diwâli, feast,—Ahîr 26. Danteswari, worship of—, Ahîr 25.

Darya Khân, legend of—, Meo 1.

Dashtaun, rite,-Aberiya 6.

Dâûd, the Saint, Saiqalgar 1. Dâûji, worship of—, Ahiwasi

6: Hâbûra 8: Jât 31. Dayâl Sinh, worship of—, Goriya, Death rites, passim.

Demoniacal possession,— Bhar 10,

Demonology,—Chamar 24: Dhangar 14: Dom 83: Golaparab 14: Kachhi 8: Kanjar 17.

Deohâr worship,—Dom 34: Majhwâr 39: Thâru 34: see Dih.

Deonâth, worship of-, Dharkâr 9.

Deota, worship of—, Kanjar 15.

Depilation-Kol 2.

Devi, worship of—, Aheriya 11: Ahîr 23: Andhiya 10, Baiswâr 5: Bâjgi 7: Bânsphor 8: Barhai 4: Barwâr 8: Beriya, 6: Bharbhânja 8: Bhât 8, Bhîl 14: Bhot 5: Chamâr 17: Chero 13: Chhîpi 5: Dhânuk 7: Dharkâr 9: Dhuniya 3: Gin-Vol. IV. dauriya: Gurchha 5: Hābūra 10: Khairwa 6: Khatīk 7: Kisân 3: Kumhār 5: Kurmi 12: Lodha 5: Māli 4: Orh 3: Rādha 1: Rahwāri 3: Rāji 9: Ramaiya 7: Sunkar 2: Tawāif 5.

Dhamin Deva, worship of—, Kanjar 15.

Dhappu Dhâm, legend of—, Janghāra 1.

Dharchandi—worship of—, Tharu 83.

Dharm Sinh, worship of-, Jat 81.

Dharti mâta, worship of—,
Bhuiya 21: Bhuiyâr 16:
Biyâr 16: Dusâdh 17:
Kharwâr 15: Koiri 4:
Panka 15: Parahiya 14:
and see Earth worship.

Dhyan Das, worship of-, Patwa 6.

Digging spud,-Korwa 14.

Dih, worship of—, Bargah, 3, Bhuiya 21: Chero 13: Kharwar 15: Kol 17: Korwa 12: Kumhar 5: Majhwar39: Mal 2: Mallah 7: Musahar 28: Parahiya 14.

Diksha, rite,—Dikshit Brahman.

Disease, exorcism of—, Beriya 7: demoniacal theory of—, Kharwar 18.

Divorce—Agariya 9 : Baheliya 4 : Baiswâr 2 : Bhangi 52 : Bhuiya 7 : Bhuiyar 7 : Biyar 4 : Chero 8 : Dângi 4 : Dhângar 6: Trâqi 3: Kharwâr 6: Khatîk 2: Kol 7: Korwa 6: Majhwâr 25: Musahar 13: Panka 4.

Dolarohana rite,—Brâhman 18.

Dowry, marriage with-, Introduction VI., 29.

Dreams-Kol 20: Majhwar 48, 54.

Drum, worship of—, Chamër 14: Kanjar 20: Kharwër 17. Dula Deo
Dulha Deo
Barhai 4: Bawariya 11:
Dharkar 9: Ghasiya 12, 18:
Gond 10: Kharwar 15: Kol
19: Kumhar 5: Majhwar
21: Musahar 28.

Durâsin, worship of,—, Dharkar 9.

Durga, worship of—, Bâmmargi 2: Kāchhi 8: Kamkar 3: Kapariya 9: Kasera 4: Lohâr 8: Nat 18: Patwa 6.

E

Earboring rite,—Baranwâl 2 : Bhar 7 : Dharkâr 5 : Ghasiya 13 : Parahiya 10.

Earth-worship,—Bhuiya 21 : Thâru 83 : see Dhartí Mãi. Eclipse demon,—Dom 15.

Eldest son, rights of-, Kol 10.

Eponymous tribal titles,— Introduction IV., 5.

Euphemism,—Kharwâr 17: Kol 23.

Evil Eye,—Baiswâr 6 : Beriya

7: Bhar 10: Bhuiya 27: Bhuiyar 20: Dangi 12: Dom 37: Golapórab 12: Håbûra 10: Kāchhi 9: Khairwa 6: Majhwar 55 Ráji 11: Thâru 22, 47.

Exogamy,—Introduction V:

—of gangs,—Kanjar 7:
origin of—,Nåi 3: Panka.
2: Sånsiya 4.

Exorcism,—Bhuiya 27: Kanjar 13.

F

Family, the,-Introduction IV., 18.

Fan, mystic use of-, Baiswar 3. Festivals,-passim.

Fetishism,—Amethiya: Banarwar: Barhai 4: Bihishti 3: Bind 7: Chhipi 5: Darzi Kandu 5 : Lohâr 11 :
 Majhwâr 47 : Tamboli 6 :
 Thâru 31 :

Field ghosts,—Dharkâr 11: Kharwâr 17: Majhwâr 17.

Field goddess,-Ghasiya 18.

Fire offering,—Agariya 19: Agnihotri 8,

First cousins, marriage of-, Majhwar 7.

Food for the dead,—Baheliya 7: Baiswâr 4: Bânsphor 7: Bhuiya 20; Bhuiyâr 14: Dhângar 11: Khatîk 6: Korwa 12: Nat 17: Pâsi 13.

Foot washing rite,—Barai 5: Baiswar 6: Kharwar 12.

Funeral feast,-Tharu 25.

G

Gâêyon kâ deota,—worship of—, Jât 81.

Gaja Dewat, worship of—, Chamar 17.

Gajpati Râê Durga, worship of-, Gautam %,

Game-catching,-Beriys 2.

Gandak, worship of— Dom 28, 31.

Gandharva marriage,-Kol

Ganesa, worship of—, Baiswar 3: Bind 7: Keiri 5: Mallah 4: Ramaiya 7.

Ganganâth, worship of-, Dom 51,

Ganges, worship of—,
Ahiwasi 6: Dafali 4:
Basor 7: Dhuniya 2:
Gindauriya: Kanjar 10:
Khatik 7: Mallah 7: Marwari 14: Radha 1.

Ganinâth, worship of—, Patwa 6.

Vor. IV.

wor- Gansâm, worship of—, Gond 10 : Kel 17 : Musaof—, har 29.

> Garar Bir, worship of-, Tharn 34.

> Garbara Devi, worship of—, Nat 31.

> Garlic, prohibited food-, Agarwâla 10.

Gauna rite,-Agarwala 6.

Gauri, worship of—, Baiswar 3: Bind 7: Kori 8.

Gauripati, worship of—, Bhat 8.

Ghantarâm, worship of-, Ahir 25.

Ghật, worship of-, Mallah 7.

Ghatol Bâba, worship of-, Mallâh 7.

Ghatoriya, worship of-, Dhobi 7: Kahar 11.

Ghaus Pîr, worship of-, Chûrihâr 4.

2 12

Ghâzi Miyân, worship of— Bhând 2: Bhangi 59: Bhathiyâra 4: Chûribâr 4: Dafâli 7: Gandhi 2: Kalwâr 11: Kathak 4: Kingriya 6: Kunjra 3: Rangrez 3: Saiqalgar 2.

Ghosts,—Agariya 21: Bhuiya 25: Biyâr 18: Dharkâr 10: Dom 37: Gond 8: Kanjar 18: Korwa 12: Majhwâr 40: Thâru 29.

Ghosts, barring of—,Aberiya 9: Baheliya 5: Basor 6: Bhangi 54: Dom 30: Majhwar 37.

Giri Rāj, worship of—, Jāt 31.

Gohet, worship of— ,Parahiya 14. Gonr, worship of—, Sahariya 7.

Goraiya, worship of—, Dhângar 12 : Goriya : Murão 3 : Sahariya 7, Gorakhnāth, worship of—, Udāsi θ.

Goril, worship of __,Dom 51.

Goswâmi, worship of—, Patwa 6.

Gûga, worship of—,Bhangi 58: Bhll 14: Jât 31: see Zâhir Dîwân.

Guninath, worship of-

Gusaîn Baba, worship of---, Baser 7.

Gyan, worship of-, Oswal 8.

Gypsies-Beriya 1 : Dom 61 : Jat 10 : Kanjar.

H

Hamsâyah, custom—, Pathan 4.

Hankwa rite-, Kalwar 9.

Hanumân, worship of—, Ahiwâsi 6: Balâi 8: Dhânuk 8: Kāndu 5: also see Mahâbîr. Hardaul

Hardaul Lâla

Hardaur Hardiha

worship

Hardiya

of—, Baheliya 8 : Banjāra 18 : Barai 6 : Bāri 6 : Bharbhûnja 3 : Chûrihêr 4 : Gond 9 : Halwêi 5 : Kahêr 11 : Kalwêr 11 : Kamkar 5 : Patwa 6 : Rastêogi 1 : Sunêr 16 : Tarkihêr 3 : Teli 5.

Harischandra, legend of—, Bhangi 8 : Dom 23 : Harischandi 1.

Hariyâli mâl Hariyâli Devi Hariyâri Devi

11: Ghasiya 18: Kol 23: Nat 28. Haru, worship of—, Dom 51. Hatadiya, worship of—, Banjara 10,

Hathila worship of-,

Kalwar 11: Nat 35: and see Panch Pir.

Hathlewa rite,—Mârwâri 12. Hazâri Sinh, worship of—, Jât 31.

Hazrat Jilâni, the Saint—, 'Irâqi 2.

Hell, theory of—Bhuiyar 16. Holi feast—Agaziya 20: Tharu 37.

Horoscopes, calculation of —, Jyotishi. Houses,-Chero 18: Thâru 41.

House worship,—Aheriya 18, Hulkimäi, worship of—, Nat 18.

Human sacrifice,—Banjāra 7: Bhuiya 26: Mahārashtra: Musahar 9: Tiyar.

Hunting, modes of—, Bāwariya 8.

Hypergamy,—Bhāt 4: Biyâr 1: Dharkâr 1: Gûjar 6: Jât 24: Jhijhotiya 2: Kharwâr 2: Khatri 14: Majhwâr 8: Nat 39: Patwa 3: Râjput 10.

Ilias, legend of—Bhangi 12 Imam Husain, worship of—, Gandhi 2.

Imâm Sâhib, worship of—, Luniya 5.

Impurity ceremonial—Golaparab 11.

Incest-Musahar 9.

Infanticide-Jat 8.

Infidelity, prenuptial—tolerated,—Kol 6. Initiation,—Agariya 16:
Agheri: Bhangi 41: Bisnoi 6: Dikhit Brāhman:
Diwāna 2: Gusālu 7:
Hābūra 8: Jangam 3, 4:
Kabirpanthi 4: Nīmhārak
2.

Inoculation,—Mali 5.
Iron manufacture,—Agariya
30.

J

Jagatdeo, worship of---, Meo 9. Jageswar, worship of-, Chamar 17. Jaina faith—Jati 2: Oswál 8.

Jâk, worship of—, Thâru 85.

Jahkhai Jakhiya
worship of—,

Aheriya 11: Balâhar 5:

Gadariya 8: Kanjar 15:

Kathiyâra 5: Lodha 5:

Toli 5.

Jâkni, worship of—, Thâru 85.

Jamhua,—A birth demon, Koiri 7: Majhwar 35. Jamhuahi Devi worship Jamuahi Devi of—, Kachhwaha 2.

Janta Deo, worship of—, Ghasiya 2,

Jarasandha, legend of-, Kahar 3.

Jata Rohini, worship of-, Majhwar 40.

Jay Sinh, worship of-, Gotiyo.

Jhakkar Shâh, a saint-Suthrashahi 2. Jhalai, worship of-, Kachh. waha 4.

Jhambaji, legend of—, Bishnoi,

Jhiwarni, worship of-, Kahar 13.

Jîwan, legend of—, Bhangi 9. Jîwan Shâh Bâba, worship of—, Basor 7.

Jiyan, worship of-, Khandelwill 4.

Jokhaiya, worship of-, Soo Jakhai.

Juâlamukhi Devi, worship of—, Beriya 6 : Kharwar 1, 15 : Nat 43.

Jungle, given as a dowry,— Bhar 10: Kanjar 7: Korwa 10.

Jus primæ noctis,—Ahîr 20: Barwâr 3: Kol 6: Introduction VI., 3.

Juthahiya Bhawani, worship of-, Dom 35.

K

Kabir, legend of—, Kori 1. Kâla Deo, worship of—, Bânsphor 8: Baheliya 8: Chamār 17.

Kâla Mehar } worship of—, Jât 81.

Kalawati Kanya, worship of-, Thathera 8.

Kalbisht worship of—,
Dom 51.

Kâle Gora, worship of—, Bhangi 60.

Kâli Bhawâni, worship of-,

Banjara 12 : Basor 7 : Bawariya S : Beriya 2, 6 :

Bhuiya 21: Gadariya 8:

Gharûk 2: Hâbûra 8: Kamkar 3: Kapariya 9: Kewat 4: Kingriya 6: Kumhâr 5: Lehâr 11: Mal 2: Mâli 4: Mallâh 7: Murâo 3: Nat 18, 47: Saiqalgar 2: Thâru 34.

Kâlika
Kâlika mãi } worship of—,
Bânsphor 8; Bhangi 31;
Bhar 9; Chôribar 4;
Dafáli 7; Darzi 3; Kalwâr 11; Thâru 32; Tawâif
5.

Kalsa, a sacred jar—, Bhuiya 16.

Kâlu Bîr, worship of—, Baheliya 5, 8.

Kâlu Deo, worship of—, Banjâra 18.

Kálu Kahár, worship of—, Kahár 11 : Kálupanthi.

Kālu Sayyid, worship of—, Bhoksa 10.

Kaluwa, worship of—, Dom 1.

Kalyâni, worship of—, Khandelwîl 4.

Kamalaji, worship of—, Goriya,

Kambira, worship of—, Pasi

Kanchhedan rite,—Brāhman 21

Kaneriya Bâba, worship of—, Khangâr 6.

Kanyadan rite,—Agarwala 6. Kara Deo, worship of—, Pasi 14. Karal, worship of—, Murão 8. Karama, a tribal dance,— Khurwar 20.

Karâr Bir, worship of-, Khatik 7.

Kârê Deo, worship of-, Bhar 10.

Kāshi Bāba, worship of-, Bind 9.

Kâshi Dâs, worship of-, Bhar 9.

Kashinath, worship of-, Ahir 24.

Katiya, worship of—, Sahariya 7.

Katyūri Rājas, worship of—, Dom 51.

Kela Devi, worship of-, Habûra S.

Ketu, worship of—, Dusadh 14: Joshi 4.

Kewal, worship of—, Goriya. Khabish, worship of—, Dom

Khair Mata, worship of-, Gond 10.

Khanta an Implement,— Khanti an Implement,— Kanjar 20 : Korwa 13,

Khappar kuchi rite,—Musahar 13.

Kharag, worship of—, Thiru 10.

Khetyår Devi, worship of—, Bheiyår 22.

Khwaja Bali, legend of-

King, selection of—, Gandharb 4. Kinnarâm, worship of—, Gandharb 4.

Kohabar rite—Kol 14: Majhwar 18.

Koila Bâba, worship of-, Goriya : Sorahiya,

Kopa Bhagat, worship of—, Kumhar 5.

Korapuri rite-Kalwar 8.

Korhaniya, worship of—, Kumhar 5.

Kori katori rite,—Dhobi 3.

Koti Râni, worship of—, Majhwar 43.

Krichchhra, rite,—Agnihotri 2.

Krishna, worship of—, Gahoi 4 : Gond 9 : Kachhwaha 5:

Lagan, rite,—Aheriya 8.

Kumhar 2 : Mahesri 3 : Sahariya 7 : Sejwari 6.

Kshetrapal, worship of—, Dom 51: Pasi 14.

Kuânwâla, worship of—, Chamâr 17: Hâbûra 6: Kâchhi 8: Lodha 5: Orh 3: Thâru 33.

Kûkarmari, worship of-, Dom 34, 37.

Kuldeo, worship of-, Luniya 5.

Kurehna, worship of-, Lohar 11: Mali 4.

Kuri dhakelwana } rite—

Dharkar 7 : Majhwar 20. Kurmundan, rite—Kol 23.

L

Lakhdâta, worshîp of-, Jât 31. Lalbeg, legend of-, Bhangi Lâlmani, worship of-, Káchhi 8. Lata Dhoba, rite,-Lohar 6 Latu, worship of-, Dom 51. Levirate, the-, Aheriya 5: Bazhai 3 : Bâri 3 : Barwar 3 : Basor 3 : Bhand 2 : Bhar 5 : Bhuiya 8 : Bhuiyar 8 : Bihishti 2 Bind 4 : Biyar 5 : Chamar 8 : Chero 8 : Dhangar 7: Dhanuk 3:

Dharkar 3: Dom 59:

Gadariya 4: Ghasiya 7:
Gōjar 8: Introduction
VI., 8—'Irāqi 4: Kahār
9: Kewat 3: Kharwār
7: Khatik 3: Kol 8:
Kori 3: Korwa 7: Kurmi
9: Luniya 4: Majhwār
24: Mallāh 5: Panka 5.

Loha, worship of-, Khandeiwal 4.

Lohâsur Devi, worship of—, Agariya 19.

Lona Chamarin, legend of—, Chamar 3.

Lorik, legend of—, Ahîr 11. Lutta, worship of—, Thâru b. M

Madain, worship of—, Kalwar 11 : Musahar 81.

Madâr Sâhib, a saint,— Beriya 6 : Dhânuk 7 : Kâchhi 8.

Mådho Båba, worship of—, Kabir 11.

Madhu worship of—, Thâru 8.

Maganpāl, worship of—, Musahar 28.

Mahâbali, worship of—, Musahar 20.

Mahâbîr, worship of—, Banazwâr: Barai 6: Bargâh 3:
Bârî 6: Bharbhûnja 3:
Barhai 4: Bhât 8: Gond
9: Kahâr 11: Kându 5:
Kasarwâni 2: Kasaundhan
3: Kewat 4: Koirî 9:
Korî 2: Kurmi 12: Lohâr
11: Luniya 5: Mallâh 7:
Murâo 3: Nâi 4: Pâsi 14:
Patwa 6: Rastâogi: Somi
9: Tamboli 4: Teli 5:
Thathera 6: and see Hanumân.

Mahâdâni, worship of—, Majhwar 41.

Mahâdeva,worship of—,Ahîr 23 : Beldâr 4 : Bharbhûnja 3 : Bhuiyâr 16 : Bind 9 : Biyâr 16 : Gandharb 8 : Ghasiya 18: Gindauriya : Gond 9: Gurchba 5 : Halwâi 5 : Jât 31 : Kamkar 8 : Kapariya 9 : Kharwar 15 : Majhwar 39 : Mallah 7 : Murao 3 : Radha 1 : Soeri 9 : Sunar 16 : Taga 8 : Teli 5.

Mahâ Kâli, worship of-, Mâli 4.

Mahâ Lakshmi, worship of -, Mallah 7.

Mahâ Saraswati, worship of -, Mallâh 7.

Maheni, legend of—, Hayobans.

Mahesa Rākshasa, worship of—, Kānbpuriya 1.

Mahton Baba-, Basor 7.

Makhdum Shah, a saint,— Bhangi 31.

Mainpât, worship of—, Patârî 1.

Mair, legend of-, Sunar 2.

Mândar Devi, worship of—, Kharwar 17.

Mangan, worship of—, Thâru 35.

Manro hilaî, rîte,—Ahîr 22. Mantri pûja—, Baiswâr 3: Halwâi 3.

Manukh Deva, worship of—, Dusådh. 14.

Marang, worship of—Goriya. Mari, worship of—, Kanjar 14.

Nat 43 : Tharu 32.

Mari masan, worship of-, Dom 87.

Mariyâi, worship of—, Banjâra 8.

Marriage, age for—,Introduction VI, 13: by capture, Bhuiya 16: Bhuiyar 13: Dusâdh 12: Gadariya 6: Ghasiya 14.———

Introduction VI.,16: Kanjar
7: Lohâr 10: Majhwâr 17:
Mârwâri 11: Musahar 15:
Nat 41: Thâru 16, 17:—
by exchange,—Barhai 3:
Bhuiya 19: Dharkâr 1:
Ghasiya 15: Introduction
VI., 26:—Kanaujiya: Meo
9: Musahar 15: Tarkibâr
2: ceremonies, passim;
run-away—, Gond 6:—Introduction VI., 25; temporary—, Tawâif 8:—time for—, Kol 6.

Masân } worship of—, Aha-Masâni } riya 11 : Dom 51 : Mallâh 7 : Orh 3.

Mâta, worship of—, Aheriya 11: Bhîl 14: Chhîpi 5: Dhuniya 2: Gond 10: Jât 31: Julâha 4: sec Sîtala.

Maternal uncle, position of-, A gariya 8: Majhwar 14

Maternity, recognition of— Majhwar 16.

Matmangar, rite,—Agariya 8: Ahîr 19: Baheliya 6: Bais' wâr 3: Bânsphor 5: Basor 5: Bhar 6: Bhuiya 15: Bind 7: Chamâr 12: Dharkûr 6 : Dhobî 3 : Dhuniya 3 : Dom 29 : 'Irâqî 9 : Kharwâr 12 : Khatîk 5 : Koirî 4 : Kol 13 : Majhwâr 19 : Musahar 14 : Panka 9.

Matriarchate, the —, Agarwâla 1: Dharkâr 8: Introduction VI., 31: Kel 7: Musahar 18: Sânsiya 4.

Maurchhat, rite ,—Dângi 11. Mayûra, the Rishi—, Bisen 1 ; Kākan : Mal.

Measuring rite,—Majhwar 20.

Mehar pûja,-Khangar 6.

Mekhāsur, worship of—, Aheriya 11.

Milk, prejudice against—, Kol 22.

Miran Sāhib } legend of—,

Kathiyāra 4:— worship of,— Chhipi 5: Dhuniya
2: Kāchhi 8: Khatik 7:
Sunār 16.

Mirga Râni, worship of-Majhwar 43.

Mitthu Bhukhiya, worship of-, Banjara 8.

Miyân Sâhib, a saint,—Aheriya 11: Baheliya 8: Banjâra 15, 18: Dhânuk 7: Kathiyâra 3: Kisân 2: Koiri 4: Lodha 7: Nâi 4: Orh 8: Păsi 14: Râdha 1, Moon worship,—Baheliya 8 : Bansphor 8.

Mother, isolation of—, Majhwir 35, Mountain god,—Dharkâr 9. Mûchak Râni, worship of—, Kharwâr 18.

Muhammad, worship of-, Luniva 5.

Mukhta, worship of—, Khandelwal 4. Mûla sânti, rite,—Brâhman 17.

Munh dikhâi, rite,—Aheriya 4: Khatik 3: Keeri 6.

Munna Das, worship of-Sunar 16.

Mûnran rite,—Brâhman 21 : Gujarâti Brâhman 19.

N

Nâdu Bir, worship of—, Bhuiya 22.

Nag, worship of—, Kol 18: Majhwar 40,

Någa Båba, worship of—, Khangår 6.

Någarsen, worship of—, Chamår 17 : Kåchhi 8.

Nâgbeli, worship of—, Bêrî 6.

Någin, worship of-, Khandelwål 4.

Nakh katáya ----

Nail cutting, rite-,

Koiri 7.

Nâmdeo, worship of—, Chhîpi 5: Dhuniya 6.

Names, Contemptuous—, Kahār 12: double—, Baheliya 9: Bhar 10: Golapūrab 12: selection of— Kol 12.

Naming of children | Nâm karm, rite | Agarwâla 1 : Korwa 9 : Mallâh 6 : Musahar 21. Nânak, worship of-, Banjâra 8: Kanjar 15, Nandi mukh sråddha,—Bamuki 2 : Bhat 6.

Nârada Muni, legend of-, Aheriya 12 : Kahâr 4.

Nara sinha, worship of—, Bari 6: Bhangi 00:

Lohar II : Māli 4 : Sahariya 7 : Tamboli 4.

Náráyan Deo, worship of—, Gond 10 : Sánsiya 6.

Nârâyana bali, rite, Andhiya 9 : Mallâh 6.

Nat, worship of—, Musahar 28.

Nathiya, worship of ,Kanjar 15.

Neg bharna, rite, Panka 9, Nihâran, rite—, Kori 3,

Niman Parihār, worship of, Babeliya 5.

Nim tree, respect for—,Golaparab 2 : Raikwar 1. Ningo.
Ningo Bâghiya worship of—, Majhwâr 6, 89.
Niyoga, the—, Introduction
VI. 8.

Nona Chamarin, legend of—, Chamar 2. Nose cutting, Kol 6. Nudity, a spell—, Chamar 2.

0

Oaths,-Agariya 26 : Ahiwasi 7 : Baheliya 9 : Baiswar 6 : Bâjgi 9: Bânsphor 9: Beriya 7: Bhangi 60: Bhar 10: Bhuiya 27: Bhuiyar 20 : Biyar 20: Dângi 12: Dharkûr 11: Dom 40, 60 : Dusadh 17 : Golapûrab 13: Hâbûra 10: Traqi 12 : Jat 32 : Kahar 12 : Kalwar 14 : Kharwar 18 : Khatik 8 : Kol 21 : Korwa 12 : Majhwar 52 : Musahar 31: Nat 47: Panka 14: Sahariya 7: Sansiya 7 : Tharu 43.

Occupational tribal titles Introduction IV., 10. Oil-mill fetish,-Teli 6. Omens,—Barwar 10: Bhuiya 27 : Bhuiyar 20 : Biyar 20 : Dom 37 : Kaharla : Kanjar 18: Kharwar 17: Kol 20 : Korwa 12 : Majhwar 50 : Musahar 31 : Rāji 11. Onions, prohibited food,-Agarwala 10. Ordeals,-Kahar 12: Kanjar 23 : Sansiya 7. Ornaments, use of-, Bhangi 61. Outsider, marriage with-Bhangi 40, Ox, worship of-, Banjara Occupation, a basis of caste, Introduction,— Chapter III.

P

10.

Pachîsi, custom of—, Khatîk 2. Pahâr Pândo, worship of—, Dharkâr 9. Pahlwân, worship of—, Kanjar 15: Musahar 20. Panchdeva, worship of—, Nânakpanthi 5. Panch mangari, rite,—Bâri 8.

Pânch Pîr, worship of-, Aheriya 11 : Ahir 23 : Banjāra 14 : Baheliya 5 : Barai 6: Bargâh 3: Barhai 4: Barwar 8 : Beldar 4 : Bhand 2 : Bhangi 58 : Bhar 9 : Bharbhûnja 3 : Bhathiyāra 4 : Bilishti 3 : Bind 1 : Chhîpi 5 : Chûrihâr 4 : Dabgar 8 : Darzi 8 : Dharkar 9 : Dhobi 7 : Dhuniya 3: Ghosi 2: Halwai 5: Julaha 4: Kahar Kalwar : 11: Kåndu: Kanjar 15: Kasarwini 2: Kasaundhan 3: Kasera 4: Koiri 9 : Kori 4 : Kumhar 5 : Kunjra 3 : Lohar 11 : Luniya 5 : Máli 4: Malláh 7 : Manihâr 1 : Pâsi 12: Patwa 6 : Qassab : Rangrez 3 : Rastâogi : Saigalgar 2 : Sorahiya: Sunar 16: Tamboli 3 : Teli 5 : Thathera C. Panchwasa, rite,-Audhiya Pânrê Bâba, worship of—, Milavi I.

Pânw pûja—Baheliya 6; Kalwâr 9.

Parachhan rite,—Baiswār 3, Parameswar, worship of—, Baujāra 15: Bhuiya 21: Dom 34: Gandhīla 3: Gurohha 5: Kapariya 9: Nat 18: Rādha 1: Sānsiya 6.

Parameswari, worship of—, Chamar 17. Parasurâma legend of—, Khatri 8.

Parbha, worship of -, Kanjar 14.

Parihâr, worship of—, Baheliya 8: Kalwâr 11.

Pârvati, worship of—, Gandharb 8: Gindanriya: Murão 3.

Pât, worship of—, Patâri 1. Paternity, admission of—, Kol 12.

Pâthana, rite,—Brâhman 22. Pathwâri Devi, worship of —, Golspûrab 2.

Peacock's feathers, influence of-, Musahar 21.

Perfumes, manufacture of —, Gandhi 3.

Personal tribal titles,—Introduction IV., II.

Petmanganiya rite,—Kanjar 6.

Phagua feast-Agariya 20: see Holi.

PhûlmatiBhawâni, worship of—, Barbai 4: Bhar 9: Kalwâr 11: Kol 18: Musahar 20: Nâi 4: Pâsi 12: Sunâr 16.

Pickaxe, worship of-, Pokharna 20.

Pilài rite,—Ahir 20.

Pilgrimages,-Majhwir 45.

Pipal tree, sacred,—Aheriya 13: Bhar 9.

Pipes of leaves,-Korwa 18.

Piyala rite,-Dhuniya 3.

Planets, worship-, Gujarati Brâhman 15. Pole, worship of—, Nat 2. Pollution, ceremonial,—Aheriya 10.

Polyandry—Alûr 15: Gûjar 7: Introduction VI., 4: Jût 26: Lohâr 10.

Polygamy—Bhar 5, 6;
Bhuiyār 6; Introduction
VI., 15; Majhwār 10;—
result of hard labour—
Kol 6

Prabha, worship of , Kanjar 14.

Prajapati, worship of—, Kumhar 5.

Prajapatya, rite,—Agnihotri 2. Priests, tribal—, Majhwar 45. Primogeniture,—Majhwar

27.

Prostitution,—Gandbarb 3: Tawaif 9.

Puberty ceremonies,— Bhuiya 13: Bind 6: Ghasiya 13.

Punkâ balana, rite,—Kahâr 11.

Pûrabi Devi, worship of—, Barhai 4.

Purification,-Dángi 10.

Pyåråji, worship of—, Gdjar 11 : Ját 31.

Q

Qazi Sahib ki chauki, rite, -Diwana 3.

R

Râdha Krishna, worship of —, Bundela 3.

Ráê Dâs, a religious reformer,—Chamâr 18.

Rahu, worship of—, Dusadh 14: Jushi 4.

Râja Ben, legend of—, Thâru
7.

Râja Chandol, worship of —, Kharwâr 15: Korwa 12: Majhwâr 43. Raja Lakhan, worship of-, Kharwar 15 : Kol 18.

Râjput tribes, tribal titles derived from—, Introduction IV., 9.

Raksel, worship of-, Kol 18.

Raksha, worship of—, Thâru
7.

Râma Râmchandra } worship of

-, Gond 9 : Kachhwaha 5 :

Lodha 5 : Sahariya 7 : Sejwari 6.

Râm Thâkur, worship of—, Pâsi 14.

Randeo, worship of-, Jat 31.

Ratan Pânrê, worship of—, Majhwar 47.

Ratináth, worship of..., Thiru 34.

Ratjaga, rite,-Aheriya 8.

Rats, used as food,—Beldår 3: Bind 11.

Recitation, religious—,Kuiri 10. Relationship—Chero 9: Dharkir 4: Kol 10: Korwa S: Majhwar 84.

Rikheswar, worship of-, Tharu 7.

Rings used in worship-, Majhwar 89.

River, tribal names derived from rivers—,Introduction IV., 2: worship—, Dom 40: Kewat 4: see Ganges worship.

Roads, goddess of—, Golaparah 1.

Rope worship-Nat 2.

8

Sadalu Lâl, worship of— Musaliar 24,

Sahjādi, worship of—, Dafīli 7.

Sahjamal, worship of-Aheriya 11.

Sakat chauth, feast,-Barwar 9.

Sakrāi Māta, worship of—, Khandelwal 4.

Sal, a sacred tree,—Agariya 8.

Sålivåhana legend of,—Bais 5.

Salutation, modes of—, Babeliya 9 : Bânsphor 9 : Barwâr 12 : Baser 8 : Beriya 7 : Bhangi 61 : Bhar 10 : Bhuiya 28 : Bhuiyar 22 : Bind 11: Dhamk 9:
Dharkar 12: Golapürab 18:
Jät 32: Kachhwaha 5:
Khatik 8: Kol 24: Korwa
13: Majhwar 58: Oswal
9: Panka 15: Ramaiya 8.
Saini, worship of—, Dom 51.
Sairi Devi

Sâyari Devi worship of—, Chamir 17: Chero 18: Kalwâr 11, 12: Parahiya 14.

Samai, worship of—, Bânsphor 8 : Bhar 10 : Dom 31: Kumhār 5 : Thāru 32.

Sânsmal, legend of-, Sânaiya 1.

Sânwar, worship of—Sahariya 7. Saraswati, worship of—, Kathak 4.

Sårda, worship of-, Bhåt 8.

Sarwar Lakhi, worship of—, Bhoksa 10

Sati, worship of—, Bais 8: Banjara 8: Kandu 5: Patwa 6.

Sat Jug ki Kursi,—Bhangi

Satvåi, worshipof—, Lohar 3 : Oswal 7.

Satya Nârâyan, worship of-, Bind 9.

Saubhari Rishi, legend of-, Ahiwilsi 1.

Sâwant, worshipof—, Thiru

Säwant Sinh, worship of—, Jät 31.

Sayyid, worship of—, Basor 7: Beriya 6: Kāchhi 8: Pāsi 14.

Sayyid Hasan, worship of—, Bhand. 2.

Sayyid Mard, worship of-, Kachhi 8.

Sayyid Mohsin Khân, worship of-, Lodha 5.

Scapegoat, the—Kol 18: Majhwar 53.

Sen Bhagat, worship of-, Nái 1: sept the, Introduction IV., I3, Sewanriya, worship of—. Bhuiyar 16: Biyar 16.

Shahid Shahid Mard worship of—,Basor 7: Pasi 14.

Shah Madar, legend of-, Madari 8.

Shaikh Saddu, legend of—, Bhangi 58: Jat 31: Saiqalgar 2: Teli 5.

Shaikh Sana, worship of-, Gandhi 1.

Shaikh Zainuddin, worship of-Gandhi 1.

Shaving—Baranwill 2 : Dhobi 6 : Kalwir 8 : Korwa 11 : Majhwir 35.

Sickle-worship of-Pasi 14.

Siloman Bâba, worship of —,Kubir 11.

Sing Bonga, worship of -, Kol 17.

Singursâl, worship of-, Kandu 5.

Sinha Bâba, worship of-, Bâwariya 11.

Sister's son, respect for—, Bhuiyar 18: Dom 30: Kel 13.

Sita, worship of-, Kachliwalia 5.

Sitala worship of—Chero 13:
Dhângar 12: Gòlapūrab
12: Gòjar 11: Halwāi 5:
Kāchhi 8: Kasera 4:
Kbatīk 7: Kori 4: Kumhār 5: Kumi 12: Mallāh
7: Mārwāri 14: Murāo 3:
Pāsi 1: Soeri.

Sitârâm, worship of-Majhwâr 39.

Sites, religious, tribal names derived from—Introduction IV., 4. Siva, worship of—, Ramaiya. 7; see Mahâdeva.

Siva Bhaiya, worship of—, Banjara 8,

Sivana, worship of—,Ghasiya 18.

Small-pox goddess; see Måta, Sitala.

Snake, legend, of—Agarwâla 1: Bachgoti 2:—pipe fetish, Nat 43:—worship, Agarwâla 1, 8: Baheliya 8: Bais 8: Bâjgi 7: Bânsphor 8: Bhil 14: Chero 6: Gindauriya: Jât 31: Kharwât 17: Kol 18: Lohâr 8: Taga 4.

Sokha Bâba, worship of—, Barai 6 : Tamboli 4.

Somiya worship of—Sahariya 7.

Sonmat, Sonwat worship of—
Thâru 52.

Sorcery,— Khairwa 6 : Thâru 80, 47.

Soul, theory of—Majhwar 48: Thâru 28.

Srâvana, legend of,—Gangaputra 3. Succession, Agariya 12:
Bhuiya 10: Bhuiyar 11:
Biyar 8: Dhangar 8: Gandharb 7: Ghasiya 10:
'Iraqi 6: Kharwar 10:
Kol 11: Majhwar 26,

Sugar cane, unlucky,—, Raghni ansi 1.

Sunstroke, caused by Bhavani, Dharkar 10.

Sun worship—Baheliya 8; Chamêr 17; Gindauriya; Kalwêr 12; Kûndu 5; Kâthi 2; Kharwêr 15; Kot 17; Lehêr 8; Majhwêr 39; Nimbârak.

Supa Bhagat Supach Bhagat Arakh 3: Balahar 3: Bansphor 1: Basor 1: Bhangi 5: Dom 13.

Surāj Deo, Sūrajnārāyan } worship of —Chamār 17 : Gond 10. Surdhir, worship of—Kurmi

12. Surgery, rural—Nat 36.

Sword worship,-Baiswar 8.

T

Taboos,—Agariya 28 : Barwâr 11 : Basor 8 : Bhar 10 : Bhuiya 28 : Bhuiyâr 21 : Cherc 17 : Dângi 13 : Vor, IV.

Dhângar 15 : Golapûrab 15 : Kâchhi 10 : Kahâr 12 : Kalwâr 14: Kapariya 10: Khairwa 7 : Kharwâr 2 £ 19 : Kol 22 : Majhwår 51 : Panka 15 : Parahiya, 16, Taka uthåoni rite, —Koiri 4. Tambi, worship of—, Khandelwål 4.

Tanks, -Bhar 3.

Tanning, -Chamar 27.

Tânsen, a saint, -- Tawâif 10.

Tattooing, Agariya 22: Aheriya 13: Bhuiya 23: Bhuiya 23: Bhuiya 19: Bind 11: Biyâr 19: Chero 15: Dhângar 15: Dharkâr 11: Dom 87: Gond 4: Majhwâr 2: Musahar 82: Nat 44.

Tejaji, worship of—, Jat 31. Telhardi, rite—, Agarwâia 6.

Teliya masân, worship of ---, Musahar 2,

Terha Deva, worship of ---, Chamâr 17.

Territorial titles of castes, Introduction Chapter IV., para. 1,

Thâkurdeo worship of -, Thâkurji J Gandharb 8: Gond 10: Kurmi 18.

Thieves' argot,—Barwar 17: Bâwariya 5: Hâbûra 18: Qalandar 5: Nat 50.

Tholiya, worship of—, Sahariya 7.

Threshold, respect for-, Korwa 19.

Tiger, ghost,—Dharkar 11: superstitions regarding —, Kharwar 17.

Tiled houses, unlucky,— Ragbubansi 1. Timangari, rite,—Bâri 3. Tirthankara worship,— Oswâl 8.

Toe ring, respect for-Dharkar 12.

Tools, worship of -, Thathera 6.

Totemism,—Agariya 3: Baghel 2: Baiswâr 2: Bhangi
11, 23: Bhuiya 4: Bhuiyâr
2: Biyâr 1: Châi 1: Chero
6: Dhângar 2: Dhavkâr 1:
Dhuniya 2: Ghasiya 2:
Kâchhi 1: Kalhans: Kanjar
18: Kathiyâra 2: Khangâr
3; Kharwâr 1: Majhwâr
3, 49: Musahar 21: Nat
11, 37: Parahiya 14: Sahariya 2.

Totemistic tribal titles,-Introduction IV., 12.

from—, Introduction, IV., 5.

Tree,—marriage—,Ahîr 20:
Gadariya 6: Tawîif 5:
spirits,—Musahar 25: Thâru 29: worship,—Agariya
24: Agarwîla 9: Bânsphor
5: Bhot 5: Bhuiya 25:
Dângi 11: Dhângar 10:
Dharkâr 10: Dhuniya 2:
Dom 40: Gaur Râjput 4:
Gindauriya: Golapûrab 12:
Kalwâr 12: Kapariya 9:
Kharwâr 12: Kurmi 10
Lohâr 3, 8: Majhwâr 6
Nat 43: Panka 12.

Tribal nomenclature, -Introduction, Chapter IV. Tribes, ancient, tribal names derived from—, Introduction, IV., 7.

Tulja Devi, worship of-, Banjāra 8. Turkin, a ghost—, Majhwâr 40.

Turnip, prohibited food,— Agarwâls 10

Twins, propitiation for birth of-, Aberiya 6.

U

Unmarried people, contempt for ... Kol 5. Upanāyana, rite,—Brāhman 23 : Gujarāti Brāhman 21.

٧

Vahir nisarana rite,—Brahman 19.

Válmíki, a saint,—Aheriya 12 : Baheliya 1.

Varuna, worship of—, Mallah 7.

Vatsa, legend of-Bachgoti.

Vena Raja—Tháru 7.

Village, form of-, Tharu 41.

Village gods, worship of,— Dom 84: see Dih, Deohâr.

Vindhyabâsini Devi, worship of—, Ahîr 23 : Bânsphor 8 : Bhangi 31 : Chamâr 17 : Kanjar 15 : Nat 18.

Visali, worship of—, Kachhi S. Viswakarma, worship of— Barhai 4: Lohar 2: Thawai.

W

Weeping in salutation, Majhwar 58.

Well worship, Baheliya 5: Chamar 17: Habûra 6: Kachhi 8: Lodha 5: Orb 3: Thâru 33: see Kuânwâla.

Wheel, worship of -, Kumhar 5. Widowhood, period of-, Kol. 8.

Widow marriage,-Agariya 10 : Aheriya 5 : Ahîr 16: Baheliya 4: Baiswar 2: Bansphor 4: Barai 5: Barhai 3: Bâri 3: Barwar 8: Basor 3 : Bhand 2 : Bhar 5: Bhel 8: Bhuiya 8: Bhuivår 8: Bind 4: Biyar 5: Chamar 8: Chero 8: Dângi 5: Dhångar 7: Dhånuk 3; Dharkar 3: Dusadh 8; Gadariya 4: Ghasiya 7: Gond 7: Gûjar 8. Introduction VI., II: Jat 27: Kahar 9 : 'Iraqi 4: Kathivåra 2: Kewat 3: Kharwar 7: Khatik 3: Kol 8: Kori

3: Korwa 7: Kurmi 9: Lohâr 10: Luniya 4: Majhwâr! 24: Mallâh 5: Musahar 13: Nat 13: Pauka 5: —, compulsory,—Kol. 6.

Witchcraft, — Banjāra 4:
Bhoksa 11: Bhuiya 27:
Bhuiyār 20: Biyār 20:
Chero 16: Dom 37: Golapūrab 14: Irāqi 12:
Kāchhi 9: Kahār 12: Kanjar 17: Majhwār 53:
Musahar 31: Rāji 13:
Thāru 47.

Wives on trial,—Ghasiya 5.
Women, diet of—, Kol 24:
—excluded from betel gardens—Barai 7: status
of—, Majhwâr 59.

Y

Year, burning of-, Biyar 17: Ghasiya 2.

Z

Zâhir dîwan worship of-

Aheriya 11: Balâi 3: Banjâra 18: Bâwariya 8: Bhangi 58: Chamâr 17: Hâbûra 10: Jât 31: Kathi yâra 4: Kori 4: Nat 4: Orh 3: Rahwâri 3: and see Guga. Zainuddin, worship of—, Jât 31.

